St. Petersburg Ballet performance begins cultural season

To open Coastal's 1995-1996 Wheelwright Series, Russia's acclaimed St. Petersburg Ballet will perform with renowned prima ballerina assoluta Galina Mezentseva, former principal of the Kirov Ballet. The group will perform Tuesday, Sept. 5 at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $10, $5 for students. Faculty and staff with a Wheelwright Series season pass may request two complimentary tickets to the performance.

Having toured more than 50 countries worldwide with great success, the St. Petersburg Ballet has become one of Russia's most international ensembles and is one of only a few that has been given the official title of State Academic Ballet.

The St. Petersburg Ballet was founded in 1966 under the artistic direction of former Kirov Ballet principal, Peter Gusev. In 1969, he was succeeded by prominent choreographer Leonid Jacobson, whose Choreographic Miniatures became a staple of the St. Petersburg repertoire.

In 1976, following Jacobson's death, Askold Madarov of the Kirov Ballet was named artistic director of the St. Petersburg Ballet. Throughout Makarov's tenure, more than 17 choreographers have created a repertoire that includes more than 50 one-act and full-length ballets, including the Choreographic Miniatures and classical productions such as Swan Lake, Giselle and Chopiniana.

Galina Mezentseva, one of Russia's most accomplished ballerinas, will perform as the guest prima ballerina with the St. Petersburg Ballet. Upon graduating from Vaganova Ballet Academy in St. Petersburg with the highest honors in 1971, Mezentseva moved directly into the principal ballerina position with the Kirov Ballet. In 1990, she was named principal ballerina with the Scottish Ballet and toured with that company throughout the United Kingdom, Japan, Canada and the former Soviet Union. ♦

Final preparations for arrival of new students

Talbert to write history of Coastal Carolina University

Coastal Carolina University's more than 4,500 students pursue baccalaureate in more than 28 fields of study and master's degree programs in education. The university is located 10 miles west of Myrtle Beach, S.C.

But really, what is Coastal Carolina University? Where did it come from and how long ago? How did Coastal become the institution of higher learning that it is today?

It was questions like these and the fact that Coastal is such a significant part of the history of Horry and Georgetown counties that prompted the university and the Horry County Higher Education Commission to ask history professor Roy Talbert to author a written history of the university.

Expected to be released in 1998, the chronicle will begin with an overview of education in Horry and surrounding counties before the university's founding in 1954 and continue through its break from the University of South Carolina in 1993. Other key points of history will include the founding of the college; becoming the first USC regional campus; the move to four-year status; and the institution under the leadership of James Holderman, who retired amid the controversy that he spent too lavishly on fund-raising trips and was involved in a contentious scholarship program.

According to Talbert, the first 20 years of Coastal's existence was a constant struggle for survival. "It's very interesting to see that we started with great optimism for a higher education program, but the attitude went from success to fear after Coastal split from the College of Charleston, and then to great optimism again after Coastal joined the USC system," Talbert said.

Talbert's research assistant is Terry Morris, who earned a master's degree in library science from USC in 1994 and a bachelor's degree in history from Coastal in 1993. According to Talbert, most of Morris' job will involve researching the history of Coastal by looking through Coastal, USC and College of Charleston archives, and through old newspapers such as The Field.

Talbert has written several books including: No Greater Legacy: The Centennial History of the Willcox Law Firm; FDR's Utopian: Arthur Morgan of the TVA and Negative Intelligence: The Army and the American Left. Talbert is currently writing a biography of Revolutionary War hero Peter Horry.

Talbert joined the Coastal faculty in 1979, where he teaches early 20th century history and is in the first year of his second three-year term as chair of the history department. He earned a Ph.D. in 1971 and a master's degree in 1967, both in history, from Vanderbilt University and a bachelor's degree in history from Furman University in 1965.

Anyone who has information or materials that relate to the early history of Coastal is encouraged to call Talbert at extension 2622. ♦

The book won the National University Press Book Award for the best book in the humanities published by a university press in 1987.

Joyner's Before Freedom Came was cited by the American Library Association for inclusion on its 1992 Notable Books List, one of only 13 works of nonfiction nationwide and the only book on the list published by a university press in 1987.

Joyner joined the Coastal faculty in 1988 where he is Burroughs Distinguished Professor of Southern History and Culture and director of the Waccamaw Center for Cultural and Historical Studies.
