Coastal professor's book published

Coastal Carolina University professor Richard Oliver Collin's novel entitled Contessa has recently been published and released nationally.

The book was published by St. Martin's Press, one of the six largest presses in America.

Contessa has been defined as a historical novel in the sense that it takes the reader through the early years of the 20th century as Italy approaches World War I and then fascism. According to one critic, Collin's theme has always been improbable passion, and in Contessa, he "gives us a tangled, fascinating love story."

Rosaria Lombardi, a young peasant woman who is a political radical and feminist before her time, enters into a forbidden love affair with Achille Leone, an intellectual aristocrat and the oldest son of one of Italy's founding fathers. When Rosaria's Socialist Party drives Italy toward revolution and civil war, the two find themselves enemies who are in love.

Collin describes his novel as a conflict between very violent politics and gentle love. Alice Joyce of Booklist calls it a sweeping epic. Robert MacNeil of the PBS MacNeil / Lehrer Newshour said, "It has every ingredient for a great best-seller: fast action, never a dull moment, strong, passionate and lusty characters, and a fascinating slant on our momentous century from a fresh angle ... a natural for a rollicking TV miniseries ... a great success!"

A former army intelligence officer who has lived and traveled in many parts of the world, Collin is the author of the critically-acclaimed novels Imbroglia and Winter of Fire. He also has written a series of scholarly books and articles on terrorism and political violence. His next novel, The Man with Many Names will be published by St. Martin's Press next year.

Italy is not a foreign topic for Collin, who spent five years as chief of the collection branch of the U.S. Defense

Coastal Carolina People

Dennis Wiseman has been appointed by State Superintendent of Education Barbara Nielsen to serve on the Middle Level Education/Certification Advisory Committee. The charge of the committee is to study present middle level certification policy in place nationally and compare these requirements with identified needs in South Carolina. The committee will recommend to the South Carolina Board of Education certification requirements for teachers in the middle grades to better meet the needs of children at this level.

The Coastal Carolina Jazz Ensemble, under the directions of Pat Alexander, performed on Mother's Day at Brookgreen Gardens.
