Wall School of Business receives top accreditation

The E. Craig Wall Sr. School of Business Administration received official confirmation of its accreditation by the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business (AACSB) at the organization's annual meeting in Chicago on June 7.

Milton Blood, AACSB director of accreditation, presented the accreditation certificate to Peter Barr, dean of the Wall School of Business, Robert Nale, associate dean of the school, and James Eason, associate professor of accounting and management.

"This is a significant milestone for the Wall School of Business," said Barr. "It is an acknowledgment of the outstanding achievement of our faculty and staff, and it gives our students an extra advantage because corporations increasingly look to accredited schools when they recruit employees."

The board of directors of AACSB voted to grant business accreditation to all programs offered by the Wall School of Business, which include accounting, finance, management and marketing, as well as the cooperative golf management option.

The top 25 percent of the more than 1,400 colleges and universities in the United States which offer undergraduate business degrees are accredited by AACSB.

To achieve accreditation, the business programs must satisfy the expectations of a wide range of quality standards relating to curriculum, faculty resources, admissions, degree requirements, library and computer facilities, financial resources and intellectual climate. During the accreditation process, the Wall School of Business was visited and evaluated by business school deans, accounting educators and corporate representatives with detailed knowledge of management education, applying standards widely accepted in the education community.

AACSB is a not-for-profit organization consisting of more than 800 educational organizations and corporations. Its mission is excellence in management education in colleges and universities. Headquartered in St. Louis, AACSB is the premier accrediting agency and service organization for business schools.

Board of Trustees approves budget

The Coastal Carolina University Board of Trustees has approved a projected $28.36 million operational budget for the 1998-1999 year during its quarterly meeting June 26.

As part of the budget plan, the board approved a tuition increase, effective for fall 1998.

- In-state tuition has increased $60 per semester from $1,550 to $1,610, a rise of 3.87 percent.
- Out-of-state tuition has increased $235 per semester from $4,160 to $4,395, a rise of 5.65 percent.

According to university officials, the increase shows Coastal Carolina's in-state tuition to be below the average for public institutions in South Carolina.

The board directed university officials to proceed with the adding of football to the intercollegiate athletic program. It is estimated that startup costs for the program will be approximately $1.35 million, and ongoing annual costs will be approximately $1.24 million. University officials estimate that the year 2007 is the projected starting date of game play. The board asked that a report be given at the next meeting to address how the timeline can be shortened.

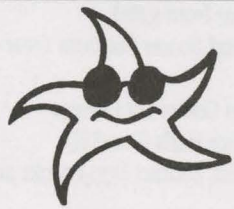

Coastal Carolina participates in the NCAA Division I and plays in the Big South Conference with 15 varsity teams.

The board reelected officers for the 1998-1999 year: H. Franklin Burroughs, chair; Keith S. Smith, vice chair; and Juli Streater Powers, secretary.

Robert Rabon has been appointed to the board of trustees. Rabon replaces long-time Coastal Carolina supporter and alumnus James Johnson who has filled the District 1, seat 2 since the institution became independent in June 1993. A Conway businessman, Rabon served on the Horry County Higher Education Commission for 12 years, including terms as chairman and vice chairman.

B. Catherine Harrell, a Coastal alumna, has resigned from the board of trustees. She is a gubernatorial appointee and her term is co-terminus with that of the governor.

The next regular meeting of the board of trustees will be Friday, October 2 at 9 a.m. in the Wall School of Business Board Room. Other quarterly meetings of the board in 1999 will be held January 8, April 23 and June 25. ♦

Students attending two-year institutions are eligible for $1,000 per year scholarships.

Students must meet the following criteria to be eligible for LIFE Scholarships:

"Command Spanish" occupational language program offered

Command Spanish, an innovative language training program for professionals who work with Spanish-speaking people and who want to communicate more effectively, is being offered by the Division of Extended Learning and Public Services. Each course is custom designed for the special needs of participating businesses and organizations and is delivered on-site.

Command Spanish instructor Jennifer Marshall Shinaberger designs the courses of instruction. "This method of teaching is very different from traditional language instruction," said Shinaberger. "In this program we focus on 'work language,' targeting a concise selection of job-related words and phrases designed to improve communication in a particular work setting."

The program begins with an on-site visit. Employees are "shadowed," a technique which allows instructors to gain an understanding of the work environment so they can isolate the pertinent vocabulary. Once the shadowing process is completed a training course is designed for the specific organization.

Command Spanish seminars and workshops can be as short as two or three days or as long as several weeks in duration, depending on the needs and goals of the students or companies. No prior knowledge of average.

- Students must have no drug, alcohol or felony convictions.
- Students must be full-time, degree-seeking undergraduates.
- Students will continue to be eligible for the LIFE Scholarship as long as they maintain a cumulative grade point average of at least 3.0 and earn at least 30 credit hours each year.
- LIFE Scholarships in combination with all other grants and scholarships cannot exceed the cost of attendance.
- Students may receive the scholarship for eight semesters for a four-year degree program or 10 semesters for a five-year degree program.
- Students may receive the LIFE Scholarship even if part of their program of study is conducted out-of-state (such as study-abroad programs) as long as Coastal approves these courses for credit.
- Summer sessions may be substituted for a fall or spring semester in a planned course of study.
- Students who have earned bachelor's degrees are not eligible to receive LIFE scholarships.
- LIFE Scholarship funds cannot be used for continuing education or remedial courses.

Coastal's Office of Enrollment Management has identified and notified new and currently enrolled students who meet the eligibility requirements. For more information about the LIFE Scholarship, contact Jeannie Rudge in the Office of Financial Aid, Scholarships and Veteran Affairs at extension 2313. ♦

Spanish is needed.

Workshops are available in the following fields: hospitality, law enforcement, public safety, business and industry, health care, social work, public service and education.

Command Spanish is a leading provider of occupational Spanish training to public and private agencies in the United States. The program is used by the U.S. Department of Transportation, the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Department and the U.S. Army Reserve.

"Command Spanish will help to meet an important need as the Hispanic population in our area grows," said Shinaberger. "In addition to improving communication, the program helps to increase safety and productivity in the workplace, and to reinforce a positive image in the Hispanic community."

Coastal's Division of Extended Learning also is offering "Survival Spanish for Travelers," a short course from Oct. 5 to Nov. 2, which is based on the Command Spanish method.

For more information, contact Jennifer Marshall Shinaberger at extension 2737. ♦

Coastal pilots pioneering alcohol awareness program

Several Coastal students, faculty and staff members recently had an opportunity to appear in a promotional "Alcohol 101" video currently being used to demonstrate the interactive computer CD-ROM program designed to combat alcohol abuse on college and university campuses across the nation.

During the 1997-1998 academic year, Coastal Carolina served as a demonstration site—the only one in South Carolina—for "Alcohol 101," on college and university campuses. More than 200 Coastal students experienced the program during the testing phase.

Produced by the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign in partnership with The Century Council, Alcohol 101 teaches students to maintain personal control and safety by helping them to understand the consequences of harmful drinking, as well as alcohol's effects on judgement and physiology.

Program users are invited to a "virtual party" where they are faced with the situations and pressures typical of college social gatherings. Users witness the consequences of irresponsible decisions made by characters at the party and see alternative strategies based on responsible decision making. The program also stresses that abstaining from drinking is an equally valid option.

Students in Coastal's Freshman Success Seminar, athletes, fraternities and sororities and other students used the program, according to Vicki Gardner, coordinator of Coastal's Alcohol and Drug Prevention Program. ♦

Comoroski named director of compliance

Casey Comoroski has been named Coastal's new Director of Compliance.

Comoroski served this past year with the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference (MAAC) as part of the Fellowship Program. She served as an assistant in the compliance office and assisted with public relations issues. Prior to joining the MAAC, Comoroski worked in the athletic compliance office at Syracuse University. While at the Big East Conference institution, Comoroski assisted in the development of a compliance and procedure manual for the department and assisted in organizing coaches compliance and rules education meetings. She also coordinated eligibility documentation for new and continuing student-athletes and monitored initial eligibility through the NCAA Initial Eligibility Clearinghouse.

Comoroski earned a master's degree in Sports Management from the University of Connecticut in 1996. While at Connecticut, she worked in the recreation and intramural department and assisted in the coordination of marketing and promotional activities, while also developing health fitness programs and monitoring all special events. A 1994 graduate of St. Bonaventure with a degree in Psychology, Comoroski played four seasons for the Bonnies' women's basketball program and finished as the school's all-time assist leader. She was named to the Atlantic 10 Conference's All-Freshman Team in 1990 and the team's Most Improved Player for the 1991-1992 season. After being selected team co-captain for her final two years, Comoroski capped her collegiate career by being named to the Atlantic 10 All-Conference Third Team for the 1993-1994 season. ♦

Certificate offered in Employee Management

During fall 1998, Coastal is offering a new non-credit program which will allow adults to earn a Certificate in Effective Employee Management. The program focuses on a variety of practical leadership and management skills which can help participants advance or change their careers.

Demands on managers are continuously increasing and changing. Organizations are seeking people with strong leadership skills and the ability to sustain and discharge significant responsibility at a high level of competence.

"Success in today's competitive business environment is increasingly a function of effective management skills," said James F. Eason, program director and associate professor of accounting and management at Coastal. "Structure and technology can be easily duplicated, yet the factor that can set apart an organization is its people, regardless of the type of organization. Even though the Certificate in Effective Employee Management has a clear focus on the importance of people in work organizations, the program centers around a variety of business topics that emphasize that managers today are expected to be generalists with a broad set of skills."

Offered through Coastal's Division of Extended Learning and Public Services, 12 three-hour seminars will be given between Sept. 3 and Nov. 19. The registration fee for each seminar is $85, or $750 for the entire certificate program. College credits may not be earned nor is a college degree required for participation. Anyone may register for one or more of the courses but only those completing the entire series will receive a certificate.
