Board of Trustees approve budget for 2001-2002

Coastal's Board of Trustees has approved a projected $55.9 million total budget, including a $33.9 million operational budget, for the 2001-2002 fiscal year during its quarterly meeting.

As part of the budget plan, the board approved a tuition increase, effective for fall 2001. In-state tuition will increase $135 per semester, from $1,750 to $1,885, a rise of 7.71 percent. Out-of-state tuition will increase $435 per semester, from $4,905 to $5,340, a rise of 8.87 percent.

The board has also approved an increase in room, board and health service fees. The fee will increase $105 per semester, from $2,620 to $2,725.

In other action:

- The board approved tenure status to the following:

James Luken, incoming chair,

Department of Biology;

Keith Walters, incoming chair,

Department of Marine Science; and

Lisa Barboun, assistant professor of foreign languages.

- The board approved emeritus status for the following retiring faculty members:

William Davis, emeritus professor of psychology and sociology;

Sandra Bowden, emeritus professor of education;

Joseph Pinson, distinguished professor emeritus of biology.

Coastal's Department of Art awarded national accreditation

Coastal's Department of Art has been named an accredited institutional member of the National Association of Schools of Art and Design (NASAD), an organization of schools, colleges and universities that offer art and design studies.

NASAD's Commission on Accreditation granted Coastal's Department of Art an associate membership based on a self-evaluation and peer-review study conducted during the past three years as part of the accreditation process. Two NASAD evaluators visited Coastal in October 2000 to verify the department's self-study document. Their visit focused on the programs and activities housed in Coastal's Art Center, as well as the art facilities under construction in the new Thomas W. and Robin W. Edwards College of Humanities and Fine Arts Building and the sculpture studio located in Coastal's Atlantic Center facility.

"Being accredited by NASAD is an acknowledgment of the outstanding achievement of the department's faculty, staff and students," said Charles Wright, chair of Coastal's Department of Art.

"Accreditation, in practical terms, is a stamp of approval, a sign that the department has met an external set of basic criteria for the programs we offer. The rigorous evaluation process has placed us in a position to advance to another level of excellence as we move into the new Edwards Humanities and Fine Arts Building, which has state-of-the-art facilities for all the arts."

NASAD has accredited 227 institutions throughout the United States. Accreditation standards emphasize an institution's history of achievement and its goals and priorities regarding future programs. Coastal's Department of Art joins the ranks of some of the nation's most prestigious art institutions, including the San Francisco Art Institute, the School of the Chicago Art Institute, the Rhode Island School of Design and the Maryland Institute College of Art in Baltimore. Five other South Carolina institutions - Columbia College, Francis Marion University, Lander University, University of South Carolina and Winthrop University - are accredited institutional members of NASAD.

Approximately 90 Coastal students are art majors. Coastal's Department of Art has seven full-time faculty members.

honor employees who consistently perform at a high level of professionalism and whose work demonstrates exceptional dedication to the university.

H. Dale Williams Center for Extended Learning now open

The H. Dale Williams Center for Extended Learning, the new headquarters of Coastal Carolina University's Division of Extended Learning and Public Services, opened May 15.

This 9,600-square-foot facility, located on the second floor of the new University Hall on the Coastal campus, will house the Lifelong Learning Society, two computer labs, five classrooms, office space, and the Senior Resource Center, a new service for senior adults created by H. Dale Williams.

The Senior Resource Center will offer free computer access, Internet, e-mail, fax and copy machine services to senior adults as well as a reading area which will be supplied with books and magazines. All classrooms and the Senior Resource Center will be connected to the Internet. In addition to the Division of Extended Learning's many programs for seniors, the Resource Center will offer workshops on health care, retirement, financial planning and other topics of interest to senior adults.

Coastal is one of the few universities in the nation with dedicated facilities for older adult learning on their campuses.

Coastal's Division of Extended Learning and Public Services is a comprehensive continuing education operation, managing programs such as the Lifelong Learning Society, Bachelor's of Arts in Interdisciplinary Studies (BAIS), professional development workshops and seminars, specialized technologies certification, contract training, travel study, Coastal Youth Academy, leisure learning, Command Spanish, credit and non-credit distance learning, high school dual credit, and the SuperSonic Summer Youth Program for children.

For more information, call Peter Balsamo at 349-2648 or visit www.coastal.edu/learn on the Internet.

Coastal Carolina University establishes new programs in Spanish and music

Coastal will offer two new majors – Spanish and music – beginning in the fall 2001 semester. The new bachelor of arts degree programs were recently approved by the South Carolina Commission on Higher Education.

“In today’s global economy, a major in Spanish is an ideal accompaniment to a wide variety of fields of study,” says John Idoux, provost and vice president of Academic Affairs at Coastal. “Because of the growth of the Hispanic population in the U.S. and the expanding cultural and economic ties to Latin America, the need for Spanish-speaking professionals in many fields is growing.”

The need for more Spanish teachers in K-12 education all over the nation – and in Horry County in particular – is also increasing, according to Idoux. As part of the Foreign Languages in Elementary Schools (FLES) program, a Spanish curriculum has been introduced in all 23 elementary schools in Horry County in the past two years.

A bachelor of arts degree in music will strengthen Coastal’s role as a major cultural and intellectual center of South Carolina’s Waccamaw region, says Idoux. “Adding a degree program in music is a natural extension of the teaching, research and public service mission of the university,” he said. Coastal also offers a major in secondary education with a concentration in music and a minor in music.

“With the approaching completion of the Thomas W. and Robin W. Edwards College of Humanities and Fine Arts Building, the addition of a full degree program in music enhances Coastal’s standing as a mature, competitive academic institution,” said Idoux.

Alumni Association names new board members

Coastal’s Alumni Association has named five new members to its board of directors.

The new members, who will serve through 2004, include: Janice Cannan ’96 of Myrtle Beach, Richard Causey ’86 of Conway; McKenzie Jordan ’00 of Conway; Deniece Palmer ’99 of Myrtle Beach and Rob Shelton ’97 of Conway.

Other members of the Alumni Association board of directors include: Karen Collins ’91 of Myrtle Beach; Jody Davis ’84 of Myrtle Beach; Joyce Dorman ’89, ’91 of Myrtle Beach; first vice president Michael Frazier ’96 of Conway; Kisha Grate ’98 of Loris; Tara Little ’92 of Conway; Bill Marsh ’86 of Conway; secretary/treasurer Porter Medley ’99 of Conway; Ron Mitchell ’97 of Conway; Angela Rabon ’96 of Conway; Jordan Roberts ’99 of Conway; second vice president Tabby Shelton ’99 of Conway; and president Richard Weldon ’88 of Longs.

FYI - Telephone service interruption

Coastal’s telephone service will be interrupted from 5 p.m. Thursday, June 7 to 8 a.m. Monday, June 11 to upgrade the campus telephone system.

Computer and e-mail service will not be affected.

On Monday, June 11 those who have a voice mailbox will need to reset their message waiting light by checking for messages at ext. 2555.

For more information, contact Kay Alford in ITS at 349-2130.

Hughes named director of Coastal’s Georgetown campus

Sharon Hughes has been named director of Coastal’s Georgetown campus according to John Idoux, Coastal’s provost and vice president for Academic Affairs.

The campus is located in the Georgetown Campus for Higher Education facility, which Coastal shares with Horry-Georgetown Technical College.

Hughes worked the last four years as an instructor of developmental education at Horry-Georgetown Technical College. She also has worked the last five summers as an instructor with Coastal’s College Jumpstart Program, which is offered at the Georgetown campus.

Hughes’ background includes working as a K-12 teacher in South Carolina, Georgia and Tennessee.

Hughes earned a bachelor’s degree from Tennessee Tech, a master’s degree from Middle Tennessee State University and a Ph.D. from the University of Southern Mississippi.

For more information, call the Georgetown campus at 546-7523.

Online courses available

Hundreds of courses on a variety of topics are available via the Internet through Coastal’s Division of Extended Learning and Public Services.

The self-paced noncredit classes are ideal for those who need to upgrade their job skills but find it inconvenient or impossible to participate in a traditional classroom setting.

The courses can be found at the Web site www.coastal.edu/learn/online. The subjects include: creative and technical writing, digital production, E-Commerce, Microsoft Office and other computer applications, online marketing, programming languages, and small business development.

For more information, call 349-2665 or visit www.coastal.edu/learn on the Internet.

Students and faculty recognized at Honors Convocation

Coastal presented awards for student academic achievement at the annual Honors Convocation on Tuesday, April 24. Faculty recognition awards also were presented.

Ryan Bubucis, a senior accounting and finance double major of Uncasville, Conn., received the 2000-2001 Faculty's Academic Excellence Award. Candidates for this award must attain a minimum cumulative grade point average of at least 3.5, the endorsement of a faculty adviser, and a record of academic honors. Bubucis has a perfect 4.0 grade point average. During his junior and senior years, he has been in the Wall Fellows program, an intensive leadership program for Coastal's top business majors. He is also in Coastal's Honors Program.

Kevin Cox, a senior marketing major of Conway, received the 2000-2001 Ronald D. Lackey Service Award. Named in honor of the late Coastal faculty member and university chaplain, the award is given annually to a senior on the basis of conspicuous service to the university through involvement and leadership in campus organizations. Cox has been a leader in many Coastal organizations, including a term as president of Omicron Delta Kappa, a national leadership honor society. Cox also has been a Student Alumni Ambassador, an Orientation Assistant, and a business manager of Coastal's student newspaper, The Chanticleer.

Robin Edwards Russell, assistant professor of dramatic arts, was presented the Student Affairs Division Award, which honors faculty who make significant contributions to the quality of student life through participation and leadership in the co-curricular activities of the university. Since joining the Coastal faculty in 1995, she has been active as a faculty mentor for undeclared freshmen. She earned a master's degree in theater from the University of South Carolina in 1991 and served an internship at the Folger Shakespeare Theatre in Washington D.C. Russell is co-founder of the South Carolina

Shakespeare Company, based in Columbia.

Varavut Limpasuvan was named the Distinguished Teacher of the Year, an annual honor presented by Coastal's Student Government Association to faculty who demonstrate excellence in teaching. Limpasuvan, an assistant professor of chemistry and physics, joined the Coastal faculty in 2000. He earned a bachelor's degree in engineering and applied science from the California Institute of Technology and Ph.D. in atmospheric sciences from the University of Washington. He did post-doctoral research at the Joint Institute for the Study of Atmosphere and Ocean in Seattle.

Sally Z. Hare, Singleton Endowed Professor of Education at Coastal, received the Distinguished Teacher-Scholar Lecturer Award. Sponsored by HTC, Inc., this award was initiated in 1996 to recognize faculty members who distinguish themselves as teachers, scholars and communicators.

During the fall, the recipient delivers a public lecture drawn from his or her area of expertise. Hare joined the Coastal faculty in 1974 and has served as director of Coastal's Center for Education and Community since 1993. During her career at Coastal, Hare has been a Kellogg National Fellow and a Fetzer Teaching Fellow and she won a national award in Community Development from the National Continuing Education Association. Under her guidance, Coastal's Center for Education and Community has sponsored a number of innovative programs linking the university and the community, including Calling All Colors, Jump for the Sun and America Reads. Hare earned a bachelor's degree, master's degree and Ph.D. from the University of South Carolina.

Paul Gayes, professor of marine science and geology, was named the Kearns Palmetto Professor. This endowed professorship, appointed periodically, was established in 1989 with funds provided by the state and matched by the Coastal Educational Foundation, Inc. Gayes, the third recipient of the honor, is director of the Center for Marine and Wetland Studies at Coastal. He joined the Coastal faculty in 1987 and has established an international reputation in marine geology, providing Coastal students with unique research opportunities. He earned a master's degree in geoscience-geology from Penn State University and a Ph.D. in coastal oceanography from the State University of New York (SUNY) at Stony Brook. Coastal professors Richard Dame and Richard Collin are previous Kearns Palmetto Professors.

Department awards were presented to 25 students in recognition of outstanding academic accomplishments and contributions to the academic quality of their respective departments. Candidates for academic awards are nominated by respective department faculty.

The following awards were presented:

Coastal professors win Eisenhower Grant for "Best Practices"

Coastal will host "Best Practices," a series of seminars introducing new teaching methods for K-12 language teachers. The pilot program, consisting of seven workshops scheduled between June 2001 and February 2002, is being funded through the Eisenhower Grant Program, a national project created by Congress to provide professional development to elementary and secondary school teachers and educators. The program was developed by Coastal professors JoAnne Flanders and José Sanjinés with Sharon McCullough of Horry County Schools.

The Best Practices program will offer sessions covering several innovative new approaches to teaching, particularly the teaching of languages. The following sessions will be offered

- June 9, 2001: Block Scheduling, led by Deborah Espitia of Howard County (Md.) Public Schools
- Sept. 29, 2001: Curricular Designs K-6, led by Harriett Barnett of Manhattanville College
- Oct. 6, 2001: Languages Across the Curriculum, led by Gail Riley of American University

- Nov. 3, 2001: Authentic Materials, led by Isabelle Kaplan of Bennington College
- Jan. 19, 2002: Teaching Speaking: Interpersonal and Presentation Modes, led by Alvin Prince of Furman University
- Jan. 26, 2002: Follow-up Session
- Feb. 9, 2002: Follow-up Session

For more information about this program, contact JoAnne Flanders at 349-2928 or José Sanjinés at 349-2467.

CCU graduate student selected for Einstein Fellowship

Stephanie Horner Toney, who is completing the master's of education degree program at Coastal, has been selected for an Albert Einstein Distinguished Educator Fellowship. She is one of 10 individuals selected from a national pool of candidates by the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE).

The Einstein Fellows program is designed to offer outstanding public or private elementary and secondary mathematics, technology and science teachers the opportunity to serve in the national public policy arena. Fellows bring to Congress or appropriate branches of the federal government the insights and practical experience of the classroom teacher. The Fellows provide a "real world" perspective to policy makers and program managers developing or managing educational programs.

As an Einstein Fellow, Toney will work for 10 months in the Office of Science Education at either the DOE or on Capitol Hill from Sept. 1 to June 30, 2002. The Triangle Coalition for Science and Technology Education assists in the administration of the Einstein Fellowship program.

"I hope to use this fellowship to make a bigger impact outside the classroom," said Toney. "In the next 10 years, I see a radical shift coming in terms of how we teach our children. I believe online education will become much more prevalent at the secondary education level. We cannot just keep building new schools. In the near future, I believe children may go to school perhaps three days a week and use the other two days to do coursework and research on their computers at home. We need to start preparing for that change now."

Coastal offers six master's programs of study in education.

"The education faculty at Coastal are the best I have encountered in taking educational theory and applying it to the classroom setting," said Toney, who is earning a master's degree in elementary education. "They challenge your ability and mind and provide an excellent education."

Toney is a teacher and team leader at Leesville Road Middle School in Raleigh, N.C., where she has taught science and math since 1994. From 1987 to 1994 she taught and held specialist positions at Fred J. Carnage Middle School in Raleigh, N.C. Toney has seven educational publications from her tenure as a public school teacher. Prior to her teaching career she worked as an associate scientist for Northrop Services and the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) at Research Triangle Park in North Carolina. She co-authored nine publications from her work at EPA and Northrop.

Toney earned a bachelor's degree in biology in 1978 and MBA in 1987 from Meredith College in Raleigh, N.C. Her educational background also includes graduate course work in genetics at North Carolina State University, and education course work for teacher certification from Coastal.

Coastal hosts Summer Lecture Showcase

Coastal's Division of Extended Learning and Public Services will present a series of weekly lectures each Thursday from June 7 to July 21 (except the week of July 4) from 1 to 3 p.m. in the new H. Dale Williams Center for Extended Learning on the Coastal campus. Admission is $8 per lecture, or $20 for any three lectures.

The lecture schedule is as follows:

• June 7, Issues in Elder Law - presented by Katherine DeAngelo, elder law attorney

Learn about Elder Law issues from an attorney in the field. Topics will include estate planning, living trusts, health care, powers of attorney, advanced medical directives, and long-term care planning.

• June 14, Broken Promises in the Promised Land - presented by Coastal professor and novelist Richard Collin

Take a historical look at the conflict between Israelis and Palestinians. Learn why this is the hardest ethnic conflict of all to solve.

• June 21, Which Planet are these Mountains On? - presented by Coastal mathematics professor Fusun Akman

Learn how our brain perceives visual matter. We are used to thinking in terms of zero dimension (dots), one dimension (lines), two dimensions (planes), and three dimensions (space). The concept of "fractal dimension" helps us understand why our brain perceives some scenery as "alien."

• June 28, The Genius of Mozart - presented by Martin Milella, former chair of the music department at Molloy College

From the beginning of his short life of 35 years, Mozart mastered every musical form with natural grace and facility during the height of the Classical period in music history.

• July 12, Nutrition 101 - presented by Natalie Naughton, registered dietician with Loris Healthcare Systems

Learn what you need to know to make good decisions regarding your diet. Learn what resources you can trust. Discover which claims regarding herbal supplements are valid and which have not been proven.

For more information or to register, call 349-2665 or visit www.coastal.edu/learn on the Internet.
