Trustees name Ingle first president of Coastal Carolina University

Legislation establishing Coastal Carolina University as an independent, state-supported institution became effective July 1, 1993. The legislation ends the institution's 34-year affiliation with the University of South Carolina System.

The board of trustees for the newly established university named Ronald R. Ingle president during the group's first meeting, held July 1 on the Coastal Carolina campus. Ingle has been interim chancellor of Coastal Carolina College since April 1992, after serving as vice chancellor for academic affairs at Coastal Carolina since August 1988.

Before coming to Coastal Carolina, Ingle served as assistant dean of the University of South Carolina's former College of General Studies and later served as associate dean of the College of Applied Professional Science. He has also worked at The Ohio State University, Kennesaw College in Marietta, Ga., and South Georgia College in Douglas, Ga. He was a captain in the U.S. Army from 1964 to 1966.

Ingle earned a bachelor's degree in English from Wofford College in 1962, a master's degree in higher education administration from Florida State University in 1963, and a Ph.D. in psychology from The Ohio State University in 1972.

James J. Johnson of Conway was elected chair of the board of trustees. He is vice president and treasurer of Dargan Construction Company, Inc. Johnson attended Coastal Carolina College.

Cathy Brand Harvin of Summerton was elected vice chair of the board of trustees. Harvin is program manager of continuing education at Central Carolina Technical College. She earned a bachelor's degree from the University of South Carolina in 1975.

McCormick named admissions director

Timothy J. McCormick has been appointed Director of Admissions at Coastal Carolina University, effective June 15.

McCormick has 13 years of higher education experience in the areas of admissions and student recruitment.

He received a bachelor's degree in economics from The Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C. in 1977. For three years, he served as admissions counselor and head baseball coach at Catholic University.

His 10-year career at Capitol College in Laurel, Md. began in 1981 as the assistant director of admissions. Two years later he was promoted to director of admissions and financial aid and was named vice president for student services in 1985 where he remained until 1991.

McCormick initiated several enrollment management programs during his 13-year career in higher education, realizing a 31 percent increase in enrollment and a 73 percent growth in new student enrollment at Capitol College.

McCormick received his master's degree of administrative science/management from The Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, Md. in 1987. ~ attorney, was elected secretary of the board of trustees. Burroughs earned a bachelor's degree from Coastal Carolina College in 1984 and a juris doctor degree from the University of South Carolina School of Law in 1987.

The governor's designee to the board of trustees is Dr. R. Cathcart Smith, a retired physician. An original founder of Coastal Carolina College, Smith was also the first president of Coastal Educational Foundation, Inc., and was chair of the South Carolina Commission on Higher Education. Smith is a graduate of The Citadel and Duke Medical University. Smith lives in Murrells Inlet.

Other members of the board of trustees are: Clark Parker of Myrtle Beach, Oran Smith of Columbia, James Kane of Columbia, Payne "Hank" Barnette Jr. of Greenwood, William Lyles Jr. of Anderson, Elaine Marks of Spartanburg, Keith Smith of Greer, Juli Streater Powers of Clio, Robert Brown of Camden, Fred DuBard Jr. of Florence, Dean Hudson of Conway, and E. Craig Wall Jr. of Conway.

The General Assembly elected 15 of the 16 seats of the board of trustees. In addition to the appointment of his designee, the governor will make an at-large appointment to the board. ~

Live graduate-level course instruction offered in social work

A live graduate-level course in social work will be taught for the first time this fall at Coastal. Social Work 769 - Interdisciplinary Perspective on Child Abuse and Neglect - is offered through USC Graduate and Regional Studies.

Previously, all graduate-level social work courses were taught via closed-circuit television, through ETV or on videotape, providing an alternative to traditional classroom instruction.

Nancy Pryce-Weinstein, a licensed independent social worker and doctoral candidate in the College of Social Work at the University of South Carolina, will teach the course which examines child abuse and neglect from several perspectives including social work, medicine, psychology, education, nursing and law enforcement. The course fulfills requirements in the areas of social work, criminal justice, nursing and education.

Coastal Carolina University offers three master's degree education programs in early childhood, elementary, and secondary education.

Graduate courses are offered at Coastal through USC Graduate Regional Studies in English, government, history, librarianship, mathematics, psychology, public health administration, social work, and several other disciplines. USC also offers courses at Coastal leading to the Professional MBA and master of engineering degrees.

Registration continues through Tuesday, Aug. 24, weekdays from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. in GCEC 006.

For more information about registration or eligibility requirements, contact Helen Hood. ~

Information from Law Enforcement and Safety Office

Coastal's Law Enforcement and Safety Office has received the he following information from FBI Director William S. Sessions.

"On June 22, 1993, a professor employed by the University of California at San Francisco (UCSD) opened a package which had been sent to his residence in the U. S. Mail. The package exploded when opened, causing severe injuries.

On June 24, 1993, a professor employed by Yale University, New Haven, Connecticut, was severely injured in an explosion while opening mail at his office located on the Yale University campus.

The FBI is working with the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms, the U.S. Postal Inspectors, and the local law enforcement agencies in the investigation of both incidents.

The FBI urges all university personnel to be alert to all packages and mail received, both at their employment and at their residences. If any unusual or suspect items are received, or if you have any information concerning the explosive devices which have already been received, please immediately call your local FBI field office."

For more information, call the Law Enforcement and Safety Office. ~

Wetland laws, regulations topic of special course

The Center for Marine and Wetland Studies sponsored a course designed to provide an in-depth understanding of wetland laws and regulations at the federal and state levels. "Wetlands: Federal and State Laws and Regulations" was held Thursday, July 15 through Saturday, July 17.

Participants were familiarized with Section 404 of the Clean Water Act and pertinent provisions of the South Carolina Coastal Zone Management Act. Topics included jurisdictions, regulated activities, exemptions, permitting, and mitigation.

Wetland consultant Paul Booth, Ph.D., and environmental attorney William Want were course instructors.

Additional wetland issues courses are offered through Coastal's Center for Marine and Wetland Studies, which include Basic Wetland Delineation; Advanced Wetland Delineation; and Wetland Plant Identification.

For information on upcoming wetland issues courses, contact Steve Berkowitz.

History professor's book wins praise

When Roy Talbert, wrote Negative Intelligence: The Army and the American Left, he confesses that he was worried about who would like it the least, the Left or the Right.

Talbert's book is about how the U.S. Army harassed and spied on war registers, activists of all kinds, labor leaders, and African Americans from World War I to World War II.

"The Army's role in domestic affairs is a major policy issue that still has not been firmly decided," Talbert said, "and I was afraid that the Left would think I was too easy on the Army and the Right would think I was too hard on the establishment."

Talbert says he was never afraid the scholarly community would not appreciate his work. "I knew the research was sound, the writing at least acceptable, and the tone balanced." So it was no surprise to him that the Journal of American History said, "Talbert's Negative Intelligence represents first-rate scholarship on a topic that ought to be getting more attention in the textbooks and lecture halls." That was followed by a positive article in the American Historical Review applauding his "fresh detail and documentation" and called it a "valuable book."

Talbert is used to getting such praise from his fellow historians, but what he was interested in was how the wider community, generally more political, would react. The first news came in January when he was notified that the Gustaves Myers Center for the Study of Human Rights had selected his book for a Myers Award for outstanding writing about prejudice in the United States. The Myers Center is sponsored by the B'nai B'rith, the NAACP, the Unitarian Universalist Association, and other organizations that are seldom considered to be on the Right.

"When I got that award," Talbert said, "I figured I would definitely be seen as a Leftist critic of the military. And that was not my purpose at all; I had tried to show several social crises that led the Army to go to such extremes."

His fears were soon allayed, however, when a review appeared in The Stars and Stripes. Far from condemning his book, that appraisal was the most enthusiastic of all he received. The review called Talbert "a very thorough, judicious, and responsible historian."

"He has written," The Stars and Stripes continued, "a book which is 'must reading' not only for counterintelligence officers, commissioned and noncommissioned, but also for any and all officers, military and naval, who aspired to high command. This also applies to those civilians in the military establishment in policy-making positions in the field of civil liberties." The review ended by expressing the hope that "the Pentagon buys many copies of this book and really makes it 'must reading.'"

Talbert said, "For the scholar, this is the best of both worlds: praise from the Left and the Right. I could not have hoped for a better sign of my objectivity. It would have been OK if both sides hated it, but it's really great that liberals and conservatives alike find it a contribution."

Talbert is currently in residence at the Institute for Southern Studies at the University of South Carolina in Columbia, where he is writing a biography of Revolutionary war hero Peter Horry. He earned a master's degree in 1967 and a Ph.D. in 1971, both in history from Vanderbilt University, and a bachelor's degree in history from Furman University in 1965. He has been a member of the Coastal Carolina faculty since 1979.

Transportation Services needs your assistance

The Transportation Services Department requires all faculty, staff, and students to accurately record the actual mileage used on the Vehicle Reservation Request form provided when driving state vehicles assigned to Coastal Carolina University.

Every mile the state vehicles are driven must be recorded and unless this information is completed, the driver's department may be over-charged.

Mileage must be recorded before the vehicle leaves the motor pool parking lot and again when the vehicle is returned.

When picking-up a reserved vehicle, make sure you have a pen or pencil to complete the mileage information.

Vehicle reservation will continue to be accepted by telephone; however, the transaction is complete only when the Vehicle Reservation Request form is submitted.

If additional information or Vehicle Reservation Request forms are needed, call extension 2172 or 2153.

Jazz duo performs at Coastal's Jazz Cafe

Vocalist Stephanie Nakasian and pianist Hod O'Brien will perform during Coastal's Jazz Cafe, Thursday, August 19 at 5 p.m. in the Little Theater. The jazz duo are recipients of the First Annual Dizzy Gillespie Award for Outstanding Performance, presented at the S.C. Jazz Festival held last year in Myrtle Beach. Tickets are $10; $5 for students.

Nakasian and O'Brien began collaborating in 1980 and since then have regularly appeared at clubs, festivals, hotels, and resorts on the East coast and in Europe. Their many critically acclaimed performances also include the Northsea Jazz Festival in Holland, the Kool Jazz Festival in New York, and the Wolf Trap Center in Washington, D.C. As a duo, Nakasian and O'Brien cut the first of their many recordings together in 1985.

Nakasian, whose voice has been likened to that of Ella Fitzgerald, previously performed with the Grammeenominated group Jon Hendricks and Company.

According to The New York Post, O'Brien's "quick-silver styling has been said to enhance every number with a dazzling thrust of harmonic progressions." O'Brien previously performed with several ensembles including the Oscar Pettiford Quintet.

For tickets or more information, call the Wheelwright Box Office, Monday through Friday, from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.
