What the Butler Saw presented at Coastal

What the Butler Saw, an irreverent comedy with adult situations by British playwright Joe Orton, will be presented by Coastal Carolina University Theater on Thursday, April 24, Friday, April 25 and Saturday, April 26 at 7:30 p.m. and on Sunday, April 27 at 3 p.m. at Wheelwright Auditorium. Admission is $8, students $5.

Regarded as Orton's best play, What the Butler Saw is a modern satirical farce involving hilarious disappearances, disguises and discoveries. According to director Scott Banks, visiting professor of dramatic arts at Coastal, the play "explores the thin line between sanity and madness and forces the audience to consider the outrageous and chaotic aspects of modern life."

The cast of the play includes:

- Cathy Cook, freshman undeclared major of Fairfield, Ohio;
- Beth Johnstone, junior dramatic arts major of Myrtle Beach, S.C.;
- Jeff Gilbert, junior biology and dramatic arts major of Florence, S.C.;
- David Patterson, junior dramatic arts major of Murrells Inlet, S.C.; and
- Brian Taylor, sophomore art studio major of Darlington, S.C.

Scott Banks is chair of the Fine Arts Department at Benedict College in Columbia, S.C. and managing director of the South Carolina Shakespeare Company. He was the choreographer of Coastal Carolina University Theater's recent production of Working.

James Gross, assistant professor of dramatic arts at Coastal, designed the set and lighting for What the Butler Saw.

Cooperative Golf Management Program news conference

President Ingle and Dean Barr will host a news conference to outline details of a unique partnership for the Cooperative Golf Management Program of Coastal Carolina University with Instituto Catalan de Formacion Empresarial of Barcelona, Spain, and the Federacion

Espanola de Golf of Madrid, Spain on Friday, May 2 at 1 p.m. in the Anteroom of the Wall Board Room.

For more information, contact Anne Monk at extension 2017.

Australian mathematics educator to present lectures

Australian mathematics educator Doug Williams will present a lecture Thursday, May 1 at 8:45 a.m. in the Wall Auditorium. Williams also will present a more informal discussion on task centers and other issues in mathematics education at 1 p.m. in WALL 317. Both programs are sponsored by the School of Education and are free and open to the public.

Williams is assistant director for mathematics at the Curriculum Corporation, a semi-public institution in Melbourne, Australia. The duty of the Curriculum Corporation is to develop materials and programs for schools and teachers. Williams and Charles Lovett, the director for mathematics at the Curriculum Corporation, have spearheaded the development of "Mathematical Task Centres," a concept borrowed from England. Task centres are places where students learn to approach, handle, solve and evaluate problems and the problem solving process. The program disappeared from England, but has been resurrected because of Lovett's and Williams' success with reinvigorating the process.

Schools in the United States and throughout the world have tried to improve achievement in problem solving ability of students but with little success. President Clinton supports Goals 2000 which specifies that the United States will score high in mathematics and science. The "Third International Mathematics and Science Study" has found the United States to be slightly below average in mathematics achievement of the 41 countries in the study. Williams will explain and lead participants through the program of mathematical tasks that have developed in task centres in Australia, England and the United States.

Coastal alumni ace exam

Three Coastal Carolina University alumni recently passed the entire certification exam for certified public accountants on their first try, according to Linda Henderson, associate professor of business administration.

"Roughly 15 out of 100 people pass the entire exam the first time, according to national statistics," said Henderson. "Most candidates take the exam three to four times before passing it. Of all the candidates who passed the exam when it was given recently in Columbia, 13 percent were Coastal students."

Coastal alumni who passed the exam were Bjarni Karl Gudlaugsson, Mark Haugh and Patricia Link. Debbie Weir, who graduated from another institution but took all her accounting courses at Coastal, also passed on her first try and ranked in the top 10 percent statewide.

The CPA exam is given twice a year. Only college graduates are eligible to take the exam.
