Coastal takes a quantum leap into cyberspace

Everywhere you look lately, it seems that the campus is full of holes. The mounds of upturned dirt and the roaring backhoes may annoy us now, but come January, when the work is scheduled to be completed, Coastal will have made a quantum leap into cyberspace.

More than 4,000 feet of fiber optic cable is being laid underground in the present phase of upgrading the university's computer system, according to Marvin Marozas, director of Information Technology Services (ITS). "We're replacing the old arcnet, or coax-based network, with fiber optics," he said. "By January, Coastal students, faculty and staff will be able to access all the various computer systems on campus – the labs, the library, e-mail – through a single network," he said.

When the switch "from arcnet to ethernet" is completed, Marozas says that campus computer users will see a fourfold increase in access and speed. The new residence halls also have been wired for the new system so that students will have direct access to labs and databases in the library. Through a joint program with Horry Telephone Cooperative, attractive dial-up rates providing access to the Internet and Coastal's academic network will be available to off campus students.

"Another exciting aspect of the upgrade is that not only will it improve links around the campus, but it provides the infrastructure for linkage opportunities to many local networks around the county, such as the Horry County School District, and it connects us to the rest of the vast Internet world," said Marozas.

The upgraded system also will allow the university to make fuller use of its web page, which was initiated last spring. "The web page links all academic, athletic and student information, and provides links to events on and off campus," said Marozas. Since May 1, 1996, Coastal's web page "has received more than 6,000 visits from the Internet world." The page can be accessed at HTTP://www.coastal.edu.

When Marozas joined the Coastal staff in 1984, the institution's primary computer was a large main frame remotely accessed on the Columbia USC campus. "There were fewer than 50 personal computers on campus then," he said. "Now there are more than 800. Approximately 500 of those are on the network now and the upgrade will take care of the remainder."

Keeping up with technological changes in communications is a process that never stops, according to Marozas. "If you stand still you get behind," he said. "This new technology represents the future of communications. Today, approximately 1,500 Coastal students have accounts on the campus network.

The day is coming when all students will automatically get a computer account when they get their IDs."

"I don't think that technology will ever replace the classroom," said Marozas, "but it will change the way we deliver education and increase the number of students we can reach. Every member of society in this age of information needs to learn new skills at a fast rate. Our goal is to help provide the technology for them to do that." ♦

CCU Theater to present Someone Who'll Watch Over Me

Coastal Carolina University Theater will present Irish playwright Frank McGuinness' Someone Who'll Watch Over Me, a drama about three political hostages and their struggle to endure captivity in a Beirut cellar, Thursday, Nov. 14, Friday, Nov. 15 and Saturday, Nov. 16 at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday, Nov. 17 at 3 p.m. as part of the 1996-1997 Wheelwright Series. Tickets are $8; $5 for students.

The play examines how three very different people overcome their national and personal animosities to discover individual resilience, humor and a common strength amid the gruelling life and death tensions of their imprisonment.

Jeff Gilbert, a junior biology and theater major from Florence, S.C., plays an American doctor who attempts to keep his wits through Scripture reading and physical exercise. Tony Tassa, an adjunct instructor in Coastal's Department of Theater, portrays a British scholar who mourns the death of his wife. Kevin Kane, a junior theater major from Myrtle Beach, plays an Irish journalist who devises a series of verbal games to keep despair at bay.

Director Sandi Shackelford, associate professor of theater, says that the play was based in part on the experiences of former Associated Press Bureau Chief Terry Anderson, who was held hostage for seven years in Lebanon. "To prepare for directing the play, I read Anderson's book, The Den of Lions," said Shackelford. "There are certainly many similarities between events in the play and Anderson's experiences." Anderson spoke on the Coastal campus as part of the Kimbel Distinguished Lecturer Series in February 1996.

Someone Who'll Watch Over Me received the New York Drama Critics Circle Award for best new foreign play of 1993.

Adult learning teleconference offered at Coastal

The Division of Extended Learning and Public Services will host "Adult Learning in America," a live video teleconference designed to answer key questions about how colleges and universities can best serve the needs of adult learners. The program will be held, live via satellite, Wednesday, Nov. 13 from 1:45 to 4:45 p.m. in ADM 003. The teleconference is free for Coastal faculty and staff; however, registration is required.

During the broadcast, education officials and practitioners will discuss the findings of a recent study by the College Board and how the new information can be used to help plan, market and deliver programs for adults, who now make up nearly 50 percent of all college enrollments. In addition to the panel, adult students from two- and four-year colleges will discuss what they see as the key issues in providing student-centered instructional services in today's highly competitive marketplace. The broadcast will be followed by local discussion led by representatives from Coastal Carolina University and Horry-Georgetown Technical College.

Program topics include: planning effectively for the needs of adult students; developing alternative delivery options and distance education programs to meet those needs; the benefits of offering client-centered services to attract adult students; developing marketing strategies that will result in increased enrollments of adults; incorporating new technologies into the recruitment and teaching of adult students; how and to what extent institutions should change to accommodate adults; and more.

Katsiolouides named honors program director

Marios Katsiolouides has been named the director of the University Honors Program, effective spring semester 1997.

Coastal's Honors Program seeks to bring together academically gifted students from all disciplines and develop their individual and collective potential by offering a challenging, adventurous curriculum. Honors students must maintain a 3.0 grade point average and enroll in honors courses each semester to maintain their eligibility to continue in the program. Katsiolouides succeeds Sara Sanders, associate professor of English, who served as director for the past five years of the program's 10-year history.

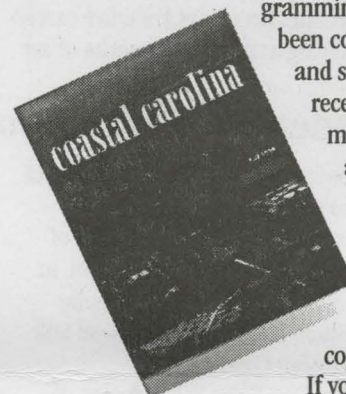

Katsiolouides, associate professor of management in the Wall School of Business, joined the Coastal faculty in 1990. He earned a Ph.D. in management in 1990 from the Wharton School of Business at the University of Pennsylvania, and master's degrees from the University of Bridgeport and the University of Pennsylvania in 1978 and 1980, respectively. He was a Fulbright Honor Exchange Scholar to the United States from 1977 to 1980. He is the author of Strategic Planning for the Non-Profit Sector: Theory and Cases, published by McGraw-Hill. Katsiolouides received the Coastal Education Foundation Distinguished Teacher Award in 1996.

Hot off the press: Coastal's new magazine

The fall 1996 edition of the Coastal Carolina University Magazine is now available. Because of a programming error which has been corrected, some faculty and staff may have received a copy of the magazine at home and another copy at work. Faculty and staff who received two copies are encouraged to share their extra copy with a friend.

If you did not receive a copy of the magazine, contact the Office of Institutional Advancement at extension 2007.

School of Education presents Distinguished Senior Award

Mary Clark, a senior early childhood education major from Sumter, S.C., received the School of Education and Graduate Studies first Distinguished Senior Award during a breakfast meeting on Oct. 25. Sponsored by the Board of Visitors of the School of Education and Graduate Studies, the award will be presented on an annual basis.

All Coastal education majors with a grade point average of 3.0 or above may compete for the award by submitting an essay on a topic chosen by the school's Board of Visitors. This year's essay topic was "Role of the Classroom Teacher in Working with the School, the Home and the Community." As the award recipient, Clark is eligible to join the Board of Visitors during her senior year. She also received $500 and a certificate as part of the award.

"The purpose of the award is to honor and recognize high academic performance and to emphasize the teacher's role in the community beyond the school," said Dennis Wiseman, dean of the School of Education and Graduate Studies. "The award also provides a link between the Board of Visitors and students in the School's undergraduate program." ♦

University hosts exhibit of paintings by Angiola Churchill

The Department of Art will host the first South Carolina exhibit of the work of acclaimed visual artist Angiola Churchill from Nov. 12 to Dec. 6 in the Gallery of the Admissions Building. An opening reception will be held Tuesday, Nov. 12 from 2 to 4 p.m. Churchill also will deliver a public lecture Wednesday, Nov. 13 at 7:30 p.m. in the Little Theater of the Admissions Building. The exhibit, the lecture and the reception are free and open to the public.

An internationally recognized artist, Churchill is known for her large-scale abstract paintings which employ a complex visual vocabulary. She maintains a studio in New York City and in Venice, Italy, and travels frequently to locations in the United States and Europe for exhibitions, lectures and special projects. Churchill also enjoys an active career as an art educator, serving as professor emerita of art at New York University. She is co-founder and co-director of the International Center for Advanced Studies in Art (ICASA), which organizes art conferences and symposia in New York, Europe and South America. Churchill developed the NYU study abroad program in Venice and has served as its director for many years.

"This exhibition brings a world-class artist and educator to the Coastal Carolina community," said Cheryl Green, gallery coordinator. "In addition to attending the public lecture, students and members of the community have the opportunity to experience a wonderful collection of abstract paintings by a distinguished visual artist," she said.

Cossack leader to speak at Coastal

Nicholas Feodoroff, a 94-year-old veteran of the 1917 Russian Revolution and president of the Russian Don Cossacks in exile, will speak as part of the 1996 Fall Forum on Monday, Nov. 18 at 7 p.m. in the Wall Auditorium. Historian and Russia scholar John Taylor will introduce Feodoroff with a brief talk on the origin of the Russian Cossacks.

A native of the Don River Valley region of Russia, Feodoroff served with the White Russian Army against the Bolsheviks from 1917 to 1920, taking part in some of the most momentous events of the 20th century before he was forced into exile in Turkey, the Greek Isles and Bulgaria. He emigrated to the United States in 1929, learned English and earned bachelor's and master's degrees in engineering from Columbia University in New York City by 1936. He taught at Manhattan College for most of his career and earned a Ph.D. in engineering from Sequoia University in California in 1956. Feodoroff lives in Sumter, S.C.

S.T.A.R. to sponsor Red Cross blood drive

S.T.A.R., Students Taking Active Responsibility, will sponsor a blood drive at Coastal on Wednesday, Nov. 20 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Student Center T.V. Room. The blood drive is open to faculty, staff, students and the general public.

The American Red Cross (ARC) is sponsoring the 1996-1997 Blood Bowl with competition between Coastal's Chanticleers and the Buccaneers of Charleston Southern University. The Chanticleers are currently leading the Buccaneers in the competition. The ARC Blood Bowl trophy will be awarded to the university that donates the most blood during the academic year.

Although the Buccaneers have retained the trophy for the past two years, the Chanticleers have almost doubled Charleston Southern's donations to date this year. Coastal Carolina has donated 46 pints; Charleston Southern has donated 25 pints. Both universities are conducting blood drives in November.

For information regarding donor eligibility, contact the American Red Cross at 236-3970 or 1-800-772-3504. For information about Coastal's Blood Drive, contact Coastal's S.T.A.R. coordinator Jason Hopkins at extension 2337 or Debbie Conner at extension 2301. ♦

Supper planned as Hispanic-American welcome

Coastal's Center for Education and Community will co-sponsor a covered-dish supper for the Hispanic-American community in Horry County on Sunday, Nov. 17 at 5 p.m. at Homewood Baptist Church, located at 3290 Hwy. 319 in Conway. The event, also sponsored by the Community Coalition of Horry County (CCHE) and Homewood Baptist Church, is free and open to the public.

"The purpose of this event is to welcome Hispanic-American families who live and work here but who have often experienced racism and xenophobia instead of a feeling of community," said Sally Hare, director of the center. CCHE member Richard Ramkinson estimates that more than 1,000 Hispanic-Americans live in Horry County.

Families are invited to bring a covered dish and members of the Hispanic-American community are planning to share some of their favorite dishes and perform a selection of music. For more information, contact Sally Hare at extension 2672. ♦

He served as chair of the Radio section of the conference.

Life Through Music, Poetry and Meditation" for the Conway Ivy Garden Club and the Jordan Nursing Center on Oct. 15. Her presentation included group singing, individual poetry writing and readings. Bluegrass comes to Wall Auditorium

Coastal Carolina University's Waccamaw Center for Cultural and Historical Studies will co-sponsor monthly concerts of the Rivertown Bluegrass Society of Conway, S.C., a nonprofit organization devoted to the preservation of bluegrass music, on the second Saturday of each month in the Wall Auditorium. The next concert is scheduled for Saturday, Dec. 14 at 6 p.m. Admission is $5 for adults; $3 for Coastal students and faculty; children age 12 and under are admitted free.

"The Waccamaw Center for Cultural and Historical Studies is pleased to co-sponsor the monthly concerts of the Rivertown Bluegrass Society," said Charles Joyner, Burroughs Distinguished Professor of Southern History and Culture and director of the center. "It is the center's mission to help support and further understanding of the various aspects of Southern culture, and bluegrass music is one of the most exciting cultural forms to come out of the South.

Wright, legal advocate; Tammy Jordan, volunteer coordinator; and Yvonne Makl, executive director

- November 20 – Women in the Media presented by Anne Monk, Coastal's director of public information
- December 4 – Managing Stress presented by Stacy Cretzmeyer, counseling services counselor at Coastal

For more information, contact Stacy Cretzmeyer at extension 2900. ♦

Our sponsorship also serves as a form of outreach from the university to bluegrass fans and their families, to make them feel welcome on our campus."

"The concert usually features four bluegrass bands," said Jennings Chestnut of Conway, one of the founding members of the society. "Each band plays for approximately one hour." According to Chestnut, one of the unique features of the event is that bluegrass enthusiasts often arrive as early as noon to engage in informal jam sessions outside the hall. "This gives fans of the music as well as amateur pickers an opportunity to enjoy the music for free," he said.

The Horry Cultural Arts Council also is a co-sponsor of the concerts.

Memberships in the Rivertown Bluegrass Society are available for $20 per year for individuals $30 per year for families. Concert admission for members is $2 per person.
