NON-RESIDENT FEES DROPPED IN GRADUATE PROGRAM

USC-Coastal Carolina College has dropped its non-resident tuition fees in the college's Graduate Regional Studies Program. Out-of-state residents, like citizens of neighboring North Carolina, will now pay the same tuition as South Carolina residents who take graduate courses at Coastal Carolina College. Coastal is offering graduate courses in 25 subjects this spring.

CONTINUING EDUCATION COURSES FREE TO FACULTY AND STAFF

You can improved your tennis backhand, learn how to start a new business, trace your family roots, perfect your square dancing and develop the skills of umpiring with courses offered this January in the Continuing Education program at USC-Coastal Carolina College.

Twenty-six special non-credit courses will be taught at Coastal beginning January 21. Most of the courses are designed for people who just want to pick up a new skill or learn a new hobby. Most of the courses are taught in the evenings and college officials say there's something offered for almost everyone.

Among the non-credit courses offered in Coastal's spring semester are Beginning, Intermediate and Advanced Tennis; Beginning, Intermediate Bridge; a course on how to stop smoking; courses in oil painting, drawing and watercoloring; Nutrition and Weight Control; a how-to course in tracing family histories; Shorthand; Ballet; Women's Career; Umpiring Softball and Baseball; Coaching Baseball and Softball; Folk and Square Dancing; Preparation for SAT and NTE; Weight Training; Cold Water Survival, Coaching Tennis and a course which profiles the current presidential candidates. All courses are free to faculty and staff.
