President Ingle named honorary chair of Horry County WalkAmerica campaign

Ronald R. Ingle has been named honorary chair of the 1998 Horry County WalkAmerica for the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation. The Horry County WalkAmerica will be held Saturday, April 17, 1999, at the Myrtle Beach Pavilion. The annual event involves more than 2,500 local participants working with approximately 100 WalkAmerica teams in Horry County. Last year more than $175,000 was raised in the Campaign for Healthier Babies.

Having President Ingle lead the 1998 Horry County WalkAmerica campaign is a "perfect match," according to Amy Peavy, division director of the Pee Dee/Wateree Division of the March of Dimes.

"We are elated that President Ingle has agreed to partner with the Horry County WalkAmerica campaign. The students at Coastal Carolina University are going to be the parents of tomorrow's children and we want to do everything possible to give each child a healthy start in life," said Peavy.

March of Dimes volunteers work to prevent birth defects and infant mortality. The Campaign for Healthier Babies funds cutting-edge research, community services, education programs and advocacy efforts for better health care for women and infants.

Coastal Carolina University also will sponsor a WalkAmerica team. For more information, to serve on Coastal's committee, or as a volunteer, contact Nancy Burton at extension 2003.

Professor publishes documentation textbook

Linda Schwartz has published a textbook to assist students in writing and documenting research papers. The Schwartz Guide to MLA Documentation, published in late August 1998 by McGraw-Hill, teaches students to use standard documentation methods recommended by the Modern Language Association (MLA), a national organization of English teachers.

Schwartz decided to write the book because she found that the available texts on MLA documentation "were either too expensive or too difficult for freshmen and undergraduates to follow." Schwartz's guide is designed to be used by undergraduates as well as senior level high school students and contains model research papers written by Coastal students Azure Dodd, a senior computer science major from Myrtle Beach, and Heather Lynn Johnson, a junior art studio major from Conway. The Schwartz Guide also includes a chapter on how to document electronic sources – a subject that Schwartz feels was inadequately covered in other available guides.

The Schwartz Guide to MLA Documentation is currently being used in freshman, sophomore and upper level English and theater classes at Coastal. The book is expected to be adopted by other institutions of higher education as McGraw-Hill's marketing plan gets underway and the book is distributed to professors around the country. Schwartz is currently working with McGraw-Hill to publish a series of other student guidebooks, including one on grammar and punctuation and one on literary analysis.

Educated at the University of South Carolina, Schwartz joined the Coastal faculty in 1968.

Coastal names new director of Admissions and Financial Aid

Judy W. Vogt has been named director of Coastal's Office of Admissions and Financial Aid, effective October 19, 1998.

Vogt will direct all aspects of the admissions and financial aid operations of the university. She will be responsible for developing a comprehensive data gathering and analysis model for measuring the effectiveness of recruitment and financial aid programs. Vogt also will plan and execute new strategies for student recruitment and scholarship award opportunities.

Vogt comes to Coastal from Longwood College in Farmville, Va., where she was assistant vice president for academic services. Her eight-year term at Longwood also included positions as associate director of admissions and registrar. Previously, Vogt served as assistant dean of admissions and student services at the University of Virginia. She also has taught mathematics at the junior and senior high level.

Vogt earned an Ed.D. in higher education administration and policy studies with a secondary specialization in business management from the University of Virginia in 1991; a master's degree in supervision and administration of education from Longwood College in 1979; and a bachelor's degree in mathematics and art education from Illinois State University in 1974.

Extended learning to host teleconference

"Reaching Your Financial Goals: Tips from America's Experts," a national satellite teleconference presented by TIAA-CREF will be broadcast Wednesday, Oct. 28 from 1:45 to 3:30 p.m. at the Society House on campus. The 90-minute teleconference will be broadcast live via satellite. Experts in the fields of investing and personal finance will be on hand to outline basic strategies which can help individuals make sound financial decisions.

The registration fee for Coastal faculty and staff and Lifelong Learning Society members is $10.

RAs attend conference, win awards

Thirteen resident assistants from Coastal Carolina University participated in a state-wide workshop, "Uncommon Individuals, Common Challenges," at Francis Marion University on Oct. 3.

Coastal delegates won three awards at the conference: Most Spirited Contingent, Highest Percentage of RAs Attending the Conference, and Best Program. The Best Program award was presented by five resident assistants. These students are Marisa Baselice, Jo-Anne Reed, Yashica Sullivan, Kristi Thompson and Robin Turner.

Other resident assistants attending the conference included: Sarah Burnette, Dianna Clark, Nicole D'Arcangelo, Franklin Ellis, Gregg Johnson, Sherida Johnson, Allison Joslyn and Matt Seluk.

For more information, contact Gregg Dodd at 347-2406.

Coastal Carolina People

Faculty and staff are encouraged to submit information to be included in the "Coastal Carolina People" section of On Campus. Information will be published following the presentation or activity.

- Peter Balsamo, David Evans and John Idoux were presenters at the regional conference of the Kellogg Commission on the Future of State and Land-Grant Universities. The conference, titled "Increasing the Flexibility and Responsiveness of Colleges and Universities: Planning for the Future of Higher Education," was co-sponsored by Clemson University and South Carolina Commission on Higher Education. Balsamo presented Restructuring and Delivery of an Interdisciplinary Studies Program during the "Designing Responsive Curricula" session. Evans presented Forging Close and Synergistic Ties with Local Industry as part of the "Models of Partnering and Collaboration" session. Idoux presented The Integration of Research and Education: Valuing Undergraduate Research, during the "Transforming Students' Learning Experiences" session.

- Debbie Conner and Diane Watson-Gunnin attended the Southern Arts Exchange Conference in Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 23 to Sept. 27. As delegates, they joined the South Carolina Arts Consortium to get information about bringing cultural programs to Coastal. Workshops included marketing the arts, fundraising for the arts, and promoting community involvement in arts programming.

- Elizabeth Keller presented pieces of her work at "Celebrations in Clay," an art exhibit and reception which benefited Habitat for Humanity, held Oct. 10 at Art Works at the Litchfield Exchange. Coastal students Byron Carle, Beth Dambman, Tom Dovey, Joe Jasper, Ondra Norris, and Barbara Smith also exhibited their work at the event.

- Randall Wells recently made a presentation on Stacy Cretzmeyer's book, Your Name is Renee, to the La Ronde group. This French table, managed by James Blackburn, meets every Friday at 4:30 p.m. at Barnes & Noble.

Faculty member to lead research at Playcard Center

Sharon Gilman has been named education research coordinator at Playcard Environmental Center near Loris. She will plan, direct and coordinate research programs involving middle and high school teachers and students in Horry County as well as Coastal students.

The new position was created as part of a $500,000 National Science Foundation grant Coastal recently received which will fund a variety of projects designed to integrate research and education. Gilman will divide her time equally between Coastal and Playcard.

The Playcard Environmental Center was established in 1987 to promote educational activities related to the study of the natural sciences and conservation. Located on the edge of an 80-acre blackwater swamp, the center offers classroom space, a conference center and includes nature trails, a log cabin and a Native American village. Created by the Horry County Conservation Foundation, the center is operated in conjunction with the Horry County School District. The Playcard Center hosts Swampfest, an annual event designed to celebrate the natural beauty and wildlife of the area and to increase public awareness of environmental issues. Swampfest '98 is scheduled for Saturday, Nov. 7.

"The Playcard Center is a unique and valuable resource for Horry County," said Gilman. "The special world of the blackwater swamp offers tremendous opportunities for research with respect to plant, animal, soil and water studies. Many people don't realize that the area's swamps, like the seashore and the marshes, play an important role in the ecosystem. They influence flood waters, replenish the underground water system, filter pollution and provide habitats for plants and animals, some of them endangered."

Gilman joined the Coastal faculty in 1994. She earned a Ph.D. in biological oceanography in 1992 from the University of Rhode Island and a bachelor's degree in biology in 1985 from Western Maryland College.

For more information about Playcard Environmental Center, contact Gilman at extension 2248.

Coastal professor to direct Gullah history and culture program at Penn Center

Veronica Gerald will direct the history and culture project on Gullah culture at the Penn Center on St. Helena Island near Beaufort, S.C. during 1999. Gerald is a widely respected scholar of the Gullah language, culture and folkways. In addition to her work as a teacher and researcher, she is well known for her public lectures in museums, libraries, historical societies and other cultural institutions. In her work at the Penn Center, she will examine West African influences on the Gullah culture of the Sea Islands.

The Penn Center is among the oldest and most historically significant African-American cultural and educational institutions in North America. Located on St. Helena Island, in Beaufort County, Penn Center has played a pivotal role in the struggle for equality of African-Americans since it was founded by Laura Towne and Ellen Murray in 1862.

The Penn School was established as part of the "Port Royal Experiment," which focused on teaching self-sufficiency during the transition from slavery to freedom. During the 1950s and 1960s, the Penn Center was one of only two biracial conference centers in the South. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., Jesse Jackson, Andrew Young and other prominent leaders met at Penn Center for retreats, strategy planning and training sessions. Today the Penn Center remains dedicated to the principle of developing individual and community self-sufficiency.

A native of Mullins, Gerald grew up in Conway. She is a descendant of Jack and Dinah Rutledge, who were slaves on Brookgreen and Springfield rice plantations (now Brookgreen Gardens in Murrells Inlet).

Gerald joined the Coastal faculty in 1982. She earned a bachelor's degree in English and history in 1972 from the University of Maryland and a master's degree in English in 1975 from Atlanta University. She has participated in advanced studies at the University of South Carolina and Illinois State University. She has pursued doctoral studies at Emory University in Atlanta, where she held the title of Patricia Roberts Harris Fellow for three years. Later, she was named an Emory Fellow, an award given only to those advanced students who demonstrate outstanding promise in their respective fields of study.

Gerald was the recipient of Coastal's 1993-1994 Distinguished Teaching Award, and in 1995 she received the prestigious Public Humanist Award, one of the Governor's Awards in the Humanities.

Gerald lives in Conway.

Student Ambassadors sponsor "casual" event

Coastal's Student Ambassador Association will sponsor a Blue Jeans for Babies campaign through Nov. 6 as a fund raiser for the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation. Student Ambassadors will visit offices on campus from Oct. 26 through Nov. 6 to ask faculty and staff to participate in the campaign.

Participants who purchase a Blue Jeans for Babies button will be invited to a special appreciation reception on Friday, Nov. 6, from 1 to 2:30 p.m. in Admissions 003. The dress code is "blue jeans" attire.

Participants attending the reception will be eligible for door prizes such as golf packages and dinners for two at local establishments.

Blue Jeans for Babies buttons are $5. Checks should be payable to the March of Dimes. The event is a fundraiser for Coastal's 1999 WalkAmerica team campaign in the fight against birth defects.

For more information or to purchase a Blue Jeans for Babies button, contact Nancy Burton at extension 2003.

Items to be included in On Campus should be submitted to Trenny Neff in Singleton 204 in the Office of Marketing Communications. Thank you.

Coastal's "Jump for the Sun" students study salt water environment

On the second Friday of the month, 35 middle school students and teachers from 15 schools in Horry County meet to study science. These students represent the third class of the "Jump for the Sun" program, a three-year project designed to encourage girls and women in science and math studies.

Sally Z. Hare and Mary Crowe were awarded a National Science Foundation grant for $900,000 in 1996 to fund the three-year program. Part of the grant – the largest in Coastal's history – is used to fund a teacher-in-residence position, which is being filled during the current academic year by Rose Hudson.

"During the program's summer phase, the participants choose a topic which they will focus on for the rest of the year," said Hudson, who taught science in the public schools and also worked for the Horry County Schools with science standards. "We're calling this year's program 'The Saltwater Connection' because the students chose to study the saltwater environment. They will do field studies at Waites Island, at Ripley's Aquarium, and many other locations along the Grand Strand during the year. They are keeping journals and portfolios to illustrate their growth during the program, and at the end of the year they will have the opportunity to work with younger students at the South Carolina Children's Museum in Myrtle Beach."

The primary goals of the Jump for the Sun program are (1) to create permanent changes in math and science instruction, both in the school district and in the preparation of teachers at the university; (2) to create hands-on learning opportunities in science and math at the South Carolina Children's Museum and to showcase girls and women as leaders and teachers in presenting exhibits; (3) to empower participants to make a difference in protecting our environment; and (4) to create awareness in parents and teachers to make a difference in the ways we are raising and motivating female students in science and math.

Program organizers anticipate that Jump for the Sun will alter the way that science and math are taught in the schools and at Coastal. A new course in biology for education majors has been established at Coastal through the grant, and other curriculum modifications are likely to occur as a result of the program, according to program director Sally Hare.

Parents of participating students also take part in the program. Jim Rogers, parent education specialist in Coastal's Center for Education and Community, facilitates a parenting course which focuses on relationship building within the family.

Student participants in the 1998-1999 Jump for the Sun program are: Erica Cooper, Janella Givens, Tietta Gowans and C'Antia Vereen of Conway Middle School; Kacie DuPuis, Kristin Leiter, Hilary Dyer, Grayson Hancock, Shahnaz Kintz, Sara Evans, Jennifer Tobin, Teddy Word and Whitney Watts of Carolina Forest Middle School; Rutie Marom of Chabad Academy; Crystal Renfro and India Walters of Forestbrook Middle School; Chevon Gore, home school; Jessie Green and Tony White of Loris Middle School; Jennifer Hills and Natasha Rorrer of Myrtle Beach Middle School; Christina Dewitt and Colette Randall of North Myrtle Beach Middle School; Theresa Cheng of St. Andrews Catholic School; Brittany Bradford of St. James Middle School; Tia Scott and Catherine Rogers of Whittemore Park Middle School.

Eight teachers from the Horry County School District are involved in the program. They are: Janice Dowe, Karen Johnson, Jane Kukulka, Melissa McCloud, Barbara McGinnis, Raschelle Moss, Cynthia Randall and Sara Tenny.

College anglers find silver offshore

Intercollegiate Sport Fishing in the Carolinas celebrates its 25th anniversary Oct. 30 with teams from Clemson, USC, Francis Marion and Coastal Carolina competing in the oldest intercollegiate fishing competition in North America. Silver is an especially fitting color for the student anglers, male and female, for the mainstay of their fishing out of Murrells Inlet is the king mackerel.

Student anglers and coaches will be fishing on the "New Captain Bill," an 85-foot headboat sailing out of Captain Dick's Marina and captained by Jack Orr. Orr takes the college anglers out 20 to 35 miles to find the clean water essential to good king mackerel fishing. During the last five years, the college anglers have averaged approaching 25 king per trip, usually the best catch of the year for any single boat sportfishing for kings on the South Carolina coast.

Orr's method is to find a hard bottom or reef and drift over it, with half of the student anglers fishing on boom for black seabass, and the other half drifting live baits or frozen herring for the predatory kings. Dolphin, amberjack, shark, triggerfish and an occasional grouper also are taken on these three-quarter day trips.

The Coastal Carolina Invitational is sponsored by Coastal Carolina University with the cooperation of Captain Dick's Marina and numerous tackle companies which contribute rods, reels, line, tackle boxes and fishing knives as prizes. The winning team also receives an asterisk next to its name on the permanent trophy of the Invitational, donated by the South Carolina Wildlife Department before it changed its name to the Department of Natural Resources. Unfortunately, the trophy was lost years ago, so the team results are quickly forgotten in the face of a good day of fishing off the South Carolina Coast.

The Coastal Carolina Invitational is the successor to the Intercollegiate Fishing Match started in the early 1950s in Wedgeport, Nova Scotia, to accompany the International Tuna Cup matches held there annually. When the big herring runs in late summer deserted Nova Scotia waters in the 1970s, both the tuna anglers and their collegiate counterparts called off their annual events. Coastal Carolina, which participated in the Wedgeport matches in 1975, has kept collegiate fishing alive and well on the Carolina coast. Competing teams have come from Japan and Canada, as well as Ivy League teams such as Yale. All the current competitors are South Carolina teams since the Invitational was cut back from three days to one in the early 1990s.

Richard Moore is in charge of judging for the event, and his colleague, Donald Millus is the tournament founder and director.
