In January SGA distributed to Coastal students questionnaires dealing with various areas of their Coastal life—finances, academics, extracurricular activities. Response was good with 20% of the on campus student body participating. This article will deal with the area of academics, and in particular student evaluations of their professors.

It has been quite some time since the professors of Coastal have participated in a broad scale distribution of some form of evaluations to be completed by their students. During my four years here I have been given such forms only twice by my professors. Even then, they were free to do what they wished with them. I believe that the time has come when we, the students here at Coastal Carolina, need to request the participation of the Coastal faculty in allowing themselves to be evaluated by their students. In drawing inferences from the questionnaire I believe that the students desire such action. Here are some of the results of the poll.

118 students favored evaluating the faculty, 15 disapproved. 15 students felt such evaluations should remain in the hands of the professors. 32 felt they should be turned in to the administration, kept officially on record, and accessible to authorized personnel only. 98 felt they should be turned in to a joint student-faculty-administrative committee, and have results published and made available to students.

Discontent with classes was broken down like this. 51 felt the course itself was to blame, 79 the professor, 28 the texts, 15 the classmates, and 4 other. 107 students took the time and trouble to comment on their reason for desiring or disapproving of faculty. Of these over 2/3 felt that evaluations would benefit the instructor, pointing up his weak and strong points, creating better relations with his students, and generally let him know how he got across to his students. In other words, these students felt that constructive criticism would be good for the professors and improve the courses. Other reasons favoring evaluations included letting the students and administration know what kind of job the faculty was doing. These students seemed to feel that as a students they were the best judges of a teacher’s capabilities. Only a very few felt that evaluations should be given merely because a teacher evaluates a student in giving him a semester grade.

Well, so much for the statistics. I would like to see us have such evaluations this semester, about 2 weeks prior to exams. I feel that they should be published and available to both students and faculty. Dr. Singleton has told me he approves of this. USC Columbia Campus did this last fall, and several professors, administrators, and students have expressed a desire to use this form. They would be computer tabulated. Anyone who would like to see these forms please see me.

In talking with several of the faculty, I believe that they are concerned with what the students think of them in the classroom. They feel that the students should be able to help them. There is one question that I would like to ask those faculty members who are adamantly opposing them. ‘what are you afraid of?’ This is the question that other students are thinking too.

Well, fellow students, we will have faculty evaluations this spring, unless something very unexpected arises. But, we must ask for them or else this opportunity might be denied us.

The following students have submitted petitions to the SGA and Student Affairs office, and are now officially candidates seeking the respective offices.

OFFICE OF PRESIDENT: Bob Booth, Jerry Faulk, Nellie Smith
OFFICE OF VICE-PRESIDENT: George Brown, Steve Long
OFFICE OF SEC.-TREAS.: Philip Bielamowicz, Nancy Young

CAMPUS SATIRE:
Wake Up I Think We’re Being Robbed

I fell it only fair to tell you fellow victims that we have been robbed. Not only have we been robbed we are still playing victim. I think it’s time someone took a stand. Since everyone is still remaining seated I guess I’ll be the one.

I’ll give you an example that proves we’re being taken. One day I dashed down the hall, around the corner, and having a carbonated fit came face to face with that thing that I laughingly refer to as a Coke machine. I slapped my quarter in, only to watch a whole lot of nothing happen. So, I spent a very patient 30 seconds explaining to the machine that he had just devoured my last quarter. When I got no reaction, I took a deep breath and pleaded with the machine, explaining that it must have must only give me a free drink but, return my quarter. Because, I had donated half my annual income to the other drink machine on the other side of the building which also does not work. Still getting no reaction, I lost all common sense compose and, proceeded to kick the devil out of the change pocket. Then, as I began to regain composure, I started to act like the mature adult that we all know I am. I approached it on the same level using tactics like that of a fellow drink machine. As I knelt, making threatening remarks into the change slot, a helpful janitor came along and explained the machine was out or order. My day was make.

I left a note on the machine about the amount that it had taken. But, when the vendor came did he return the money? NOOOOOoooooo. Whyyyyyyyyyy? He probably figures that the money has been in the change box so long that it’s started gaining interest. In conclusion, I’d like to say that Mr. Coke is a carbonated sniviling DRIP!

TEC CHALLENGES COASTAL TO A STREAKING CONTEST

(This is a duplicate of the challenge received by The Chanticleer.)

The students of Coastal Carolina Center (sometimes called turkey, but also are in reality chickens.) are hereby challenged to the streaking championship of the Horry County Higher Education System.

We realize you do not qualify in the higher education department, but we are willing to make an exception due to lack of competitors. Since you stated in your last challenge to the H-G TEC that you could beat us in any form of competition we are gonna call your bluff or make you show your ass.

TERMS: Face mask and shoes are allowed, nothing else. Streakers from Coastal must circle TEC vice-versa during school hours (between 8 and 2:30).

Applications for 1974 Exploration Scholarship Program may be obtained from the Financial Aid Office. Winners will take part in research expeditions related to their career choices in North America and abroad during the summer. Completed applications must be submitted by March 15.

Opinions expressed in THE CHANTICLEER are mainly those of the staff with exception to guest editorialists and Letters to the Editor. Comment and participation welcome.)

LET ME INTRODUCE YOU TO

Paul Kasack. He is a Freshman this semester, and, like most Freshmen, he hasn't decided on any particular field of study. Presently, he is a "proposed" Biology major, but is also interested in the field of liberal arts, particularly Philosophy.

Paul is very active on campus. He is a member of the History Club, Student Christian Movement, and is a columnist for The Chanticleer. He is working in the library as a student assistant. Paul says that he enjoys the contact with people. He said, "I meet a lot of people, and that makes my job quite interesting."

Off Campus, Paul enjoys swimming, ballooning, basketball, boating, and talking with People. I asked Paul if he thought that Nixon should be impeached. He said, "No." He said that he approves of Nixon's accomplishments. Paul also stated the movement to impeach Nixon is part of a conspiracy. There is no evidence that a crime has been committed, furthermore there is no definition of an impeachable offense. Paul feels that impeachment would cause chaos to undermine this Nation.

A certain group of hard-working and dedicated people here at Coastal are to be commended for another job well done. I am referring to the director, cast, and crew of "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest."

Sets, sound, make-up and lights enhanced the talent and performances of the cast. Super make-up jobs were done on Chief Brom and Col Matterson. The "nurses station" was very believable.

Character portrayals were excellent on behalf of all. But my favorites were Harding (Bruno Gujer) & Chief Brom (Jeff Robertson). These two became their characters, and were not their real selves on stage. The others were good, too, but it seemed that their character development was not as thorough.

I think that this was the best theatre production that Coastal has done. I think that you all deserve a big hand. Congratulations.

KOASTAL KLOWNS

By Marion Elliott

The Coastal Carolina Chanticleers were eliminated from the District 20 playoffs of the Southern Regionals on March 1 to the tune of 87-83. Coastal led with 14:10 in the game 47-42. A Durham rally saw Coastal fall behind 61-60 at the 10:15 mark. The teams traded basket for the next eight minutes with the lead changing hand several times. Coastal them experienced a cold streak from the floor allowing Durham to stake a lead of 83 to 76, with 1:52 remaining. Robert Griffin scored 5 unanswered points, and Durwood Owens tipped in a rebound to knot the score to 83 with only 29 seconds. After several fouls, Coastal had possession with 24 seconds left and trailing 84-83. Clutch pressure defense by Durham caused a Chanticleer turnover on an inbound play, and Durham canned in with a 3 point play to claim the victory 87-83.

Coastal rode a 12 point the first half performance by Lonnie Chestnut to lead at halftime 39-37. Robert Griffin led the Chants with 27 points. Chestnut finished with 16 points.
