Coastal Makes Appeal
For Four Year School

The South Carolina Commission on Higher Education sat down Dec. 7 here at Coastal Carolina to hear area leaders tell why they believe serious consideration should be given to locating a four-year college in Horry County.

The presentation of Coastal's case was made by members of the Educational Foundation and the Horry County Commission on Higher Education. The Pee Dee Area Foundation in Florence made its bid for the college some time ago and is the only school other than Coastal that has been considered for the institution.

Arguments for the presentation of Coastal's bid had been in the making for months with intense research on the part of commission members.

The visiting members of the State Commission now only got a good look at the physical campus of the college, but also a view of how the people of Horry County feel about Coastal through a special 16-page edition on the school put out by the Myrtle Beach SUN-NEWS and the Conway FIELD & HERALD. The supplement gave the entire story of the college from its beginning in 1954 to its present point of progress.

Horry County was the first in South Carolina to have a two-year college in the state. In its infancy the college held classes at Conway High School and enabled students to receive at least part of a college education that they could not have otherwise afforded. The school eventually became a part of the University of South Carolina off-campus system.

The growth of the campus has been far beyond the expectations of leaders in higher education in our state.

We now have more than 200 students, 169 of which commute from outside the immediate area.

Coastal Makes Appeal
For Four Year School

The annual Miss Coastal Carolina Contest, sponsored by the Sophomore Class, was once again a success. A large crowd was on hand to see Miss Tanya Saleeby crowned as Miss Coastal on December 1, 1967. Anne Hilllard was first runner-up, and Susan Chastain was second runner-up. Other finalists were Rebecca Dixon and Deborah Van Wic.

Donald Stanton was announced as Mr. Coastal. He was chosen by a student body vote before the pageant. The other Mr. Coastal finalists were Ronald Stanton, Ronald Hymen, Mike O'Donnell, and Irby Koon.

Director of the pageant was Mrs. Helen Osteen of Myrtle Beach. Glenn Arnette III and Myrtle O'Donnell, and Irby Koon.

The distinguished judges were Miss Betty Stevens and Jack Humphreys of Florence, and Billy Harris, past president of the National Judging Association, from Sumter.

Eleven girls were judged in three categories: evening gown, sportswear, and talent. In the evening gown competition, each girl was escorted by one of the boys running for Mr. Coastal. In the sportswear competition, the girls appeared in outfits they would wear to a reheat. The talent consisted of dancing, piano, pantomimes, skits, sewing, modeling, and singing.

The Queen and He, Tanya Saleeby and Mr. Coastal, moments after they were crowned Mr. Coastal.

Tanya Saleeby Chosen Miss Coastal Carolina

The judges chose the top five finalists after all eleven girls had appeared in the three categories of competition. At this time, the top five finalists in the Mr. Coastal Contest were announced.

Each of the top five girls was asked one question based on her major, activities, and hobbies. While the judges made their final tallies, Miss Coastal Carolina 1967, Ellen Land Hendrich, made her final appearance as the reigning queen. Mr. Coastal Carolina was announced immediately preceding the crowning of Miss Coastal Carolina.

The following are the names of the participants, their escorts, and sponsors:

Alpha Mu Gamma
Fall Induction Held

The Gamma Psi chapter of the Alpha Mu Gamma, National Foreign Language Honor Society, held its annual fall induction on Tuesday, January 9. Guest speaker for the occasion was Dr. Isaac Levy from the Department of Spanish, University of South Carolina.

Presiding over the initiation was Jane Snow, president. Anne Hilliard, Treasurer, was Marshall for the new members. Other officers are Ann Smith, vice-president; Carol Foxworth, secretary; and Linda Norman, historian.

New members initiated into the Gamma Psi chapter were Janice Beverly, Errol Collins, Ann Gentry, Kenneth Hamilton, and Kenny Stevens.

Other members are Mrs. Dorothy McInnis, Mrs. Larry Hidig, (homemaker). Mrs. Rose Henison is sponsor, and Mrs. Emilie Affinito is co-sponsor.

Circle K Project Successful

The Christmas Wonderland project which the Circle K of Coastal Carolina undertook this year has been a great success. The idea of such a project came from Mr. W. W. McCready of Forest Grove, Oregon. The project is mainly for children and displays many of their fairy tale characters with a Christmas background.

The Chamber of Commerce of Conway ordered the plans for Christmas Wonderland in 1965. Each year the project was set up, improvements were made and new scenes were added. The project received national recognition and did much to put Horry County in the news. In 1965, complications arose and the project wasn't set up. The project wasn't set up last year and chances that it would be used this year looked pretty grim, but the Circle K offered to take it over.

This was a major project for the Circle K. It meant that these young men had to find time between studying and working to put at least 15 hours each into the project each week.

All characters, with the exception of a few, had to be repaired and some had to be remade. The animated projects gave the Circle K the most trouble. Nearly all had to be rewound and a few motors had to be replaced.

The project, although it was a complete success, would have been even better if all the parts could have been found. It seems, that over the years, parts have been borrowed and not returned, or have been lost or destroyed.

This stroyed In the process of mov- ing, which, by the way, has taken place very often. Even with this handicap, though, the Circle K has recreated a wonderful project which had brought joy and happiness to thousands of young children throughout South Carolina.
From The Biddy’s Quill

I would like to use this space to thank the administration and faculty for the beautiful Christmas gifts I received this year. Here are some of the gifts:

- A dirty test tube from Mr. Risinger.
- A dusty eraser from Mr. Robison.
- A made-up copy of The Scarlet Letter from Mrs. Parker.
- An empty shot glass from Mrs. Mabry.
- A completely dissected fetal pig from Mr. Phares.
- An iron cross from Hell’s Angels.
- A completed Spanish workbook from Ginny B.
- Gas money for the remaining away ball games from Clickie.
- A prop from Mrs. Hopson.
- A typewriter that ACTUALLY sets margins and tabs from Mrs. Holiday and Mrs. Miller.
- A completed practice set from Mr. Vereen.

Bill Mathis Is Mr. Chanticleer

By Mary Grace Hendrick

Bill Mathis, sophomore at Coastal Carolina, has been chosen as Mr. Chanticleer for this edition. A native of Mt. Olive, North Carolina, Bill has lived in Conway for the last two years. He is a member of the Circle K, is circulation manager for the Chanticleer and works in the school library. He holds a record above most other Coastal students for attending every basketball game this season.

The staff of the Chanticleer welcomes Bill into the chosen ranks of those boys who put in much time and effort for Coastal Carolina.

From The Bottom

December 21, 1967, will go down in my book as a great night. When the time came, you students came through. Being young adults, you acted, put yourself in the shoes of other people today can’t accept responsibility to support their school and attend meetings to which they are required to go, then I suppose history will have to repeat itself, only on a smaller scale, until the school will eventually be completely run by faculty who have composed a strict set of rules to govern every aspect of student rights.

If students can’t carry out the responsibility of student life willingly, eventually, they will carry it out forcefully. The future is up to the individuals.

I commend the Chanticleer on its stand. The paper is not afraid to praise the pettiness of students who do nothing; but, it is published to improve the school, if need be, by criticism.

However, the paper has printed no criticisms yet, only truth.

Hill Humor

(Reprinted from the Civil Service Journal.)

The following “instructions to writers” were copied from a notice in a committee room on Capitol Hill:

1. Don’t use no double negative.
2. Make each pronoun agree with its antecedent.
3. Join clauses good, like a conjunction should.
4. Avoid the sentence fragments.
5. When danging, watch your particles.
6. Verbs has to agree with their subjects.
7. Just between you and I, case important too.
8. Don’t write run-on sentences they are too hard to read.
9. Don’t use commas, which aren’t necessary.
10. Try to not ever split infinitives.
11. Important: use your apostrophe’s correctly.
12. Proofread your writing to see if you any words out.
13. Correct spelling is essential.

Letter to The Editor

Dear Editor,

Since the last edition of the paper was put out, I have heard a lot of complaints from fellow students. Many have said the paper was full of toots and nothing but trash; it offended them, it “riled” them, it hit them where it hurts.

I suppose, on the basis of human psychology, these people have the right to complain, for as statistics will tell you, very few people like to admit to themselves they are wrong or have failed to carry out responsibility, always there is some excuse.

Now mind you, I’m not talking about the people who do their part, and most of the time, also fulfill the part handed to them by the usenet makers. Some people hold down two or three jobs, study hard and still find a way they can. But, I’m talking about the people who are so disinterested in their duties. It is those who were offended by the truth stated in the last edition of the paper.

Responsibility of individuals is what makes a college a college along with pride and competition to do everything you do to the best of your ability. I think student responsibility is the reason the U.S. government has had to take over more and more of the state’s rights. Who has a right to complain? Very few!

If you support people today can’t accept responsibility to support their school and attend meetings to which they are required to go, then I suppose history will have to repeat itself, only on a smaller scale, until the school will eventually be completely run by faculty who have composed a strict set of rules to govern every aspect of student rights.

If students can’t carry out the responsibility of student life willingly, eventually, they will carry it out forcefully. The future is up to the individuals.

I commend the Chanticleer on its stand. The paper is not afraid to praise the pettiness of students who do nothing; but, it is published to improve the school, if need be, by criticism.

However, the paper has printed no criticisms yet, only truth.

Dear Editor,

I make this appeal to the students of Coastal Carolina College.

As college students of this day and age we have often been referred to as draft dodgers, a generation of un-Americans, communist inspired, and other such derogatory names. This is why I ask that you state this petition to be arranged for — signed — and sent to President Johnson. What will this accomplish? Nothing of any material gain, but the students at this institute will go on record as supporters of America, and during a time of daily demonstrations against such support, this in itself will be favorable for Coastal.

We are probably the freest nation that has ever existed. We owe this freedom — not to war demonstrations, but to our forefathers, and even fathers who desired freedom enough to fight for it if it were necessary.

We did not start the war in Viet-Nam, despite what the demonstrators, and other so-called American citizens say. We came, instead, to the aid of a small nation already in a battle against the communist world. Are we supposed to turn our backs on the appeals of weaker nations of the world as the free nations did to Ethiopia, Czechoslovakia, and others prior to World War II? If we do — when we finally do turn our backs — the threat we may find a WORLD of communism to fight rather than a few nations.

I do not ask that you sign a petition which means that you want to fight in the rice fields of Viet-Nam. If you’re a Democrat or a Republican, nor one which means you want to fight in the war is being fought you would have it, but I ask you to sign if you feel that the United States of America should be in Viet-Nam, or anywhere, when communism threatens the well being of a free people.

If the college officials allow this petition to be circulated among its students, I will see that this petition and a message of my loyalty be sent to President Johnson.

Thank you

W. Bane

Letter to the Editor

Since the publication of your last issue, I’ve overheard many student criticisms of the Chanticleer. Students have complained that the paper ran down the student unjustly and they weren’t enough news-worthy articles. I’m one of the first ones to agree with this. I’ve asked members of the staff just why it was wrong and I’ve found that due to a lack of efficient staff members and interested students, the paper wasn’t able to appear with usual excellent quality.

I have taken what I have taken by the paper about lack of school spirit and vandalize on our campus. I wholeheartedly agree with it. If the students had school spirit the problem of lack of newsworthiness would be solved. No one asked to write an article about a Spook Dance that was a “dip” The paper can only report what the students do, whether it pleases them or not.

Yours truly,

Brenda
Coastal’s Library Should Be A Place To Study

(Ed. note: The following article was originally printed in the Bantam, the paper published at the University Regional Campus. Since it applies as much to Coastal students as it does to Union's, it is reprinted here, with permission from the editor.)

U. S. C. (Coastal) students can be found studying almost everywhere except in the library, that is. Pupils hard at study can be seen crouched in corners, cars, or sitting in a corner of an empty class room, or even sprawled in an easy chair in the lobby. But seldom do we find students laboring over their assignments in our library, one of the best regional campus libraries in the state and a natural place for study, so often avoided.

The tragic truth of the matter is that our library is a great place to visit, but not such a good place to spend time in. It has some serious intention of studying. There seems to be a rush of people, become a center of social activity. It is a place to go to find your friends, to exchange gossip, to discuss mid-term grades, to debate the Viet Nam War - but sure seldom is it used for its designated purpose of providing a comfortable, convenient place of study.

Mr. Guinn (Mr. Biddle) and the other members of the faculty have worked very hard to produce a library which can accommodate the student body and have succeeded in giving us a library which can be used all from 9p.m. The Gilmore, it is both ironic and unfortunate that we students should desire to use the library for purposes other than academic ones.

Of course some students can be seen making an effort at concentrated study in the library, but as a rule their efforts are futile. It is not easy to study one's geology when others are arguing fluently and loud in favor of or against some political hypotheses. Nor is it a pleasant thing to attempt to read a parallel book when there is a general consensus being taken on "what's your favorite beer." Naturally, such barbaric turmoil does not exist all the time, for if it did the faculty would surely intervene. But it is present at times, however, and this is truly a very sad thing.

"You can lead a horse to water but you can't make him drink," is one of the most hackneyed cliches of the English language but it is a true statement nonetheless. The faculty members and student librarians are our guides, not policemen. They have helped to make our library the highly commendable one it is today. What we use the library for is left mostly to our own devices and we begin to understand that college students would want to use the library for what it is intended to be - a good place to study.

Intercollegiate Press Bulletin

The following is an article taken from the Intercollegiate Press Bulletin, of which the Chanticleer is a member:

The nation's state colleges and universities have taken specific steps this year to deal with such student complaints as lack of communication with faculty and administration, insufficient participation in setting school policy, and feelings of alienation because of campus "bigness," according to a survey made by the Association of State Colleges and Universities.

The perverting forces of concern among the country's state colleges and universities, which educate one out of every five college and university students, has been to search out ways of dealing with student frustration and unrest. In many cases, this has taken the form of giving students representation on key faculty and administrative committees.

Snakes of the present! Vile creatures of the past.
Froth upon these, their evil paths for eternity?

Making clear that he is in complete disagreement with the principles and practices of college psychiatrists, Dr. Szasz accuses them of ambiguity and the exercise of "arbitrary control" over their student-patients. In his critique, Dr. Szasz suggests that members of the psychiatric profession have tried too hard to curry public favor. The psychiatrist, he charges, "in trying to prove how 'useful' he can be -- to government, industry, religion, the schools, indeed to any powerful institution -- has sacrificed his loyalty to the individual patient or client.

Because of the ambiguity of his role, the vagueness of his language, and the use of "unregulated power in his ostensibly therapeutic interventions," the college psychiatrist is "a powerful status figure waddling vast authority over the student," Dr. Szasz declares.

But, he concludes, the college psychiatrist has so far escaped both public criticism and judicial prohibition," because "his deception is practiced in the name of health.
