Transition team to begin work

USC President John Palms has formed a transition team of USC and Coastal Carolina College officials to identify and study issues relating to Coastal leaving the USC System.

The group was formed within 24 hours of the Board of Trustees' June 24 decision to support President Palms' recommendation that Coastal become a free-standing, state-supported institution.

Co-chaired by Coastal Interim Chancellor Ron Ingle and USC Acting Vice President for Academic Affairs and Provost George Reeves, the team will develop a timetable and identify which USC services will continue and which services Coastal will assume.

According to Ingle, the team will investigate issues such as awarding degrees; assuming administrative functions, including payroll and purchasing; maintaining computer links to the mainframe in Columbia for faculty research; and remaining part of the USC library USCAN cataloging system.

Ingle expressed optimism about the work of this group and the outlook for the future. "This will be an exciting time for

Transition Q & A

In these times of change, nearly every member of our campus community has asked questions about the future of our institution. In an effort to keep lines of communication open, and to keep faculty and staff informed of the latest developments, Transition Q and A will become a regular feature of On Campus. Please submit your questions to the PR office, EMS 104. Responses will be printed in up-coming issues. Although questions will be printed anonymously, please include your name in case there is a need to clarify a particular point prior to publication. ~

USC names new provost

USC President John M. Palms has selected Dr. James C. Moeser, dean of the College of Arts and Architecture at The Pennsylvania State University, as vice president for academic affairs and provost at USC, effective Sept. 1, 1992. The provost is the chief academic officer and second-ranking officer of the USC system.

Coastal hosts Seventh Annual New Principals' Academy

Coastal will host the Seventh Annual New Principals' Academy Sunday, July 26 to Friday, July 31. Approximately 40 new principals from South Carolina are expected to attend.

The New Principals' Academy is a program designed exclusively for first-year principals, offering a curriculum to help them polish present skills and to acquire new ones needed to handle the demands of their new jobs. Through the academy, participants form a network for sharing resources and ideas.

The academy gives participants an opportunity to discuss issues and concerns with other first-year principals, veteran principals, and experts in the field. Each participant is paired with an experienced principal who serves as a mentor. Follow-up meetings throughout the year provide training in the leadership and management skills essential to success in the principalship as well as a forum for exchanging ideas.

The five-day summer institute will include several sessions. Some of the activities and seminars include: school climate and culture, budget, finance, curriculum, supervision, and leadership.

The New Principals' Academy is sponsored by the South Carolina Leadership Academy, Office of Professional Development, and the South Carolina Department of Education.

Professors receive Fulbright grants for study in South America

James and Linda Henderson have been awarded fellowship grants from the J. William Fulbright Foreign Scholarship Board and the U.S. Information Agency for a year in Colombia, South America. The Hendersons will lecture and complete research in Bogotá, Colombia during the 1992-1993 academic year.

The Hendersons are two of approximately 1,800 United States grantees who will travel abroad for the 1992-1993 academic year under the Fulbright Program. Individuals are selected as Fulbright recipients on the basis of academic and professional qualifications, plus their ability and willingness to share ideas and experiences with people of diverse cultures.

At Universidad Pedagógica Nacional and Universidad Pedagógica de Tunja, James Henderson will conduct graduate seminars in 20th century Colombian history and the political evolution of Colombia in the 20th century. He also will conduct faculty workshops on problems of contemporary Colombian society and give conferences on political philosophy.

At Universidad Javeriana and Universidad Externado, Linda Henderson will present conferences on accounting theory, consolidations, taxation, United States accounting practices, and joint ventures, as well as faculty workshops on accounting theory. She also will consult on development of accounting programs at the university level. The Hendersons will lecture in Spanish.

James Henderson joined the Coastal faculty in 1986. He earned a Ph.D. in Latin American history from Texas Christian University in 1972. In addition to Coastal, he has taught at Grambling

State University. The lecturing/research grant is Henderson's fourth Fulbright experience - he travelled to India in 1979 as part of a Fulbright-Hays Group Study Abroad grant, directed a Fulbright-Hays Group Study Abroad grant to Colombia in 1985, and traveled to an international meeting in Colombia in 1991 with a Fulbright travel stipend. He was in the United States Peace Corps in Colombia from 1966 to 1968.

Linda Henderson joined the Coastal faculty in 1986. She earned a doctorate of business administration from Louisiana Tech University in 1989. In addition to teaching at Coastal, she has taught at Grambling State University and the University of Los Andes, in Bogotá, Colombia. She worked in the U.S. and Colombian Tax Departments, Price Waterhouse, in Bogotá, Colombia, from 1982 to 1983. She was in the United States Peace Corps in Colombia from 1966 to 1968.

The Hendersons and their five children are leaving for South America July 15; they will be in Colombia for 12 months.

The Fulbright Program was established in 1946 under Congressional legislation introduced by former U.S. Sen. J. William Fulbright of Arkansas. The program is designed to increase mutual understanding between the people of the United States and people of other countries. Approximately 5,000 grants are awarded each year to students, teachers and scholars in the United States to study, teach and conduct research around the world, and to foreign nationals to engage in similar activities in the United States. ~

HGTC and Coastal to provide vanpool for commuter

A vanpool/commuter program has been organized for students of Horry-Georgetown Technical College and Coastal Carolina College who live in the Georgetown/Andrews area.

The Coastal Rapid Public Transit Authority (CRPTA) van will provide round trip transportation, five days a week, beginning Aug. 17. The route begins in the Georgetown/Andrews area and follows Highway 701 to the Conway campuses. Students pay $1 daily. In order to keep fares at a reasonable level, a minimum of seven students must ride in the 14 passenger van. Seats will be available on a first-come, first-served basis. If the number of paying passengers falls below seven, CRPTA will assist in recruiting enough passengers to meet the full ridership level.

Students will arrive in time for 9 a.m. classes, and depart no later than 2 p.m. each day. Vans may depart before 2 p.m., depending on passengers' needs. The service is offered for students who will enroll in courses or programs not offered at the Georgetown campuses of the two institutions.

Georgetown Mayor Tom Rubillo initiated the vanpool idea with the assistance of CRPTA executive director Lee Burner. Robert Squatriglia at Coastal, and Gary Davis at HGTC, will act as liaisons between the two schools and CRPTA.

For more information on becoming a passenger or driver, call Bryan England at the Georgetown campus of HGTC at 546-8406. ~

Prehistoric corn found in Georgetown County

The first reliable date on prehistoric maize (corn) was recently obtained on charred samples recovered from a test excavation on a plantation, located on the east side of the Waccamaw River near Georgetown.

While digging about 14 inches below the surface of a sandy prehistoric site, Jim Michie found an elongated cluster of burned ears of corn. The remains were sent to the University of Tennessee and were identified by Gary Crites. According to Crites, the variety did not have any genetic relationship to earlier varieties, but rather expressed variability which is often seen as an indicator of later genetic development.

Some of the charred samples were sent to Beta Analytic, Inc. for radiocarbon dating. The samples were tested for both C-13 and C-14 which assures a more reliable date. In addition, the samples were subjected to extended counting which reduces the standard deviation. The date is 370 years +/- 60 years Before Present (A.D. 1950). A simple conversion indicates the corn was burned sometime between A.D. 1520-1640.

For some unknown reason remains of prehistoric corn have been elusive for archaeologists who have worked in South Carolina. Not only is this a first for Coastal Carolina, but finding remains of corn and obtaining reliable dates is something unusual for the archaeological community. ~

Real estate appraisal licensing courses offered through GCEC

Coastal has been granted approval from the South Carolina Real Estate Appraisers Board to offer courses that will satisfy the education requirement for appraisal licensing.

Offered through Graduate and Continuing Education, the series of three courses was offered once in the summer beginning June 22 and once in the fall beginning Aug. 24. The courses in each series are L-1: Foundations for Real Estate Appraisal (30 hours), L-2: Real Estate Property Appraisal Methods (30 hours), and L-3: Standards of Professional Practice (15 hours).

Completion of the courses meets the education requirements established by Title XI, Real Estate Appraiser Reform Amendment to FIRREA. In addition to the courses, 2,000 hours of experience must be completed for licensing. The regulations apply to transactions involving federally regulated lenders, which include the majority of residential loans.

Instructor for the courses is Jack Kendree whose teaching specialty areas are real estate and finance. Kendree earned a Ph.D. from the University of South Carolina in 1989 and has been a member of the Coastal faculty since 1985.

Taken separately, L-1: Foundations for Real Estate Appraisal is $300, L-2: Real Property Appraisal Methods is $300, and L-3: Standards of Professional Practice is $200. Tuition for all three courses is $700. Textbooks and handout materials are included in the tuition costs.

Early registration is advised; enrollment is restricted due to space.

For a schedule of class dates and times or more information, call Audrey Garland. ~

Coastal Carolina People

Dennis Wiseman has been appointed by the State Board of Education to a four-year term on the South Carolina Curriculum Review Panel. The panel will conduct field reviews, focus groups, discussions and public hearings to evaluate and strengthen each draft curriculum framework in the eight discipline areas now being developed. Panel members include teachers, administrators, higher education faculty, and other professional educators.

Wiseman also has been selected to serve as a folio reviewer for recognition of social studies teacher education programs by the National Council for the Social Studies (NCSS). Institutions seeking accreditation by the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE) must participate in a folio review process for each teacher education program offered at the institution. The folio review process is conducted by the professional associations recognized by NCAT as representing the individual teacher education program areas at the college.

Linda Hollandsworth has an article, entitled "Understanding Assessment: Guidelines for Utilizing a Qualitative Approach," in the spring 1992 edition of Education. Another article, "English for a Specific Purpose: Hotel Management," has been accepted for publication in the summer 1992 California Teachers of English to Speakers of Other Languages (CATESOL) News. This article is based on the English as a Second Language (ESL) workshops Hollandsworth conducted for the Ministry of Education in Rome, Italy, during January 1992.

Linda Hollandsworth and Jill Sessoms attended the National College Learning Assistance Conference at Fordham University in New York from June 11 through 14. The focus of the conference was "Making the Learning Center a Campus Center."

Beth Haynes was recently elected co-chair of the steering committee to formally organize the Carolinas Economic Association. The steering committee will propose by-laws and nominate a slate of candidates to serve as the first officers of the organization. The association has been meeting at conferences hosted by colleges and universities in the Carolinas since 1987.

Haynes also recently lectured on "Modern China" at the Governor's High School for Government and International Studies in Richmond, Va. ~

Electronic telephone answering system expedites admission information for users

The Admissions Office recently installed an electronic telephone answering system to expedite direct information requested via telephone.

With the new system, telephone inquiries can be handled in a more efficient manner as the system offers a menu to those who call from a touch-tone telephone. Callers will receive direct information quicker and will not have to be transferred unnecessarily. The caller also has the option of being transferred to an admissions counselor where more specific questions can be addressed.

Transition

faculty, staff, and students as we begin to build our own tradition," he said. "The entire campus community will be involved. It will be an open process and everyone will be informed as the team moves ahead."

Ingle cautioned that the Legislature still must approve Coastal's independent status. He anticipates that a bill will be introduced in the next legislative session which begins in January 1993. Information generated by the transition team will be considered by the Legislature when determining the date independence would become effective.

Members of the team from Coastal are: Sally Horner; Janis Chesson; Sally Hare; Edgar Dyer; and Jonathon Shanks, SGA president. They are joined by Jane Jameson, USC's vice president for human resources; Terry Parham, USC's acting general counsel; R.W. Denton, USC's vice president for business and finance; and John Duffy, USC's vice provost for regional campuses and continuing education. A representative from the Coastal Educational Foundation and the Horry County Commission on Higher Education also will help with the transition. ~

Coastal holds minority male teaching institute

African-American males from around the state were on campus for "Crossroads," a summer teaching experience for minority males offered through the South Carolina Center for Teacher Recruitment.

The institute, held the week of June 14 to 20, featured storytelling workshops, teacher career-centered presentations, human relations enrichment exercises and positive role modeling. The conference included practical beginning teaching experiences with younger African-American males in the Smith-Jones Community Center in Conway. Storytellers from Florida directed sessions as did members of the African-American professional community.

Each morning began with stories told by Ajamu Mutima from Gainesville, Fla. Mutima's African attire captivated his audience as he told legendary fables preserved from African culture. The proverbial stories taught not only valuable humanitarian lessons, but the importance of understanding one's history as well. Mutima said his desire to learn more about his heritage began at an early age.

"My grandmother had a great influence on me. When I look back now I see that she was very African. In African culture, women were equal to men and controlled the money in the family. She

Mutima said his grandmother taught him to believe in himself and have self-determination. He said he listened to his grandmother rather than his parents and asked the class, "isn't that the way it always is?"

"Crossroads" was designed to increase participants' respect for and interest in attending college. The conference also highlighted opportunities for African-American males in teaching careers.

A state commission selected 65 rising high school freshmen from around South Carolina to attend the institute. Students who attended "Crossroads" were selected on the basis of their response to an essay, teacher selection, and school and community recommendation. Students were housed in campus dorms. Coastal was selected to host the institute from institutions around the state.

The institute was funded through a $10,000 grant provided by the South Carolina Commission on Higher Education to the Center for Teacher Recruitment at Winthrop College; Coastal provided $5,166 in matching funds.

"Crossroads" was directed by Terita Gusby-McCauley. ~
