Student Council Elects Representatives, Cheerleaders

A student body assembly was held on the morning of September 29, prior to opening the polls for the election of Student Council representatives and cheerleaders, and to vote for or against adoption of the proposed amendment to the constitution of the student government. Bennett James, Jr., president of the student body presided over this meeting.

The candidates for class representatives and for cheerleaders were introduced. Their campaign speeches varied in length and content as they outlined their qualifications for the various offices.

Faculty Additions

Rolph B. Strader, instructor of Economics, Economic History, Introduction to Business, and Accounting, comes to Coastal Carolina after a successful career in the Army.

Mr. Strader attended the University of West Virginia for a year and then graduated from West Point. After his retirement from the service five years ago, he attended George Washington University in Washington, D.C. where he got a Master's Degree in Business Administration.

He and Mrs. Strader lived in Falls Church and Alexandria, Virginia before moving to Conway. They have a son and one grandson.

A new addition to the faculty of Coastal Carolina is Mr. Kirk Phares, the Bio-

Registration Exceeds Expectation

Tuesday, September 8, 1964, approximately 175 students enrolled for classes at Coastal Carolina. Mr. Dick Singleton was pleased with the number of students that registered to attend this fall. Of the 175 students, 120 are Freshman and 55 are Sophomores. The Freshman class is almost twice the size of last year's Freshman and Sophomore classes combined.

The classrooms are now filled to capacity. Last year's history classes were almost small enough to be held in the professor's office, but this year Mr. Branham has to import extra desks to accommodate the large classes.

Biology labs are now real labs compared to the meetings of eight people in last year's lab.

The earphones have been split in the language labs so that every student may use one.

Much to Mr. Maddox's dismay, the English 21 class is being held in the largest classroom because of the unexpected amount of students.

The lounge, once sufficient room, now requires reservations a week in advance. (Wouldn't the Student Union building come in handy?)
From The Biddy's Quill

"The year before last, i thought bitterly as I walked up the steps of Conway High School, "I was going to a real college, not a rinky-dink one."

Those were naturally the bitter words of one who had been denied the opportunity to go off to college.

But...

The first person I met was the ever-smiling Mrs. Allen, who tried to help me get into college here. Then I encountered the first of many people who changed my mind and transformed me into a willing and proud student of Coastal Carolina.

There was Mr. Kirkland, then acting director, who made many trips of Columbia on behalf of many of us to insure our college acceptance.

With the fall semester of 1963 came the completion of our present building. One cannot express the feeling of pride we felt as we walked through the halls for the first time. We were at last in our own building. With the new building came new professors and a new director, Mr. Singleton. Mr. Singleton, the members of the Board of Directors, and the citizens of Horry County have worked many long and hard years to see Coastal Carolina become what it is today. First a dream, then a fledgling extension of the College of Charleston, then came its struggling independent days and now The University of South Carolina Coastal Carolina Center.

Fellow students, this is no rinky-dink institution. It is an excellent school with the most modern lab equipment and one of the best trained administrative staffs in the state.

When you think of Coastal don't just shrug and think of some building in the woods between Conway and Myrtle Beach. Be proud you are a student here and work for your best interests as well for Coastal's, which is higher education.

As a fellow student and an editor of Chanticleer, I should like to take this opportunity to welcome all of our new students and faculty members and to all of those who are returning from last year I should like to say, "Welcome back."

Martha Alsbrook

My Fellow Students,

Certainly, one of the saddest events of the past few months was the death of Halsey Taylor. As all Sophomores know, all Freshmen are sure to soon learn, Halsey Taylor was a mystery writer for the CHANTICLEER during the fall '63 and spring '64 semesters. Halsey Taylor died when his identity was made known. I salute Mr. Bill Thomas for a job well done.

Mr. Thomas, as Halsey Taylor, once wrote, "Doubtless, my one-sided political views and my acute criticism of personages would cause ill will to be cast upon me" (the CHANTICLEER, Nov. 27, 1963). Yes, perhaps, his views were a little one-sided, perhaps his criticisms a little sharp at times, but also in the November edition of the CHANTICLEER, Mr. Thomas praised such men as Bob Hope, and even Conway's own Steve Gordon. Halsey had a good habit of placing criticism where it was needed and praise where it was deserved.

I repeat that Halsey Taylor died when his identity was made public. Yes, I think that Halsey, the off-spring of a water fountain, died, but I believe, also, that his spirit continued to live on past his death.

I was once approached with the proposition of taking up the torch, and carrying on with the writings of Halsey Taylor. I have only great respect for Halsey, and I was honored at this proposition, but let's allow Halsey to rest in peace. Instead, I would like to have the honor of continuing Halsey's column but under the pen name of Martha Alsbrook. Of course, I can only continue the column if the CHANTICLEER will publish it. I, therefore, beg of the CHANTICLEER just enough space that the spirit of Halsey Taylor might live on to immortality.

There are several reasons why I have chosen the pen name of Martha Alsbrook but, unfortunately, I cannot give any of these reasons without giving clues to my true identity.

Halsey and I agree completely on many issues, though instead of being classified, politically, as a conservative, I might be classified more as a moderate. Of course, no one can view the steady infringement of our government into our personal lives without some alarm. It was with great pleasure that I recently received the news that the "Public Accommodation" section of the "Civil Rights" bill had been declared unconditional as pertaining to a restaurant which did not deal in interstate commerce. If the people of today had a little more "old fashioned" love and understanding in their hearts, there would be no need for a so-called 'Civil Rights' bill.

With the bitter differences between Republicans and Democrats this election year, I foresee a hard-fought, yet interesting race ahead. If I am allowed to continue as Martha Alsbrook, I will continue my comments on national politics. If I am lucky enough to be given a place in the CHANTICLEER, I will give my prediction as to whether it will be "Goldwater '64" or "All the Way, with L. B. J."

Unmarried and always available,

Editor's Award

Each year the staff of Chanticleer presents an award to the person who has made the most meaningful and valuable contribution to the betterment of Coastal Carolina. The first annual Editor's Award, a commemorative plaque, was presented to Mr. E. M. Singleton last April.

COASTAL BOASTS

Fro the benefit of those new students who are not yet familiar with CHANTICLEER'S devious means there will be elected, for each issue a young lass from among the co-eds at Coastal Carolina, a recipient of the honor of CHANTICLEER'S Pertelote. As most should already know, Chaucer's infamous rooster, Chanticleer, was fortunate to have as his helpmate the lovely hen, Pertelote. Selection of the Pertelotes for this and succeeding issues will be made by members of the CHANTICLEER staff.

No stranger to the Coastal Carolina family, even though a member of the Freshman Class, Ruth has made her presence known to all in the tradition of a real Coastal vet. This is to be expected, however, owing to the fact that Ruth served her apprenticeship here last year while taking Freshman English courses.

The way in which Ruth has pitched in and made newcomers feel at home has been vastly appreciated by the faculty and administration of Coastal. To this date, Pertelote has not been caught without her ever-present smile and cheerful word.

One of the candidates for the office of Freshman Representative to the Student Council, Ruth has shaken the walls of Coastal with some of her campaign antics.

Welcome, Ruth Ellen, to the coveted bevy of CHANTICLEER'S lovelies.

In this first edition of the '64-'65 school year, CHANTICLEER is happy to announce that one of the more enjoyable traditions begun in past years will be continued through the present session. Dear Dr. Mavillicent,

My problem is very severe as far as I am concerned. I am constantly followed by a certain girl whose intentions I cannot quite understand. Everywhere I go—there she is.

Sometimes when I’m sitting in the library, I feel a draft on my neck. One day I happened to turn around and look to see from where the draft was coming and I found HER breathing down my neck.

Something has got to be done!

Duke of Myrtle Beach

Dear Miss Oink—I mean Lundy,

I have noticed you around school and have had your problem brought to my attention. You have a misperception as to why people say ‘oink-oink’ when they see you. It is not because of your unsightly, bashed in nose, but because of the unbearable stench that you carry around with you.

Sincerely,

LeAnne Lundy

Dear Dr. M.,

As I was hobbling down the street yesterday taking my cane for its daily exercises, I came upon a little four-year old boy screaming uncontrollably on the sidewalk. When I calmed him down and asked him what was wrong, he said, “I can’t do any of the things the big boys do.”

Being of a benvolent, understanding, sweet, generous, kind, although somewhat aged nature, and having a grandfather complex, I would like to help in somehow. What do you suggest I do?

Mr. Callie F.

Dear Mr. C. F.,

I suggest you sit down and cry with him.

Dear Dr. M.,

I would like to see something done about the modern housewives who complain about their husband’s businesses taking up so much of their time. The thing that made me start thinking about this so much was the following statement made by Mrs. Peggy Goldwater, “I would rather have Barry at home in Arizona than in the White House.”

Gordan Fritz

Dear Mr. Fritz,

I am very sympathetic—with Mrs. Goldwater. I also would rather have Barry at home in Arizona than in the White House.

Golf Comes To Coastal

After the Grand Strand golf tournament which was played September 17-19, we were lucky enough to get a few minutes of some of the players’ time for interviews.

The first interview was conducted September 17 at the Dunes Club. We chose one particular man for our interview because he looked completely torn to shreds and as if he had just been through Hades. After being introduced, Mr. Eagle Hook, was asked how he and his partners had fared that day.

“Actually, I enjoyed the tournament very much. I especially found pleasure in the commendable companionship of two of my partners. My third partner, that English fellow from Coastal Carolina, unfortunately had a very bad cold which proved to be a hindrance to our game. Inevitably he would pull out his handkerchief and use it as one of was about to make a shot. Usually nose blowing doesn’t bother anyone, but the flocks of geese that were attracted by his honking found us delightful to chew on. Other than this small interruption, the game was very nice.”

The second interview was made Sept. 18 at the Pine Lakes International. We happened to pick a man who played with Mr. Hook’s partner the previous day, Mr. Toe Bogie. When asked how he had enjoyed the game, Mr. Bogie replied, “The game itself was pretty much fun, but that darned man from Coastal Carolina sure had us all fooled. Every time his ball went into the rough, he would have an unusually good shot out. We didn’t discover until near the end of the game that he had been teeing his ball up on little mounds of pine straw.”

The third interview was Sept. 19 at the Surf Golf and Beach Club. Mr. Wedge Park’s rather washed-out looking man, was kind enough to let us get his impression of the game.

“This has been a very eventful game, if nothing else. There was man playing as my partner who says he teaches English at Coastal Carolina. This man is an excellent driver—as far as a golf ball is concerned. With a golf cart, it is a different story, which reminds me that I must tell the Pro that the golf cart we used is taking a bath in the lake on the fourth hole. If you’ll excuse me, I’ve got to go dump the water out of my golf bag and change into some dry clothes. Also, the English professor gave me a new idea for teens—turtles!!”

We are very proud to have such a well known and well respected (?) golfer in our school.
Student Council Announces Plans

At the student assembly held on September 29th, Bennett James, Jr., announced two, forthcoming events to be sponsored by the Student Council. On October 22nd, a Faculty-Parent's Reception will be held at Coastal Carolina. This will give the parents of students at Coastal an opportunity to meet and talk with the various instructors, and to inspect the facilities offered at the school. Invitations will be mailed out soon to faculty members, parents, students, and representatives from the various communities served by Coastal Carolina.

In addition to the Reception the Student Council is making plans for a costume party on Halloween night. The admission for the Halloween party will be either a costume or a quarter donation. The place and time will be announced later.

A Christmas and a May Day dance are also in the plans.

The Student Council promises to be very active during the coming year. Nine promising new members have recently been elected. These new members along with able officers elected last spring will provide the machinery for an efficient student government during the '64 and '65, under the expert supervision of Mr. E. R. Kirkland.

Get Acquainted Party Held

On Thursday evening, September 17, a get-acquainted party was held. This party was primarily to give the students of Coastal Carolina a chance to become better acquainted. The assembly room was tastefully decorated in a blue color scheme. A juke box was provided for entertainment and refreshments were served. Our thanks for this goes to the Student Council.

We certainly appreciated the work that the student council put into the party and hope that our get-acquainted party was the first in a series of its successful parties!
The slashing Gamecocks' spurs have begun to dull by the loss of Jim Johnson and Steve Cox due to injuries. Steve Cox, receiving his injury in the Duke vs. Carolina game and Jim Johnson during practice, both boys are out for the entire season.

The fighting, scrapping Gamecocks have again shown up their bitterest rival, the "Clemson Tigers".

The roaring Tigers are becoming purring kittens! The highly rated Tigers refused to play. Duke one of the top ranking football squads on the Atlantic Coast, but the ill Favored Gamecocks, being rated as one of the weakest teams in the conference tangled with the Blue Devils, holding them to a 9-9 tie.

Coastal Carolina looks as though it is going to do pretty good for itself this year in basketball. We have most of the main string returning from last year. They are: Worth Dudley, Alex Todd, Jimbo McLaurin, Lindsay Roach and Beth Williams. These boys did a fine job last year. We went into the tournaments in first place but lost out to Lancaster.

The Coastal Carolina team will have a better ball squad this year with more height, speed, ability, and depth on the bench. A ball club is only as good as its depth on the bench. We have quite a number of new boys who are going to play this year. One boy will add height and strength to the team in Morgan Gilbreath who is 6'4".

Other new additions are E. H. Elliott, Danny Hammond and Richard Hawes. Each of these boys have had high school basketball experience.

Basketball practice will begin around the first or middle of November. The exact date will be posted later. Also, there will be a meeting of any boys wishing to go out for basketball before the official practice sessions begin. Mr. Singleton, our Director, will call this meeting.

Most of the boys back from last year are beginning to play some in the Conway High School Gym. Anyone interested should get in touch with Jimbo McLaurin or Worth Dudley to find out the time and dates of these practice sessions.

We are very proud of the fact that our Coastal cheerleading squad will consist of six instead of the usual four. Three of these girls will come from the Sophomore class and the remaining three will come from the Freshman class. The reason for this is to insure Coastal Carolina of some experience in the field of cheerleading next year.

We have more students this year and we hope to have a lot more school spirit. Please support these girls and our team.

Attend the games and let everyone know that you are proud of your COASTAL CAROLINA!
