University to celebrate Founders' Day

Coastal Carolina University's 12th annual Founders' Day Convocation will be held Monday, March 2 at 3 p.m. in Wheelwright Auditorium. The ceremony is free and open to the public.

John Dawsey, George Grice and Charles E. Hodges will be named honorary founders of the university. The 1998 recipients of the Founders' Medallion will join 48 other founders and honorary founders who played instrumental roles in the development of Coastal Carolina University and the promotion of higher education in the region. T. Graham Edwards, president and CEO of Santee Cooper, will deliver the convocation address.

John Dawsey, a former Horry County superintendent of education, has served on the Horry County Higher Education Commission since 1970 and has been chair since Coastal became an independent university in 1993. In addition to his service as chair, Dawsey has been chair of several committees including the academic, nominating and executive committees. Dawsey also is mayor of Aynor, S.C.

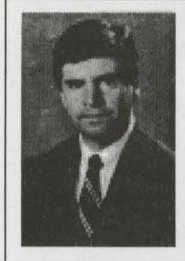

George D. Grice, president of the College of Charleston from 1945 to 1966, played an essential role in the founding of Coastal Carolina University. In 1954, after being turned down by many other colleges and universities in the state, organizers of Coastal Carolina asked Grice if the College of Charleston would sponsor the new school. Grice agreed and was also instrumental in recruiting Coastal's first faculty members. Grice also served as a state senator and representative.

Charles E. Hodges was a member of the South Carolina House of Representatives from 1969 until his death in 1982. As a representative, Hodges supported higher education causes and played an essential role in establishing Coastal Carolina as a four-year institution and in securing funding for Kimbel Library.

T. Graham Edwards is a native of Cheraw, S.C. He earned a bachelor's degree from Francis Marion University in 1975 and a master's degree in 1976 from The Citadel. In 1977, he joined Santee Cooper, now the nation's fourth largest public power system. Edwards has served as chairman of the Charleston Regional Development Alliance and he received the S.C. Department of Education's Distinguished Service Award in 1996.

Area firms pledge funds to Lifelong Learning Society

Two Horry County firms have announced plans to pledge funds to Coastal Carolina University's Lifelong Learning Society (LLS), an academic enrichment program for adults.

Hall Development, Inc., has pledged to donate $100 for every house sold at its new community, Myrtle Trace South, to benefit LLS. Myrtle Trace South includes 300 homesites.

Horry Telephone Cooperative (HTC), Inc., has pledged $30,000 for a computer lab at the new Lifelong Learning Society facility, which was donated to LLS by the Jackson Companies in 1997. The facility is being renovated and is scheduled to open in April 1998.

"We are delighted to make this commitment to the Lifelong Learning Society," said D. Clinch Heyward, director of sales for Hall Development. "Supporting Coastal Carolina University in its effort to serve area residents of all ages, in new and innovative ways, is something we are pleased to do. LLS and its programs will be an enhancement to our area, and will be a catalyst for community progress.

We at Hall encourage other local companies to find ways to support Coastal and LLS."

"HTC is very pleased to be a service provider and contributor for this community resource/outreach center," said Brent Groome, chief executive of customer relations at HTC.

The Lifelong Learning Society, a program of Coastal's Division of Extended Learning and Public Services, offers more than 40 classes each semester on a range of topics including computer applications, fitness, history, art, antiques, music, financial investments, nature and foreign languages. LLS members are eligible for a number of special benefits which include use of Coastal's Kimbel Library, free admission to athletic events, student rates for cultural events and discounted fees for short courses and workshops. More than 425 people are enrolled in LLS during the spring 1998 semester.

For more information about the Lifelong Learning Society, contact Judy Fontana, coordinator of the program, at extension 2673 or visit the website at www.coastal.edu/extlearn ♦

New area code implemented March 22

"Growth in South Carolina and the rapid increase in computer communication, cellular phone, fax machines and pagers are causing a shortage of telephone numbers," according to information provided by GTE. To solve the problem, a new telephone area code will be implemented on Sunday, March 22, which will affect our region. The new telephone area code will be 843.

Both the 803 and 843 area codes will be in effect during a transition period from March 22 through September 27, 1998.

The Office of Public Information has begun the process of changing the area code on all publications; therefore, all publications, including letterhead and business cards, will be printed with the new area code.

Faculty and staff should continue to use their supply of university stationery and business cards as well as current publications until their inventory is depleted or until September 27 when the 803 area code will no longer be in effect.

If you have any questions or need additional information about publications, contact the Office of Public Information at extension 2102. For information concerning the new area code, contact ITS at extension 2084. ♦

University Theater presents Lion in Winter

Coastal Carolina University Theater will present James Goldman's "The Lion in Winter," a historical comedy about the domestic difficulties of England's scheming royal family in 1183. Show times are scheduled for Friday, Feb. 27 at 7:30 p.m.; Saturday, Feb. 28 at 7:30 p.m.; and Sunday, March 1 at 3 p.m. Admission is $8, $5 for students.

The play concerns the intrigues of Henry II, his wife Eleanor of Aquitaine, and their three sons when they meet to decide who will succeed Henry to the throne. A royal feud ensues as they plot against each other to advance their own agenda. Praised for its brilliant, pointed wit and powerful characters when it first opened on Broadway in 1966, "The Lion in Winter" also was made into a film in 1968, winning Katharine Hepburn an Academy Award.

Charles Whetzel also is directing the play. James Gross, assistant professor of theater at Coastal, designed the sets. Stephen Toney, senior dramatic arts major from Raleigh, N.C., designed the lighting. Kevin Kane, senior dramatic arts major from Myrtle Beach, and Beth Johnson, senior dramatic arts major from Myrtle Beach, are assistant directors. Beth Johnson and Tatum Barnes, sophomore dramatic arts major from Florence, S.C., are stage managers. Costumes for the production are by Costume Curio of Greenville, S.C.

Article explores controversial issue in higher education

A New York Times article, "The Ivory Tower Under Siege" (Sunday, January 4, 1998), explores attacks on the academy that blame higher education for driving college costs up through low faculty workloads and undeserved high faculty salaries.

Faculty and staff who would like more information about this article should contact the Office of Public Information at extension 2102. ♦

ODK invites students to apply for election

Letters of invitation and application forms have been sent to more than 400 juniors and seniors who are academically eligible for election to Omicron Delta Kappa. Election to ODK is an indication of undergraduate achievement.

To be eligible, a student must be of junior or senior status, in the top 30 percent of the class, and have held at least one leadership position.

Students who have not received a mailing and who consider themselves eligible should immediately contact the Office of the Vice President for Student Affairs.

Students who have received a mailing are encouraged to complete the form and return it by the Friday, March 13 deadline.

For more information, contact Bob Squatriglia at extension 2300. ♦

Coastal hosts "A Day for Seniors"

A full day of seminars, workshops and other events for area seniors and retirees will be offered on Saturday, March 7 in the Wall Building at Coastal Carolina University. Twenty workshops on a variety of topics, including elder law, finance, taxes, health, nutrition, antiques, history and music are scheduled between 8:30 a.m. and 3 p.m. U.S. Rep. Mark Sanford Jr. will give a presentation on the privatization of Social Security. The cost to participate is $15 for members of Coastal's Lifelong Learning Society, sponsor of the event, and $20 for non-members.

Following a Continental breakfast and registration at 8:30 a.m., participants may attend one seminar from three separate sessions – two morning sessions and an afternoon session concluding at 3 p.m. Lunch is included.

Conway Hospital's mobile health van also will be on campus for the day offering free blood pressure checks as well as cholesterol/glucose blood screenings for $10. Participants are not required to fast in order to take these tests.

Co-sponsors of the event include Coastal Carolina Hospital, Benjamin's Bagels, Dunkin Donuts, Pepsi-Cola Bottling Company and Winn Dixie.

For more information on "A Day for All Seniors," contact the Division of Extended Learning and Public Services at extension 2665 or extension 2673. ♦

Coastal hosts Georgia/Carolinas College English Association

Coastal's Department of English is hosting the 1998 conference of the Georgia/Carolinas College English Association (GAC-CEA) on Friday, Feb. 27 and Saturday, Feb. 28 in the Wall Auditorium. The conference, led by English faculty from colleges and universities in Georgia, North Carolina and South Carolina, will include presentations on Southern literature and writers from the Carolinas.

Authors whose work will be discussed during the two-day conference include Mary Chestnut,

William Faulkner, Carson McCullers, Flannery O'Connor, Beatrice Ravenel and Lee Smith. The conference also will offer sessions on practices in composition and literature classrooms, a graduate student forum and a roundtable discussion of English chairs concerning the state of the profession.

The event is open to the public. The cost of the conference is $10 per person. For more detailed information contact John Beard at extension 2462. ♦

COASTAL CAROLINA PEOPLE

Faculty and staff are encouraged to submit information to be included in the "Coastal Carolina People" section of On Campus. Information will be published following the presentation or activity.

Micheline Brown was elected secretary of the Government Documents Round Table and secretary of the South Carolina SOLINET Users Group at the South Carolina Library Association's Annual Conference held in Myrtle Beach in November. Betty Lou Maute was elected secretary of the New Members Round Table.

Alys Culhane was recently awarded a $750 grant from the Southern Regional Education Board Faculty Awards program. This funding will enable Culhane to travel to continue work on her research project, "The Role of the Writer-Teacher in the Composition Classroom." Culhane's original source of funding was a Coastal Carolina Academic Enhancement Grant. Culhane's poems also have appeared recently in several publications. "Bootleg Don't Do Grammar Poems" appeared in Visions International; "First Paycheck" was published in Offerings; and "Breaking the Mirror" was published in Pinyon Poetry Review. Linda Hollandsworth's article, "English for Hotel Management," has been accepted for publication in Responses to ESP, a teacher-training textbook for English as a Second Language, edited by Peter Master of San Jose State University.

Richard Moore has co-authored the second edition of Fishes of the Gulf of Mexico: Texas, Louisiana and Adjacent Waters, with H. Dickson Hoese, retired professor of biology at the University of Southwestern Louisiana. The book is published by Texas A&M University Press. The first edition of this work, released in 1977, went through three printings and has been widely adopted for use by schools, universities and governmental agencies. The new edition includes updated accounts and illustrations of 539 species of fish found in the northwestern Gulf of Mexico. This includes accounts for 62 species that were not in the book's first edition as well as 225 new illustrations. Subhash Saxena's article, "A Note on the Unity of Subring," was published in the latest issue of the Pi Mu Epsilon Journal, which is the official and refereed publication of the National Honorary Mathematical Society.

Phil Schneider conducted a workshop on "Narrative Ethics" for the medical and professional staff of the Mercy Hospice of Horry County.

Sara Sobota recently attended the annual conference of the South Carolina Writing Centers Association at the Medical University of South Carolina on Feb. 6 and 7. Three undergraduate Writing Center consultants, Jeanette Adams, Triniti Defrene and Martha Hucks, and one faculty consultant, Alys Culhane, also attended the conference. Sobota presented a paper, "Disentangling the Writing Center Grapevine: Creating a Video to Confront Student Misconceptions." The paper discusses the process of creating the video that is currently used in orientation sessions for freshman English classes and success seminars. Sobota showed the video as a component of the presentation and discussed its reception by students and faculty at Coastal Carolina. ♦

One-day business seminars

Coastal Carolina University will host three one-day professional development seminars in March designed for business employees, managers and entrepreneurs. Sponsored by the Division of Extended Learning and Public Services, each of the seminars will be held at Webster University in Myrtle Beach.

The following workshops will be offered:

• How to Handle Difficult People

Wednesday, March 11 from 8:45 a.m. to 4 p.m.;
Fee: $159

(Companies may register three participants and get one registration free.)

This seminar will focus on developing the following skills: changing conflict to compromise; maintaining composure under fire; saying "no" in a firm and courteous manner; examining what triggers people to behave negatively. The seminar will be led by Ed Leader, an Atlanta-based professional consultant and recognized communications authority.

• Telephone Techniques: The Clear Connection

Thursday, March 12 from 8:45 a.m. to 4 p.m.;

Fee: $159 (Companies may register three participants and get one registration free.)

Appropriate telephone techniques are vital to businesses and organizations which depend on telephone communication. This seminar is designed for anyone who represents an organization through the telephone, including receptionists, customer service representatives and other staff members. The seminar will be led by Ed Leader.

• Finding and Keeping Good People: Strategies for Solving the Dilemmas of the Decade

Wednesday, March 18 from 8:45 a.m. to 4 p.m.;

Fee: $149.

This workshop is designed to save companies money and improve productivity by attracting and keeping good employees. The workshop will be led by Joyce Gioia, president of Herman Associates, a consulting, speaking and training firm based in Greensboro, N.C.

For more information about these seminars, including registration information, contact Trenna Page Metts at extension 2694 or visit the website at www.coastal.edu/extlearn. ♦
