COLLEGE OFFERS MARINE SCIENCE ON TV

"Oceans and Man," a non-majors marine science course, is being offered via television this semester through USC and Coastal Carolina. The series, which airs state wide Saturday January 23 at 12:00 noon over ETV, is a non-technical introduction to the marine environment. The course goals are to investigate the marine environment in terms of basic scientific concepts; to present information in areas of intense scientific interest and concern; and to emphasize the interaction of the living world and the physical environment.

The heart of the course is a television program, "Oceanus," developed in Southern California. Dr. Richard Dame of Coastal Carolina's Marine Science program is the instructor for the course and has received a grant from the S.C., Sea Grant Consortium to develop a number of new shows to adapt the "Oceanus" series to the southeastern United States. Anyone interested in taking this course for credit should contact 347-3161 or 448-1481 ext. 265.

100% PARTICIPATION SOUGHT

IN CAMPAIGN

USC-Coastal Carolina College Chancellor Edward M. Singleton shares this message with the college faculty and staff:

The three-year combined Coastal Carolina Fund Raising Campaign is in progress and I want to commend it to you as a project which deserves your participation.

This campaign will benefit every member of the campus community. A goal has been established of 100 per cent participation. The campaign is not seeking a dollar amount as a goal, but instead, seeking to reach a goal of 100 per cent participation by faculty and staff. The Coastal Educational Foundation and the University of South Carolina Educational Foundation contribute much to all of us and this is an opportunity to assist in a worthy cause.

As of this date, 44 per cent of you have contributed to the campaign. The total dollar value thus far is $23,585. The campaign committee is working hard and is pleased with the progress thus far.

You should be contacted within the week by a member of the campaign committee who will give you details on how to participate in this important project. We are trying to finish the campaign by January 31, 1982.

Thank you for your participation in the past in this important endeavor.

CAMPUS SHUTTLE SERVICE AVAILABLE

Recognizing the need for a campus-wide delivery system about three years ago, the Library Processing Center located in the McKissick Building at Columbia, gained the responsibility of operating a shuttle service - not only for library transactions but for ALL mailings travelling between campuses.

Beginning as a weekly service, it has now expanded to deliveries twice per week. The present schedule:

MONDAY: Sumter, Coastal

TUESDAY: Aiken, Salkehatchie, Beaufort

WEDNESDAY: Medical School, Columbia Correction Institution, Coastal

THURSDAY: Lancaster, Union, Spartanburg

FRIDAY: Aiken, Salkehatchie, Beaufort

The shuttle location at Coastal is the mail room at the Maintenance Building. The service does not run on student holidays. The shuttle driver has no official back-up. In cases of his illness or vacation, the Library Processing staff staggers its schedule for the day-long journey.

Any questions concerning the shuttle service should be directed to Mary Ann Camp, director of the Library Processing Center.

FREE! FREE! FREE! WEIGHT CONTROL!

Dr. Tom Cooke and Dr. John Farrelly of Coastal's Health and Physical Recreation Department have scheduled a free personal fitness and weight control seminar on Wed., Jan. 20th, 3-4 p.m. in the Human Performance Lab (the green double-wide beside the gym). Faculty and staff members are invited to attend.

At the meeting, participants will receive instruction on the methods of an upcoming FREE program in personal fitness and weight control soon to be directed by Cooke and Farrelly. "There are two good things about it," says Tom Cooke. "It's free and you don't have to give up eating."

TEMPORARY POSITIONS AVAILABLE

USC Coastal Carolina College is receiving applications for full-time temporary secretarial positions in the Nursing Department and College Bookstore. Apply at the Personnel Office between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 5:00 p.m.

COLLEGE TO OFFER COURSE FOR CAREER WOMEN

The continuing Education Office at USC-Coastal Carolina College will offer a course for women who want to pursue new career directions, and registration is now underway.

"This course is designed to address the issues involved for women in career transition," says Dr. Sally Z. Hare, director of the college Office of Continuing Education.

"It's also designed to teach the skills needed to indentify and pursue new career directions," she says. "Those who enroll in this short-course will learn how to develop a career objective through the utilization of interest and personality testing. They'll learn how to write a resume. They'll learn how to organize a job search strategy. In short, they'll receive the knowledge they need to actively and efficiently seek a new career."

College officials say the course, which is entitled, "Women in Career Transition," will meet on Tuesday evenings, 7-9:00, Jan. 26-Feb. 23, in room 107 of the college Academic Building. Tuition for the five-session course is $30, and the course will be taught by career counselor Alicia Moseley.

Hare says the course is open to everyone. "You can register by telephone," she says. "Call the Office of Continuing Education at 448-1481 in Myrtle Beach, 347-3161 in Conway or 546-0234 in Georgetown."

EDUCATION A MINORITY PROBLEM?

"According to the Educational Press Association of America, one fact above all others underlies the current crisis in American public education. Is it inflation and the schools' need for money? Is it lack of public confidence? Is it President Reagan's policies on education? The real reason for the crisis is that only about one-third of American families have children of school age. This means that public education is now a "minority" activity. The majority do not need the schools, and see fewer reasons for supporting them."
