Seating is on a first-come, first-served basis, and tickets are available in Wheelwright Box Office.

Raspberry began to write the Potomac Watch in 1966 while a reporter with The Washington Post. His columns were usually controversial, as Raspberry exposed corruption and faulted city leaders, both black and white. Dubbed "the Lone Ranger of columnists," his editors were never quite sure what Raspberry would write about. Raspberry continued to comment on education,

Wheelwright Passport features drama of kinship and racial conflict

The 1991-1992 Wheelwright Passport season will feature The Acting Company's production of Blood Knot Sunday, Feb. 2 at 3 p.m. in Wheelwright Auditorium. The performance is open to the public. Tickets are $12 and $9 for students.

Blood Knot explores the relationship between two brothers living in a one-room shanty near Port Elizabeth, South Africa. One brother, Morrie, is light skinned and has had some education. But rather than live with the fear and uncertainty of trying to pass for a white man, Morrie ignores temptation and lives with his dark skinned brother, Zach. In contrast to his brother, the dark skinned Zach has no education. Zach struggles with his poverty-stricken life and works long hours as a watchman where he faces bigotry and racism every day.

The brothers write to a pen pal advertised in the newspaper. In return, the woman sends a picture with her note. Upon discovering that Ethel is white, Morrie wants to have nothing to do with her. Zach wants her but can not have her. It is masochism and revenge that make Zach insist that his brother meet her. Morrie is frightened at the charade concocted by Zach. Eventually it becomes clear that Zach envies the lightness of his brother's skin. Ethel's letters creates a rift between the brothers which tears at their blood tie.

Blood Knot is written by South African playwright Athol Fugard, author of The Road to Mecca, Master Harold and the Boys, and A Lesson From Aloes. Drama critic Jack Kroll in Newsweek compared the author to Eugene O'Neill, "whom he has always resembled in the savage tenderness of his Blood Knot was first performed in 1961 at a private theater in South Africa. Since its premiere, the play has been performed at theaters around the world, including an acclaimed 1985 Broadway production that featured the author.

Blood Knot is funded, in part, by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts through the Southern Arts Federation, of which Coastal is a member. The Campus Union is a supporter of this program.

Ticket reservations are accepted in the Wheelwright Box Office, and may be charged to MasterCard or VISA. ~
