Dyer named interim Director of Athletics

Edgar Dyer has been named interim director of athletics at Coastal, effective Aug. 1, according to an announcement by Coastal President Ronald R. Ingle.

Edgar Dyer

Dyer, a professor of politics at Coastal, will replace Dave Blank, who resigned recently as Coastal's director of athletics after accepting a similar position with Drake University in Des Moines, Iowa. A national search for a permanent director of athletics is under way.

A member of the Coastal faculty since 1976, Dyer has served as university counsel since Coastal's independence in 1993 and was interim dean of the College of Humanities and Fine Arts during the 1999-2000 academic year. He has been recognized for distinguished teaching and service to students and was the first recipient of the Horry Telephone Cooperative Distinguished Teacher-Scholar Lecturer Award.

Dyer played basketball at Guilford College on an NAIA Final Four team that included M.L. Carr, former player and coach for the Boston Celtics, and he received Guilford's athletic leadership award in his senior year. An active golfer, he won the 1993 Myrtle Beach Amateur and was Coastal's first women's golf coach.

Wiseman assumes new duties at Coastal

Dennis G. Wiseman, dean of Coastal's College of Education, has been appointed a special assistant to Coastal President Ronald R. Ingle for K-12 collaboration. He has also been named an associate provost, responsible for supervising Coastal's graduate programs.

Wiseman will assume his new duties at the beginning of the fall 2000 semester. Gilbert Hunt, professor of education at Coastal, will serve as interim dean of the College of Education. Charmaine Tomczyk will continue to serve as associate provost and associate vice president for academic affairs.

Wiseman's primary responsibility will be to assist Ingle in setting an institutional agenda outlining the university's commitment to improve K-12 education in South Carolina. "Advancing the quality of our teachers and the quality of our public schools isn't just the responsibility of Coastal's College of Education faculty – it's an institutional responsibility," said Ingle. "Dennis Wiseman has long experience and an excellent record in establishing results-oriented partnerships linking the university and the public schools. In his new position he will recommend areas of cooperation and collaboration which will place Coastal at the forefront of state universities dedicated to helping South Carolina provide the best possible education for its students, from kindergarten through the college level."

Wiseman will also advise the university regarding graduate studies. Coastal currently offers graduate programs in education as well as several cooperative graduate degrees with other universities in South Carolina. "While Coastal is primarily an undergraduate institution, we recognize our responsibility to the region we serve to provide opportunities for postgraduate education," said John Idoux, provost and vice president of Academic Affairs at Coastal.

Wiseman, who joined the Coastal faculty in 1974, earned a bachelor's degree from the University of Indianapolis and a master's degree and Ph.D from the University of Illinois. He has served as dean of Coastal's College of Education since 1982. Wiseman has received Coastal's Faculty Distinguished Teaching

Legislators tour Coastal's building projects

Sen. Luke Rankin and officials from Coastal recently gave Sen. John Drummond, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, a tour of construction projects at Coastal's campus.

In the past two years, appropriations from bond bills passed by the General Assembly have included funding for major construction projects at Coastal such as the Humanities and Fine Arts Building, now under construction, and an athletics facility, which will include a stadium for Coastal's forthcoming football program.

"It's really gratifying to see the results of the investments we have made in education in this part of the state," said Drummond, who is president pro tempore of the senate. "I'm fascinated by the campus here at Coastal and by the stability of the buildings — they're being built to last."

With four major buildings now under construction, the university is adding 30 percent more building space to the campus. The record construction boom will add 232,000 square feet of new building space. In addition to the Humanities and Fine Arts Building, which will be the largest building on campus, structures recently completed and under construction include a residence hall/dining facility, a student health center and a welcome center.

"It's vitally important that the leaders of the state see first-hand how the funds are being invested," said Rankin. "We're very proud of what's happening at Coastal. The state is finally investing in what we need here and helping us to grow."

Coastal offers learning vacations for adults

For adult travelers looking for more than sightseeing and sandy beaches, Coastal offers travel-study programs to 18 foreign countries. The tours emphasize learning, with opportunities for first-hand education about history, culture and customs. On-site lectures, seminars and field experiences provided by faculty escorts and in-country specialists together with "people-to-people" contacts foster an insight and understanding of foreign cultures not available on more conventional tours.

Accommodations are first class, meals are included and groups are small, allowing participants to receive individual attention and make friends. Coastal's groups average 14 participants with some groups as small as eight members, allowing for a close interaction between participants and guides.

Winter 2001 programs will be to Antarctica, Belize, Costa Rica, Egypt, Galapagos Islands and Ecuador, Indonesia, Israel, Italy, Kenya, and South Africa.

Spring 2001 programs will include Belize, China, Costa Rica, Egypt, Galapagos Islands and Ecuador, Greece, Indonesia, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Morocco, South Africa, Spain, and Turkey.

These two-week learning vacations for adults range from $2,000 to $5,000 and include meals, first class accommodations, unique learning experiences, and airfare from the tours' departure cities.

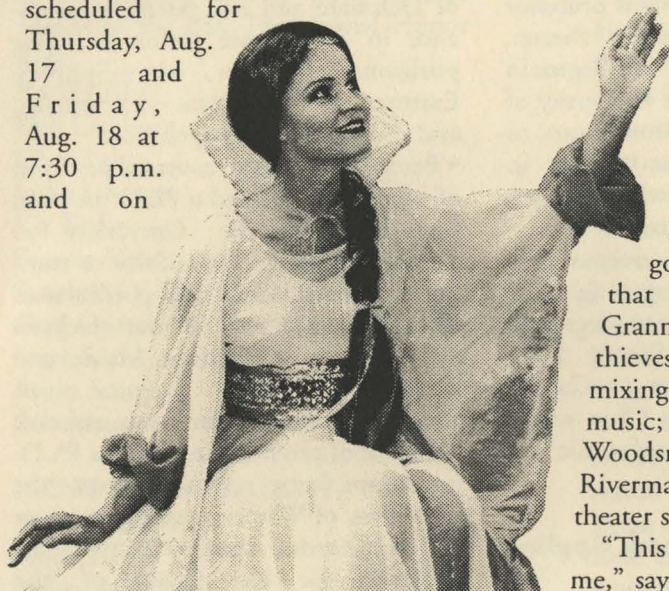

For more information about these programs, contact Peter Balsamo, dean of Coastal's Division of Extended Learning and Public Services at 349-2648 or visit the Web site at: www.coastal.edu/learn.

CCU Theater launches new company with Faybulous premiere

With its first production of the 2000-2001 season, CCU Theater presents two major premieres simultaneously.

The show is Faybulous, a "sing play" for children based on Aesop's Fables. Co-written by Coastal music professor David Bankston and Tony Makarome, a composer and graduate of the Berklee College of Music in Boston, Faybulous is the first production of Coastal Carolina University's newly established outreach actors' group, the Endless Chant Theatre Company. The premiere engagement of Faybulous and the Endless Chant Theater Company is scheduled for

Thursday, Aug. 17 and Friday, Aug. 18 at 7:30 p.m. and on Saturday, Aug. 19 at 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. All performances are in Wheelwright Auditorium. Tickets are $10 for adults and $5 for students under the age of 18. For the Saturday performances, one parent will be admitted free when accompanied by two children.

Following the Wheelwright performances, members of the Endless Chant company, featuring former and current Coastal theater students and faculty members, will take Faybulous on tour around the state and region.

For Faybulous, Bankston and Makarome adapted three of Aesop's fables, each one a mini-morality tale in a distinctive American musical mode: "The Tortoise and the Hare" is transformed into "Daddy Cool Turtle and Jacky Rabbit" with a hip jazz-gospel style; in "The Hen that Laid the Golden Egg," Granny grapples with would-be thieves Wayne and Dewayne, mixing tango, blues and country music; and "The Poor Woodsman and the Magical Rivermaid" is done in musical theater style.

"This show is a labor of love for me," says composer Bankston. "It was very rewarding to collaborate with Tony. Both he and I have very diverse musical backgrounds, which accounts for the variety of styles in Faybulous. Aesop's fables are timeless – they're fun and instructive for children and adults alike."

The premiere production of Faybulous is a collaboration involving many of the area's – and Coastal's – most talented professional musicians and performers. Bankston, an accomplished tenor who has sung with many leading American opera companies, will sing the role of the narrator. Philip Powell, chair of Coastal's Department of Music, is the musical director; Sandi Shackelford, chair of Coastal's Department of Theater, is the stage director; Coastal's artist-in-residence, conductor Charles Evans, joins Powell and Makarome in the instrumental ensemble.

The cast includes Coastal musical theater major Russell Johnson, Coastal graduate Kristi Brown Johnson and other students and alumni. The moveable set was designed by Christian Thee, a well-known trompe l'oeil artist based in Columbia, S.C. The sets were painted by Tymberley Wittrig, assistant professor of scenic and lighting design at Coastal.

For ticket information, contact the Wheelwright Box Office at 349-2502.

Coastal professor publishes history of tobacco in South Carolina

Long Green: The Rise and Fall of Tobacco in South Carolina by Coastal history professor Eldred E. Prince Jr. has been published by the University of Georgia Press.

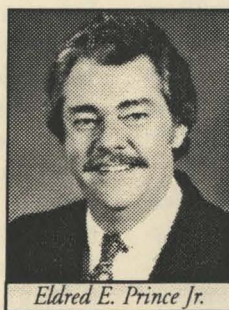

The first comprehensive history of Bright Leaf tobacco culture of any state in more than 50 years, Long Green traces the economic history of tobacco in South Carolina from the colonial period to the present. The book was written in collaboration with the late Robert R. Simpson of Coker College, who died in 1995.

"Long Green tells the story of the crop which was for many years a central factor in the economic and social life in the Pee Dee region," says Prince. The book examines rise of cigarette smoking in the 19th and 20th centuries, the relationship between tobacco growers and manufacturers, the impact of World War I, the Great Depression and World War II, and the evolution of the government-sponsored price support program in the 1950s and '60s.

The book also traces the modernization and consolidation of tobacco culture in the 1970s and the impact of health issues relating to smoking and tobacco use. The story concludes with speculations on the future of Bright Leaf and possible alternatives for former tobacco growers in the Pee Dee.

Key individuals who played

important roles in the Pee Dee's tobacco industry, including growers, warehousemen, editors and others, are profiled in the book, which features eight pages of illustrations.

A native of Loris, S.C., Prince has deep roots in Horry County, one of the leading tobacco producing areas of the Pee Dee. Prince, who joined the Coastal faculty in 1987, earned a bachelor's degree, master's degree and Ph.D. in history from the University of South Carolina. An associate professor of history at Coastal, he was named the university's Distinguished Professor of the Year in 1993.

Students from Bogota, Colombia completed Coastal summer courses

Twenty-seven students from Bogota, Colombia, participated in a summer cooperative work-study program which was established by the E. Craig Wall Sr. College of Business Administration at Coastal, Burroughs and Chapin Co., Inc., and Pontificia Universidad Javeriana, a prestigious Jesuit university located in Bogota. The students arrived in June and will return to Bogota in late August.

The program allows the students to work as interns at several sites along the Grand Strand while taking Coastal summer school courses at the Burroughs and Chapin Center for Excellence in Myrtle Beach. Some of the students were enrolled in a business statistics course, which was taught by Joe Parker, instructor of mathematics and statistics at Coastal. Other courses, such as international marketing and business English, were completed during Summer I session.

"A major benefit of the program is that it allows the students to earn academic credit while working in the tourism industry, but perhaps more importantly, the program allows the students to see firsthand how American businesses operate," said James Eason, associate dean of Coastal's Wall College of Business Administration. "The students performed well during Summer I and had a rewarding experience, and I think the success of this program will open the door for other similar programs with students from abroad in future years."

Students from Bogota, Colombia, were enrolled in several Coastal summer school courses.

Coastal Youth Academy established for middle school students

Coastal Youth Academy, a new non-credit membership program for middle-school age students, is being offered through Coastal's Division of Extended Learning and Public Services. The academic enrichment program will provide students with a great learning experience in a university setting.

Classes are being offered in Algebra I and II; Spanish I and French I; as well as computer classes in Windows, Microsoft Word and Internet research. An online grammar course, No No's for English 101, is also being offered. Most classes are held in the late afternoon, early evening or on Saturday, although two classes are scheduled in the afternoon to accommodate the growing number home school students in the area.

Membership in the program allows students to take classes designed to help them move ahead and excel in key academic areas. Coastal Youth Academy members also have access to the resources available on campus, including Coastal's foreign language lab and computer lab. Members will get university ID cards, making them eligible to use Coastal's Kimbel Library, as well as receive student discounts for campus cultural and sporting events.
