Clay Brittain to receive Jason Ammons Award

Myrtle Beach businessman Clay D. Brittain Jr. will receive the Jason Ammons Free Enterprise Award as part of the 1997 Coastal Economic Conference, scheduled for March 27 at Coastal Carolina University. Presented by the E. Craig Wall Sr. School of Business Administration and Computer Science, the conference will address emerging issues relating to the Myrtle Beach area's economy in a four-hour seminar called "Alternative Visions."

The panel for the Alternative Visions seminar include: David Fuller, senior planner for the city of Myrtle Beach; Thomas D. Lee, an Horry County property manager; Herman M. Schwartz, associate professor in the University of Virginia's Woodrow Wilson School of Government and Foreign Affairs; and Thomas C. Styers, executive director for the Myrtle Beach Air Base Redevelopment Authority. The seminar will be held in the Wall School of Business Auditorium from 1:15 to 5 p.m. For more information, call extension 2071.

The Jason Ammons Free Enterprise Award recognizes individuals who have demonstrated entrepreneurial excellence and high levels of personal achievement. Past recipients of the award include Cecil Brandon, founder of Myrtle Beach Golf Holiday; Hugh M. Chapman, chairman of NationsBank; and Gary Schaal, past president of the Professional Golf Association (PGA). The award is named in memory of Jason Ammons, a Myrtle Beach businessman. Scholarships totalling $2,000 also are awarded through the Jason Ammons Free Enterprise Project.

Clay D. Brittain Jr. is chairman of the board of Myrtle Beach National Golf Club, Inc., and is involved in many business enterprises in the Grand Strand area. Born in Winston Salem, N.C., Brittain attended the University of North Carolina from 1947 to 1950. In 1952, he leased and, with a partner, eventually purchased the Chesterfield Inn in Myrtle Beach, which he managed until 1991. In 1962, he opened the Sea Captain's House restaurant.

Brittain has been an active member of the Myrtle Beach Area Chamber of Commerce since the 1950s and has served on the board of directors of Myrtle Beach Golf Holiday and the South Carolina Golf Course Owners Association. He has served as vice president of Coastal Education Foundation, Inc., and was instrumental in the establishment of a golf management program at Coastal Carolina University.

In 1988, the University of South Carolina presented Brittain with the honorary degree of Doctor of Public Service, and in 1995 he has named an honorary founder of Coastal Carolina University. ♦

Coastal art students win in local competitions

Two Coastal Carolina University students have won local art competitions.

Tracy Floyd, a senior art studio major from Loris, S.C., won an Addy Award in the category of Student Magazine Cover for his design of an advertising piece for The Institute for Greatly Endangered and Rare Species (TIGERS). He also was awarded a Citation of Excellence for a computer illustration called "Experiencing Africa." Addys are awarded by Coastal Advertising and Marketing Professionals (CAMP), the Myrtle Beach chapter of the American Advertising Federation (AAF).

Floyd will serve a student internship with

Brandon Advertising during the summer of 1997.

Lee Jones Jr., a senior art studio major from Little River, S.C., was named first place winner in the logo design contest sponsored by the Rivertown Jazz Concert in Conway. Jones' design will be featured on T-shirts, cups and other items which will be used to promote the annual event, scheduled for May 2.

Jones' designs also have appeared on brochures, flyers and other materials of campus organizations including Leadership Challenge, the African American Association and the Homecoming Committee. Selections of his work will be on display as part of the senior art show in the art gallery of the Admissions Building April 21 to 27. ♦

Pulitzer Prize-winning historian to present lecture

Leon F. Litwack, a Pulitzer Prize-winning historian, will deliver a public lecture titled "Blues Fallin' Down Like Hail" on Tuesday, March 25 at 7 p.m. in the Wall Auditorium. The lecture is free and open to the public.

Litwack's address is based on his recently completed book on black southerners and race relations in the age of segregation. In writing this book, he draws not only on historians' usual references, such as manuscripts and published documents, but also on sources that are often ignored in scholarly research. In order to "appreciate the extraordinary variety and resourcefulness of the black response to American society," he says, he found it "necessary to turn to their musical expression — from the spirituals of slavery to the songs that came out of freedom."

Litwack says that he found the blues "indispensable," since "some of the most spirited, some of the bleakest and most anguished nonfiction in the American idiom may be found in the blues." He cites the music of Robert Johnson, Charley Patton, and Muddy Waters as evidence of "the eloquence, the spirit, the often frightening honesty of this music."

"Not only do I enjoy listening to the blues," he says, "but they are a critical source in my research and teaching." In his "History of African Americans" course, he assigns the Complete Recordings of Robert Johnson as one of the required texts.

His earlier books include North of Slavery, a study of African Americans in the free states before the Civil War; Reconstruction, co-edited with Kenneth M. Stampp; and his Pulitzer Prize winning Been In the Storm So Long, a study of the drama of emancipation that eloquently recovers "how newly freed black men and women perceived and acted on their freedom."

Litwack, a past president of the Organization of American Historians, also has been active in the production of historical documentaries for television, including To Look for America, Booker, The Life and Times of Rosie the Riveter, Ethnic Notions and Berkeley in the Sixties.

He earned his bachelor's degree, master's degree and Ph.D. from the University of California, Berkeley, where he is now Morrison Professor of History. He also has taught at the University of Wisconsin and has been a visiting professor at the University of South Carolina, the University of Mississippi and the University of Sydney, Australia.

Student to perform at Apollo Theater in N.Y.

Chris Hennigan, a senior music education major, is a member of the Conway-based vocal group Debonair which will perform at New York's famed Apollo Theater on March 16.

Debonair, which Hennigan describes as "a group of clean-cut fellows with lots of smooth, mellow harmony," were invited to audition at the Apollo in December 1996 on the strength of a videotaped performance submitted to the theater's management last year. Other members of the group are Al Hunt, Frazier Miller, Dorian Samuel and Fred Wilkes, all of Conway.

The March 16 concert will be taped before a live audience and will air on the nationally televised "Showtime at the Apollo" within one month of the taping. In its long history, the Apollo has launched the careers of many entertainers, including Ella Fitzgerald, Luther Vandross and Whitney Houston.

"Fame and fortune are not our main focus right now," said Hennigan. "We perform our own original music and we're excited to have the opportunity to share it with a national audience. We love to sing and perform. But don't get me wrong," he added, "we want to get paid."

Hennigan said he hopes that the Apollo engagement will serve as another step toward Debonair's ultimate goal: to sign with a major record label. While the group is in New York, Debonair will record some of its compositions at Bashman Productions. ♦

University of Notre Dame Concert Band to perform

The University of Notre Dame Concert Band will present a concert on Wednesday, March 12 at 7:30 p.m. in Wheelwright Auditorium. Tickets are $8, $5 for students.
