International students arrive to study in Coastal's PGM program

Ten students from the Autonomous University of Barcelona, Spain, recently arrived on Coastal's campus where they will spend the next two-and-one-half years completing the requirements of the unique international component of Coastal's Professional Golf Management program they began in 1997. Coastal is one of only 10 schools in the United States with a PGM program that has been endorsed by the Professional Golfers' Association of America (PGA). More than 120 students are enrolled in the program. Another group of students from Spain are scheduled to arrive in January.

In the international component of the program, students study in Barcelona for the first three years, concentrating on foundation courses in business and the humanities. For the final two-and-a-half years, the students travel to Coastal, where they matriculate into the PGM program to earn a bachelor's degree in marketing.

"It has long been Coastal's mission to bring an international flavor to our campus," said Coastal President Ronald Ingle. "These students will be on our campus for more than two years, living in residence halls with American roommates and interacting with the campus community. From the outset of the program, the Spanish students wanted to make sure they were integrated with our student-body so they could experience what life is like in the United States. At the same time, our students will have the opportunity to learn about their culture. This is a situation where everyone benefits."

Along with completing the requirements of a marketing degree, students will also serve 16 months of internships at area golf courses. A requirement for admission to the program is proof of a handicap of eight or less. Students must also complete the Golf Professional Training Program (GPTP), a three-level independent course on the business of golf. Those who complete the classwork, internships and GPTP are on course to obtain their PGA Class A certification. The Spanish students will be recognized by the Spanish Royal Federation of Golf and will be awarded its equivalent Class A professional status.

International students participating in Coastal's PGM program include:

- Ricardo Bescansa-Pous of Santiago de Compostela Spain
- Edoardo Caltran of Siena, Italy
- Javier Chavarria-De-Lorenzo

Eminent historian to give public lecture on George Wallace

Historian and author Dan T. Carter will give a public lecture on "George Wallace and his Legacy" on Monday, Aug. 28 at 3 p.m. in the Wall Auditorium on Coastal's campus. The event is free and open to the public.

Dan T. Carter

"Dan Carter is one of America's most famous and most respected scholars," said Charles Joyner, who serves as Burroughs Distinguished Professor of Southern History at Coastal. "His books and television documentaries have been outstanding in helping Americans understand some of the most significant chapters of our history."

A native of the Pee Dee region of South Carolina, Carter has served as Pitt Professor of American History at England's renowned Cambridge University and as visiting professor at the University of Genoa.

This fall he is leaving his long-term position as Kenan Professor of History at Emory University to return to his native South Carolina as Educational Foundation University Professor at the University of South Carolina.

Carter is featured in the recent two-part nationally-televised documentary on PBS, "Settin' the Woods on Fire." The film is based on his book, The Politics of Rage: George Wallace, the Origins of the New Conservatism, and the Transformation of American Politics, which won the Robert F. Kennedy Book Award.

His first book was Scottsboro: A Tragedy of the American South, winner of the Bancroft Prize, the Jules Landry Award, and the Avery Craven Award of the Organization of American Historians. He is also the author of When the War Was Over and From George Wallace to Newt Gingrich.

Carter is a past president of the Southern Historical Association and has received fellowships from the National Endowment for the Humanities and the National Humanities Center.

Carter's lecture is sponsored by the Waccamaw Center for Cultural and Historical Studies, the research center for Coastal's College of Humanities and Fine Arts.

Two appointed to Horry County Higher Education Commission

The Horry County Higher Education Commission has announced the appointment of two new members. William Page Ambrose of Aynor and Joseph O. Burroughs Jr. of Conway will each serve four-year terms as commission members.

Ambrose is assistant vice president for the Conway National Bank in Aynor. He serves on the advisory boards of the Aynor Area School District and Aynor-Conway Career Center. Ambrose is also a member of the board of directors of the Horry County United Way and Kids Voting.

Ambrose earned a bachelor's degree from the University of South Carolina in 1983.

Burroughs is a partner at Singleton, Burroughs & Young, P.A., in Conway. He served on the board of directors for Coastal's CINO Club from 1987 to 1998. Burroughs is a founding member of the Waccamaw Sertoma Club and serves on the board of directors for Kids Voting.

Burroughs earned a bachelor's degree from Clemson University in 1972 and a juris doctorate degree from the University of South Carolina

School of Law in 1978.

In 1959, the South Carolina General Assembly formed the Horry County Higher Education Commission to develop higher education opportunities for students of Horry County. Commission members are recommended by the Horry County Legislative Delegation and appointed by the Governor of South Carolina. The organization has played a significant role in the development of Coastal Carolina University.

Lifelong Learning Society courses available for fall 2000

The Lifelong Learning Society (LLS), a learning in retirement program of Coastal's Division of Extended Learning and Public Services, has a variety of courses available for the 2000 fall semester, which runs from Sept. 11. to Nov. 30.

LLS is designed for adults who are interested in learning, exchanging ideas and becoming more socially and culturally interactive. Members are entitled to special features and benefits of the university, including use of the campus library and athletic facilities, free admission to athletic events, student rates for events in Wheelwright Auditorium, as well as special events such as one-day seminars and Lunch and Learn programs. The LLS was recognized nationally as a model program of its kind in 1999.

Most LLS classes are held in the Society House on the Coastal campus. Extension sites include locations in North Myrtle Beach, Little River, Murrells Inlet and Webster University in Myrtle Beach. There is a $25 annual membership fee and only LLS members may register for classes.

Early registration is recommended since many courses have limited enrollment. For more information or to enroll, call 349-2665 or visit Coastal's Web site at www.coastal.edu/learn.

Coastal Carolina People

Faculty and staff are encouraged to submit information to be included in the "Coastal Carolina People" section of this newsletter. Information will be published following the presentation or activity.

• John Goodwin and three of his students, Arnold Forman, Terasa Pauquette and Dwight Williams, attended the meeting of the Middle Atlantic Discovery Chemistry Project (MADCP) at Susquehanna University, June 5 to 8, to demonstrate the Workshop Chemistry program in place at Coastal. Goodwin also presented an update of the progress with the Workshop Chemistry Adopt and Adapt project (as a part of the DUE-CCLI - funded consortium WP98) at the Biennial Conference on Chemical Education at the University of Michigan, Aug. 1 to 4. Additionally, Goodwin participated in the formation of the LUCID Project's editorial board for interactive chemistry curriculum materials at the SUNY Stony Brook Interactive Learning Systems Institute, June 12 to 16. This group will review and disseminate both print and Web-based learning activities for chemistry via the Internet.

Coastal courses offer help for business community

Learning Opportunities: Business Edition, a free guide listing all business and professional development courses offered this fall through Coastal's Division of Extended Learning, is now available.

Computer applications, customer service, real estate pricing, public speaking and career development are a few of the more than 50 business courses being offered. Registration is now open for fall classes, which begin in September and October at four area locations: on Coastal's Conway campus, at Webster University, Myrtle Square Mall and the Hampton Inn at Broadway at the Beach. Many evening classes are scheduled. On-line courses are also available.

Call 349-2665 to request a copy of Learning Opportunities or visit the Web site at www.coastal.edu/learn.

"Surfin' for Seniors" introduces the Internet to senior adults

Six sessions of "Surfin' for Seniors," classes designed for senior adults who have little or no experience with computers and the Internet, are scheduled for Wednesday, Sept. 6 and Thursday, Sept. 7. Classes will be held in Coastal's Society House computer lab. The fee for each session is $15.

Following a brief overview of the Internet, participants will be paired with student instructors for a surfing session which will explain how to use the World Wide Web, send e-mail to family and friends, get discount airline tickets, tour the world's greatest museums, access medical information and much more. These sessions are designed to help participants decide whether to invest in a computer or learn how to use the one they have.

The dates and times of the sessions are Wednesday, Sept. 6: 9 to 10:30 a.m.; 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., and 1:30 to 3 p.m.; and Thursday, Sept. 7: 9 to 10:30 a.m.; 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., and 1:30 to 3 p.m.

For more information, contact Coastal's Division of Extended Learning and Public Services at 349-2665.

Coastal Campus Notes

Innovation Fund for Summer Session and Non-Credit Programs

Attention Faculty: Coastal's Division of Extended Learning and Public Services designates funds to encourage the development of innovative Summer Session credit courses and non-credit programs. The main purpose of the Innovative Fund is to support collaborative initiatives that are particularly suited to Summer Session and non-credit programs. These types of programs (credit courses for Summer Session and non-credit offerings throughout the year) may cater to special groups of students for the summer and specific or diverse audiences for non-credit programs. Awards normally will not exceed $1,500. Application deadline is Oct. 16. For guidelines or more information, contact the Division of Extended Learning and Public Services at 349-2648.

UPS services offered on campus

Coastal's Mail Services is offering all UPS services for students, faculty and staff as well as the general public. The services are available for both personal and university business. For more information, call 349-2156.

Student media positions available

Coastal's Office of Student Activities is looking to fill two student media positions for the 2000-2001 academic year: assistant editor of The Chanticleer newspaper and assistant editor of the Tempo feature magazine. Applications are available in Student Center 106 and are due no later than Friday, Sept. 8. Please encourage all qualified students to apply. These positions are stipend and come with partial tuition waivers. For more information, contact Jay Anhorn, assistant director of Student Activities at 349-2311.

Advertise in The Chanticleer

Want to advertise your upcoming event, program or service? Why not place an ad in The Chanticleer newspaper? Discounted rates are available to on-campus departments and organizations. Contact Philip Sellers, editor-in-chief of The Chanticleer at 349-2330 or the Office of Student Activities at 349-2301 for a deadline schedule.

Free courses offered

Coastal's faculty and staff may take free Lifelong Learning Society courses on a space available basis. For a list of courses or more information, contact the Division of Extended Learning and Public Services at 349-2665.

Did You Know?

Coastal's Office of Orientation reports that 1,040 freshmen and transfer students participated in Orientation during the summer of 2000. That's up from summer 1999, when 936 students participated.
