Former Mideast hostage Terry Anderson to speak at Coastal

Former Mideast hostage and Associated Press Bureau Chief Terry Anderson will speak in Wheelwright Auditorium on Thursday, Feb. 1 at 7:30 p.m. as part of the Kimbel Distinguished Lecturer Series. The presentation, Making a Difference: An Evening with Terry Anderson, is free and open to the public.

Anderson was covering the dangerous streets of Beirut, Lebanon, as chief Middle East correspondent for the AP on March 16, 1985, when he was kidnapped at gunpoint by Shiite Muslims. He joined six other Americans and Britons who were his fellow hostages for almost seven years of hard time – blindfolded, gagged, beaten and continually transported to different locations to thwart rescue attempts.

For 2,545 days, Anderson survived the most adverse conditions imaginable. After being freed in 1992, fellow hostage Thomas Sutherland said, "Without Terry Anderson, I couldn't have made it for six and a half years." By the time he was released, Anderson had demonstrated to the world the remarkable potential of the human spirit to triumph over adversity.

Anderson focuses on the individual's ability to make a concrete difference in the world. He translates his gripping experience into an exploration of the empowerment of change and the mental and emotional tools that turn negatives into positives. Displaying a warmth and sincerity that have made him one of the most requested speakers in the nation, Anderson urges audiences to measure their individual hidden strengths. "I try not to lecture or give lessons. In anyone's life, there are changes you must learn to cope with whether or not you like them," he said

Since his release, Anderson has emerged as an articulate advocate of human rights and grassroots change. His work has ranged from the building of elementary schools in war torn sections of Vietnam to developing an organization for political change in his home state of New York.

Anderson is the author of the national best seller, Den of Lions. He is currently working on a sequel. His nationally syndicated newspaper column has received praise for offering not just criticism, but also solutions to a wide variety of the nation's problems.

Born October 27, 1947, in Lorain, Ohio, Anderson was raised in Batavia, N.Y. He earned a bachelor's degree in political science from Iowa State University in 1974. He served in the Marines for six years, stationed in Vietnam and Japan. He covered the Far East and South Africa for the AP before being assigned to their Beirut bureau. He lives in a suburb of New York City with his wife and daughter.

Prize-winning authors to make presentations at writing conference

The Waccamaw Center for Historical and Cultural Studies of Coastal Carolina University will host a writers conference and symposium, Southern Writers of Fact and Fiction, Friday, Jan. 26 and Saturday, Jan. 27 in the Wall Auditorium. The conference is for anyone interested in good writing. The conference will follow a plenary session format and is free and open to the public.

Charles Joyner, Coastal Carolina University
Burroughs Distinguished Professor of Southern History and Culture and director of the Waccamaw Center for Cultural and Historical Studies, is conference organizer. Joyner said the conference includes prize-winning writers of fiction, poetry, history and social commentary. "Some are Southerners by birth, while others have become Southerners by choice," Joyner said. "Some live and work in the South,"
he added, "others live and work outside the region."

Featured participants are novelists William Baldwin, Ellen Douglas, Josephine Humphreys, William Styron and Dori Sanders; poets Nikki Finney and Paul Rice; essayists Franklin Burroughs and John Shelton Reed; and historians Drew Gilpin Faust, Barbara Jeanne Fields, David Hackett Fischer, Winthrop D. Jordan, William McFeely, Theodore Rosengarten, C. Vann Woodward and Bertram Wyatt-Brown.

In addition to readings by the writers, the conference will feature presentations and panels on topics such as "Southern Writing in the Nineties," "Writing the Truth in History, Poetry and Fiction," "Expatriation and Southern Writing," and "Depression and Creativity in Southern Writing."

Participants are:

• William Baldwin is winner of the Lillian Smith Award of the Southern Regional Council for his first novel, The Hard-to-Catch Mercy. His new novel, The Fennel Family Papers, is scheduled for publication in January 1996 and will be excerpted in Vanity Fair and Southern Living. He lives with his family in McClellanville.

• Franklin Burroughs grew up in Conway and now lives with his wife and children in Maine, where he teaches English at Bowdoin College. His essays have appeared in journals such as Georgia Review and Kenyon Review and have won the coveted Pushcart Prize. His writing has appeared in Best American Essays in 1987 and in 1989. Publishers Weekly called his Horry and the Waccamaw, published in paperback as The River Home, "a ignal of a book."

• Ellen Douglas of Jackson, Miss., has been praised by Anne Tyler for her "firm, distinctive, intensely personal voice." The Washington Post says of her newest novel, A Lifetime Burning, "At a stage in her life and career when most American novelists are content to repeat themselves, Ellen Douglas has struck boldly into new territory and come back from it with her finest novel." She is author of six novels and a collection of short stories.

• Drew Gilpin Faust, according to historian Steven Hahn, "writes about the South with affectionate understanding, but always with a sharp, critical eye." Winner of the Charles S. Sydnor Award, the Book Award of the Society of Historians of the Early American Republic, and the Jules F. Landry Award, Faust has been called "the leading intellectual and cultural historian of the Old South" by Charles Joyner. She is Annenberg Professor of History at the University of Pennsylvania.

• Barbara Jeanne Fields is a MacArthur Fellow and history professor at Columbia University. She was a featured commentator in Ken Burns' television series, The Civil War. She is author of Slavery and Freedom on the Middle Ground. Her current book project is a study of the writing of Southern History.

• Nikki Finney was born in Conway and was educated at Talladega College in Alabama. She is author of two books of poetry, On Wings Made of Gauze, and her most recent, Rice. Renowned poet Nikki Giovanni said Finney's voice in Rice "is stronger, clearer and [gentler] than ever." One of her poems was read upon the investiture of her father, Ernest A. Finney Jr., as the first African American chief justice of the South Carolina Supreme Court. Finney teaches creative writing at the University of Kentucky.

• David Hackett Fischer has been called "this generation's most gifted scholar" by Bertram Wyatt-Brown. Author of the highly acclaimed Albion's Seed, Growing Old in America, and Paul Revere's Ride, Fischer has won many awards for scholarship and teaching, including the Carnegie Prize. Fischer is Warren Professor of History at Brandeis University in Waltham, Mass. He also has taught at Harvard and Oxford universities.

• Josephine Humphreys has received a Guggenheim Award and the Lyndhurst Prize. She is the author of Dreams of Sleep, which won the Ernest Hemingway Award; Rich in Love, which the San Francisco Chronicle called "one of the warmest and wisest novels published [in 1987];" and The Fireman's Fair. Rich in Love was made into a Metro Goldwyn Mayer motion picture starring Albert Finney, Jill Clayburgh, Kyle MacLachlan and Ethan Hawke. Humphreys lives with her family on Sullivan's Island.

• Winthrop D. Jordan, according to Southern Cultures, is "one of the finest craftsmen of the English language in the historical profession." His first book, White Over Black, was winner of the Bancroft Prize, the Ralph Waldo Emerson Award, the National Book Award, and the Francis Parkman Prize. His most recent book, Tumult and Shouting at Second Creek, was winner of the Jules F. Landry Prize and the National University Press Book Award. Jordan is a professor of history and Afro-American Studies at the University of Mississippi.

• Charles Joyner is winner of the National University Press Book Award, the Chicago Folklore Prize, the Ethel Fortner Writer and Community Award, "in recognition of major contributions to the craft of writing," and the Governor's Award for Lifetime Achievement in the Humanities. He is author or editor of five books and more than 60 articles and essays, including Down by the Riverside, which historian George Rawick called "the finest work ever written on American slavery." He is co-author, with Drew Gilpin Faust and others, of Before Freedom Came: African-American Life and Labor in the Antebellum South, which was chosen by the American Library Association for its 1992 Notable Books List.

• William S. McFeely is a winner of the Pulitzer Prize for Biography, a Guggenheim Fellowship, and a Bellagio Writing Fellowship from the Rockefeller Foundation. He is author of Grant: A Biography, Yankee Stepfather: General O.O. Howard and the Freedmen, Frederick Douglass, and his latest book, Sapelo's People. He is Richard B. Russell Professor of History at the University of Georgia and has taught at Yale University and Mount Holyoke College in Massachusetts.

• John Shelton Reed has been exploring cultural differences between the North and South for nearly two decades. "A writer this funny is dangerous," read a review in the Raleigh News and Observer. Reed is the author of eight books, such as Southern Folk and Surveying the South. He is William Rand Kenan Professor of Sociology and Director of the Institute for Research in Social Science at the University of North Carolina at Chapel

• Paul Rice is a Poet-in-Residence at Coastal Carolina University. In 1995, he received a poetry fellowship from the South Carolina Arts Commission. He has received numerous awards for his poetry such as the 1988 Southern Literary Festival Poetry Prize and the 1993 Amon Liner Award. He has read his poetry at the Folger Shakespeare Theater in Washington, D.C. and the Spoleto Sundowner Poetry Series Festival. Rice specializes in contemporary British and American poetry, poetic theory and creative writing. He also is a country music songwriter and guitarist.

• Theodore Rosengarten is a MacArthur Fellow and winner of the Lyndhurst Prize. He is author of All God's Dangers: The Life of Nate Shaw, which received the National Book Award. He also wrote Tombee: Portrait of a Cotton Planter, which won the National Book Critics Circle Award. Rosengarten lives with his wife and two sons in McClellanville.

• Dori Sanders is the author of three books: Clover, Her Own Place, and her latest best seller, Dori Sanders' Country Cooking: Recipes and Stories from the Family Farmstand. According to a New York Times book review, Clover "is very much a genuine item." The Dallas Morning News calls Her Own Place "a fresh wind above the stale cynicism that spoils so much of contemporary literature." Sanders grew up in York County, S.C., where she lives. Sanders and her family raise peaches on one of the oldest African American-owned farms in the country. In demand as a gifted public speaker, Sanders does most of her writing in the winter and reserves the growing season for work on the family farm and at Sanders' Peach Shed, her family's open-air produce stand.

• William Styron is a noted novelist who has written many books including the Pulitzer Prize-winning Sophie's Choice. Several Styron books include Confessions of Nat Turner, Lie Down in Darkness, The Long March, and Set This House on Fire.

• C. Vann Woodward, Sterling Professor of History Emeritus at Yale University, is one of America's foremost living historians, according to Charles Joyner. His books have won every major history award — including the Pulitzer, Bancroft, and Parkman prizes. He has served as president of the American Historical Association, the Organization of American Historians and the Southern Historical Association. Some of his widely influential works are Tom Watson: Agrarian Rebel, Origins of the New South, Mary Chestnut's Civil War and The Strange Career of Jim Crow.

• Bertram Wyatt-Brown has been praised by Charles Joyner for "a grace of style that secures his place among the leading Southern writers, whether of fiction or fact." Some of his books are Southern Honor: Ethics and Behavior in the Old South, Yankee Saints and Southern Sinners and the highly-acclaimed The House of Percy: Honor, Melancholy, and Imagination in a Southern Family. He is Richard J. Milbauer Professor of History at the University of Florida.

For more information about the conference, call Joyner in the Department of History at extension 2891. ◆

History of Georgetown County course offered

The Office of Continuing Education will offer The History of Georgetown County, a non-credit history course taught by Pat Doyle. Classes will be held on the Georgetown campus Jan. 8 through April 25 on Monday and Thursday from 10 to 11:30 a.m. Class size is limited; early registration is recommended.

Doyle has been a member and former president of the Georgetown County Historical Society, an officer of the South Carolina Historical Society and a former chair of the Georgetown County Library Board of Trustees. The cost of the course is $65; this fee does not include field trip costs. A book for required reading, The History of Georgetown County, South Carolina, by George C. Rogers Jr., is available at the Georgetown County Library or may be purchased.

The course will include class lectures, discussions and field trips to historical Georgetown County sites.

For more information, contact the Office of Continuing Education at extension 2665.

University offers birding trip to Arizona

A birding trip to Southeastern Arizona will be offered during the spring semester. Participants will fly from Myrtle Beach to Tucson, Arizona on Saturday, April 27 and will return Saturday, May 4.

Sierra Vista will be the base site for the first three nights. Participants will explore birding sites in the Huachuca Mountains and San Pedro Riparian National Conservation Area. Western species of owls will be observed; some night trips are planned. The group will visit Patagonia-Sonoita Creek Sanctuary where Vermilion and Sulphur-bellied Flycatchers are found. An excursion to the Nature Conservancy's Ramsey Canyon Preserve will provide close views of several hummingbird species.

On the fourth day of the trip, the group will drive to Portal where they will stay for two days exploring Cave Creek Canyon. The surroundings include lush sycamore forest which is home to the Elegant Trogon and other Southwestern endemic species. As the group ascends the extensive stands of Ponderosa Pine in the High Chiricuhua Mountains, other species will appear such as the Red-faced Warbler, Western and Hepatic Tanager and Mexican Chickadee.

The group will return to Tuscon for the final two days in order to visit Saguaro National Monument where they will compare the desert scrub to the conifer forest. The Saguaro provides a shelter for Gila Woodpeckers, Cactus Wrens, Lucy's Warblers and Elf Owls. A trip to nearby Mt. Lemmon, at an elevation of more than 9,000 feet, will be the group's final birding foray before returning to Myrtle Beach.

Trip leaders are Chris Marsh, a Coastal biology professor who specializes in ornithology and wildlife ecology; and Reg Daves, an area physician, past president of the Waccamaw Audubon chapter and wildlife photographer. Marsh has led birding trips for more than 20 years.

The cost of the trip is $1,450 and includes all transportation to and from Myrtle Beach and lodging in Arizona. For those age 65 and above, the cost of the trip is $1,400. Fees include picnic lunches, entrance fees to parks and natural areas and guide service. Trip fees are based upon double occupancy and are subject to unexpected airfare increases.

To register for the trip, a $300 deposit is required by Feb. 2; the remaining $1,150 is due by Feb. 29. For more information, contact Marsh at extension 2207 or 347-0708, or Daves at 347-6222. ◆
