Faculty receive "Teaching with Technology" grants

Eight faculty members have received grants as part of a pilot faculty support program designed to fund projects that will strengthen the use of technology in classroom or laboratory instruction.

Funded by the Coastal Educational Foundation, Inc., microgrants from the "Teaching with Technology" program are awarded and administered through the Office of the Provost. All full-time tenured and tenure-track faculty and instructors were invited to submit proposals in early January. Seventeen grant proposals were submitted to the Office of the Provost, and eight of the proposals were chosen for funding.

"These projects make creative, innovative use of technologies such as the Internet, computer-based simulations, and interactive multimedia presentations," said Charmaine Tomczyk, assistant vice president for academic affairs. "This program is valuable to faculty and students, both as a tool for teaching and learning and as an opportunity to increase their knowledge of computer applications."

Grants were awarded for the following projects:

- Jessie Brown, associate professor of education: "Website and Multimedia projects: Strategies for teaching African American children in early childhood settings" – a project to develop a web-based instructional resource for students and educators
- John Goodwin, assistant professor of chemistry: "Integration of Multimedia Resources for General Chemistry Instruction" – a project to integrate interactive CD-ROM software into general chemistry courses
- Benjoe Juliano, assistant professor of computer science, and Renee Renner, assistant professor of computer science: "Introduction to robotics – Teaching students how to design, assemble and control a simple robot" – a project to create a new course designed to give students the opportunity to learn about robotics research by working with software simulations of robots

• Eric Pauley, assistant professor of biology, and Mary Crowe, assistant professor of biology: "Development of a laboratory for ecological simulation and analysis" – a project to develop labs that focus on computer simulations of ecological data

• Steve Sheel, assistant professor of computer science, and Benjoe Juliano, assistant professor of computer science: "Topics in Wireless Data Communication and Mobile Computing Systems" – a project to enable computer science students to participate in the analysis, design, testing and implementation of Global Positioning Systems (GPS)-based real-time tracking systems to conduct applied undergraduate research

• Rebecca Snyder, assistant professor of education: "Technological Applications for Future Mathematics Teachers" – a project to create a new junior level mathematics methods course for secondary mathematics education majors

• Samuel Wathen, assistant professor of management: "Analyzing production system performance for continuous improvement: an application of computer simulation and statistical analysis" – a project which will give students enrolled in CBAD 475 (Production and Operations Management) the opportunity to use statistical and graphic techniques with programs such as EXCEL to analyze data

• Joseph Winslow, assistant professor of education: "CODE-IT: A Collaborative Online Database of Education and Information Technology Concepts" – a project to develop a multimedia, world wide web-based instructional resource for students enrolled in Education 204 (Computer Technology and Instructional Media)

The Coastal Educational Foundation, Inc., is a non-profit organization which provides resources to Coastal Carolina University for scholarships and for meeting student and faculty needs not supported by state allocations. ♦

English faculty present program on writer Flannery O'Connor

Members of Coastal's English faculty will present "Reconceiving Flannery O'Connor: Race, Region, Religion and Rhetoric," a program focusing on one of the Georgia writer's most famous stories, on Feb. 19 at 7:30 p.m. in the Wall Auditorium. The event is free and open to the public.

Linda Hollandsworth, associate professor of English, will give a dramatic reading of "A Good Man Is Hard to Find," a classic story about a disastrous family outing. The performance is directed by Sandi Shackelford, associate professor of theater.

Following the reading, three papers will be presented by members of the English faculty: "Flannery O'Connor and the Negro," by Veronica Gerald, assistant professor of English; "A Good Man is Easy to Find," by Steve Hamelman, associate professor of English, and "Flannery O'Connor's Southern Landscape" by Glenda Sweet, assistant dean of the School of Humanities and Fine Arts. Sweet's paper will be read by John Beard, associate professor of English.

Hollandsworth's dramatic reading is presented by permission of the Flannery O'Connor estate. The cultural and artistic components of this program are funded in part by the Horry Cultural Arts Council and the South Carolina Arts Commission, which receive support from the National Endowment for the Arts and the Accommodations Tax Advisory Committee. The program is also sponsored by Coastal's Faculty Welfare and Development Committee.

For more information, contact the Department of English at extension 2421. ♦

Wall School Board of Visitors presents scholarships

Stephanie Ceasar, a junior finance major from Gresham, S.C., and Janet P. Graham, a senior accounting major from Conway, S.C., received the first Wall School Board of Visitors Scholarships at the January meeting of the board. The $1,000 scholarships, which will be awarded annually, were created this year to honor outstanding students.

Ceasar, a graduate of Brittons Neck High School, has a grade point average of 3.540 and is a member of Phi Beta Lambda, an honor society for business students, and the Coastal Productions Board.

Graham, a part-time student, is employed at Santee Cooper where she is an administrative assistant in the Horry-Georgetown Communications Department. She is a graduate of Conway High School and her grade point average is 3.929.

The Board of Visitors of the Wall School of Business, in partnership with the administration and faculty of the university, provides leadership and resources for the development of programs that address the academic and professional needs of students as well as the corporate and business interests of the area. The Board of Visitors has 39 members.

For more information, contact the Wall School of Business at extension 2641. ♦

Distinguished Teacher-Scholar Lecturer Award

Horry Telephone Cooperative, in cooperation with Coastal Carolina University, will sponsor the 1998 Distinguished Teacher-Lecturer Award to recognize a faculty member who has distinguished himself or herself as a teacher, a scholar and a communicator. Nominations for the award must be submitted to the Office of the Provost by Monday, Feb. 23, at 5 p.m.

Nominees must be tenured members of the full-time faculty of Coastal Carolina University. Nominations may be submitted by faculty, students, staff, alumni or community members, as well as self-nominations. All nominees will be contacted and encouraged to submit for this prestigious recognition.

The recipient will receive a $1,000 stipend and a plaque of recognition. The recipient also will deliver an original lecture/presentation during October 1998 to faculty, staff, students and community guests. The lecture will be published and widely distributed by the university.

The recipient will be selected by a committee appointed by the Provost in consultation with the President, and composed of representatives from the faculty, staff, administration and community which will evaluate the nominees and recommend the selection of the lecturer to the Provost.

For more information, contact the Office of the Provost in SNGL 121 or call Chris Martin at extension 2086. ♦

Mini-Med School offered

Coastal Carolina University and the Office of Public Education of the Medical University of South Carolina (MUSC) will present "It's Your Body: A Mini-Med School," a four-part series of health promotion talks by MUSC staff physicians, on Tuesday evenings between through Feb. 24 in the Wall School of Business Auditorium on the Coastal campus. Each of the talks will begin at 6 p.m. and is free and open to the public.

The following topics are scheduled:

- Feb. 10: Your Nervous System presented by Dr. Tim Carter
- Feb. 17: Your Heart presented by Dr. Blaise Carabello
- Feb. 24: Women's Health presented by Dr. Melisa Holmes

Each of the speakers is nationally or internationally recognized in his or her field, and the talks are designed for the general public. The presentations will last approximately 45 minutes and questions will be taken from the audience.

For more information, contact Les Whitley at extension 2208. ♦

Sexual Responsibility Week, Feb. 9 to 13

Coastal's Office of Student Health Services will sponsor Sexual Responsibility Week from Monday, Feb. 9 to Friday, Feb. 13 with a series of events designed to make students aware of important health and human issues relating to sexual behavior.

On Monday, Feb. 9, a panel of six physicians and counselors will lead a discussion on "What is Sexual Responsibility" in the Wall Auditorium at 4 p.m. The panel will include Cheryl Adamson, executive director of Family Outreach; James Coleman, director of Health Education for the Waccamaw Public Health District; Drs. Jonathan Dieter and James Floyd of Coastal Family Medicine; Vicki Gardner, counselor of Coastal Carolina University's Alcohol and Drug Program; Sharon Hiers, director of Case Management/CareTeam; and Margaret Willis, health educator for Eastern Carolina Prevention Collaboration.

On Tuesday, Feb. 10, HIV/Family Planning Day, members of the CareTeam, students from Coastal's Health Promotion/Education Department, and DHEC officials will hand out materials and

Eating Disorders screening and education session scheduled

An eating disorders screening will be held at the Student Center on Feb. 25 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., followed by an educational session at 2:30 p.m. in the Wall School of Business Auditorium. The events, sponsored by the Mental Health Association of Horry County and Coastal's Women's Advocacy Center as part of Eating Disorders Awareness Week, are free and open to the public.

Eating disorders affect more than 5 million Americans, primarily women. The illness is associated with severe body distortion and an obsession with weight. "Some people who innocently begin a diet to lose weight become obsessed with body size and adopt unhealthy attitudes and behaviors," said Sharon

Information sessions outline BAIS program

The Office of Extended Learning and Public Services will host information sessions outlining BAIS, a unique degree program which enables adults to earn a Bachelor's of Arts in Interdisciplinary Studies degree. The program is designed specifically for individuals who: need a bachelor's degree in order to compete for better jobs, have a college background but wish to obtain a degree, need to arrange classes around work schedules, have long-range plans for attending graduate school, or are interested in enhancing communication skills.

Information sessions during the spring semester will be held Feb. 12, March 12, April 9, May 14, June 11, July 16 and Aug. 13 in Wall 118. All sessions will be held at 6:15 p.m.

The BAIS degree at Coastal is a structured but flexible program that allows individuals to design a degree incorporating prior education and work experiences while addressing career aspirations. Courses are available through a combination of day, evening and Independent Distance Learning classes in order to accommodate the diverse schedules and educational needs of adult learners.

To register or for more information, contact the Division of Extended Learning and Public Services at extension 2665 or by e-mail: janice@coastal.edu ♦

Extended Learning sponsors Certificate Program

A seven-part non-credit certificate program for sales professionals will be offered by Coastal Carolina University on Mondays between Feb. 16 and March 20 from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. The fee for the program, led by Myrtle Beach-based business consultant E. Petesy Reynolds, is $595, which includes a notebook of materials and the certificate.

"To compete and be successful in any profession, training is a necessity, not an option," said Reynolds, president of Actions & Attitudes. Through this program, sales people will gain knowledge, skills and insights which will enable them to be more effective with the most difficult prospects."

Topics covered in the program include:

- Sales process: What it takes to be successful in sales
- Sales skills: Insights and skills that will increase sales
- Sales aids: Aids that will increase sales effectiveness
- Sales props: Props that are used to support sales
- Self management: How to manage oneself to increase productivity
- Sales goals: How to set and accomplish sales goals
- Sales sources: How to maximize prospects, customers or clients
- Presentations: Creating presentations that will increase sales

For more information or to register, contact Trenna Metts in the Division of Extended Learning and Public Services at extension 2694 or visit the website: www.coastal.edu/extlearn ♦

Quilts to be displayed

Coastal Carolina University will display a variety of folk art quilts as part of the Horry County Museum's Fourth Annual Quilt Gala from Feb. 17 to March 2 in the Admissions Building gallery on campus. Quilt expert and author Judith Weissman will give a talk about the art of quilts on Friday, Feb. 20 at 1 p.m. in the Wall School of Business Auditorium and later at 6:30 p.m. in the Little Theater. The opening reception for the exhibit will follow at 7:30 p.m. Both talks, the reception and the exhibit are free and open to the public.

Judith Weissman is an associate professor of art at New York University. She has written extensively about American decorative and folk art, and her articles on quilting have appeared in The New York Times and The Clarion. She has presented lectures about quilting at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Museum of American Folk Art and at Sotheby's.

The Fourth Annual Quilt Gala also will feature quilt displays at McCown Auditorium in Conway on Feb. 21 and Feb. 22.

For more information about Coastal's folk art quilt display, contact Cheryl Green, Coastal's gallery coordinator, at extension 2750. ♦

COASTAL CAROLINA PEOPLE

Faculty and staff are encouraged to submit information to be included in the "Coastal Carolina People" section of On Campus. Information will be published following the presentation or activity.

Dave Bryon and Mona Dukes attended the winter conference of the South Carolina Association of Alumni Directors held recently in Columbia. The conference theme was "Nothing But Net." Bryon presented a workshop discussing how web pages can work for alumni. Dukes was recently elected president of the association and will serve until the year 2000.

Karen Carpenter has had an article, "Changes in Occupational Interests and Educational Aspirations of 7th Grade Girls," accepted for publication in the upcoming 1998 winter issue of SCRATE Journal. The SCRATE Journal is a referred publication of the Southeastern Regional Association of Teacher Educators, each manuscript undergoing three blind reviews. The article was drawn from a compilation of several small, and large, private foundation grants, including the American Association of University Women and from South Carolina state grant moneys, including A South Carolina Sex Equity Grant. The grants money supported two years of research of middle school women which culminated in the article. Results of the research findings were presented at the November 1997, Annual Regional Conference of SCRATE, held in Norfolk, Va. Carpenter also presented a paper, "Business-School-Community Partnerships Yield High Student Achievement," to the third annual meeting of the National High School Association held in New Orleans, Jan. 17. The paper detailed ways of building a community sense of responsibility and empowerment for tomorrow's adults involving problem solving collaborations today. Using their academic skills, students can become active participants in their community, not just passive spectators. Students build a mutual sense of respect, responsibility, and empowerment regarding their community and future employment and employers. The conference also was the second national presentation of the video "School and Community Partnerships: School-To-Work," created as a service learning project for Coastal Carolina by Ron Spjut's middle school students at Whittemore Park Middle School under Carpenter's guidance.

Subhash Saxena participated in the annual meeting of the Mathematical Association of America (MAA) and the American Mathematical Society (AMS) held jointly in Baltimore. Secretary of Education Richard Riley was a keynote speaker and also met briefly with Saxena and other mathematicians from South Carolina. Saxena also participated in meetings of MAA liaisons, and MAA student chapter advisers.

Jill Sessoms conducted a seminar on Business Communications for Managers for 26 Horry County government employees on Jan. 23

Dennis Wiseman, with Suzanne Cormier from Winthrop, have had their manuscript, "Achieving state-wide teacher education reform in middle level teacher preparation," accepted for publication in the Summer 1998 issue of Action in Teacher Education. The article reports on activities at a number of institutions in South Carolina during 1995-1997 directed toward strengthening teacher preparation for individuals electing to work in South Carolina middle schools.

Action in Teacher Education is the national publication of the Association of Teacher Educators.

Rob Young presented a lecture, "The Importance of Estuaries to Offshore Marine Life," as part of a series of public talks sponsored by the Creek Preservation Committee of Murrells Inlet. ♦

Faculty and staff may contact the Division of Extended Learning and Public Services to have their name placed on a waiting list. Within two days of the beginning of the course, he or she will be contacted regarding space availability. Space will be filled on a first come, first serve basis.

"Education to Go" classes are offered to faculty and staff at a reduced rate of $49. "Education to Go" is a leading developer and provider of interactive online classes through the Internet. More than 10 courses will be available in 15 sections.

"Education to Go" topics include:

- Introduction to Internet;
- Creating Web Pages;
- Creating Web Graphics;
- Introduction to PC Troubleshooting;
- Introduction to QuickBooks;
- Java Programming for the Web;
- Microsoft Excel;
- Advanced Web Pages;
- Quicken for Windows;
- Windows File and Disk Management;
- Word Tips and Tricks;
- Microsoft Front Page; and
- Microsoft Access.

Participants need Microsoft Windows 3.1 or Windows 95, an Internet browser and an e-mail address.

Through a partnership with Coastal and Horry Telephone Cooperative, registrants for the "Education to Go" classes are eligible to get two months of Internet Service for $10 per month. Registrants should indicate if they would like to take advantage of this opportunity when registering for the course(s).

The following one-day workshops are offered to faculty and staff at a 50 percent fee reduction:

- How to Handle Difficult People;
- Telephone Techniques: The Clear Connection;
- Team Building – Be A Team "Leader"; and
- Dealing with Multiple Priorities and Demands.

For more information, to register or be placed on a waiting list, contact the Division of Extended Learning and Public Services at extension 2665. ♦

Summer school consultant to visit campus

An open forum with Mike Nelson, executive director of the North American Association of Summer Sessions, will be held Saturday, Feb. 28 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. in ADM 003. The program is free and open to faculty, staff, students and administrators. Anyone who works with or has concerns relating to Coastal's summer sessions is encouraged to attend.
