Nobel Laureate Desmond Tutu to speak at Coastal Carolina University

Archbishop Desmond Tutu, recipient of the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize for his courageous stand against racial segregation and oppression in his native South Africa, will speak in Wheelwright Auditorium Thursday, Feb. 18 at 7 p.m.

Born in 1931 in Klerksdorp, South Africa, Tutu was a high school teacher before deciding to enter the ministry in the Church of the Province of Southern Africa. After being ordained to the priesthood in Johannesburg in 1961, he studied in London, earning bachelor's and master's degrees while serving as a part-time curate. He returned to South Africa in 1967 and held posts as a university chaplain, lecturer and dean before being elected Bishop of Lesotho in 1975.

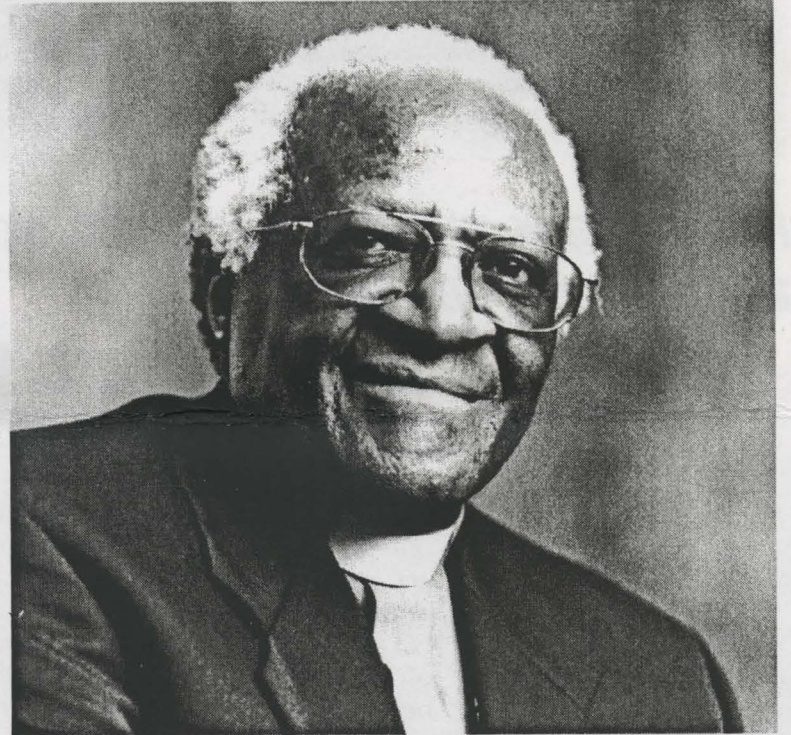

In 1978, with South Africa in turmoil in the wake of the Soweto uprising in 1976, Bishop Tutu was named General Secretary of the South African Council of Churches (SACC), an organization representing most of the major Christian churches in South Africa. Under his leadership, the SACC voiced the ideals and aspirations of millions of South African Christians who opposed the policy of apartheid. Bishop Tutu became the leader of the crusade for justice and racial conciliation, winning the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize. Two years later Tutu was elected Archbishop of Cape Town.

In 1995, South African President Nelson Mandela appointed Tutu to chair the Truth and Reconciliation Commission, set up to probe human rights violations committed in South Africa between 1960 and 1994. Tutu retired from office as Archbishop of Cape Town in 1996. He is currently Robert W. Woodruff Professor of Theology at the Candler School of Theology of Emory University in Atlanta.

Although the lecture is free, tickets are required for admission and seating is limited. Tickets can be obtained at the Wheelwright Box Office according to the following schedule:

- Feb. 4, noon to 5 p.m. – Students with Coastal I.D. will be issued one ticket per student.
 - Feb. 5, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. – Faculty and staff with Coastal I.D. will be issued up to two tickets per person.
 - Feb. 8, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. – General public will be issued up to two tickets per person.
 - Feb. 9, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. – Tickets will be issued to anyone according to availability.
- Archbishop Tutu's lecture also will be transmitted live on video monitors in the Wall Auditorium and in classrooms 309 and 317 in the Wall School of Business Building. Tickets for the Wall Building sites may be obtained according to the above schedule. Additional student seating for the live video transmission will be available in the CINO Grille in the Student Center. Student Center seating will not require tickets. Doors for all sites will open at 6:15 p.m.

Archbishop Tutu's lecture is being held in conjunction with Coastal's first Celebration of Inquiry Conference, a three-day, multidisciplinary conference presented by Coastal students, faculty and staff, and as part of the Kimbel Distinguished Lecturer Series.

Coastal establishes resort tourism management program

The E. Craig Wall Sr. School of Business Administration has established a new program in resort tourism management for students interested in careers in the hospitality industry. The new major will be offered beginning in the 1999 fall semester, according to Peter Barr, dean of the Wall School of Business.

The program combines course work and paid internships at hotels, restaurants, golf courses, entertainment venues and other hospitality-related businesses in the Myrtle Beach area.

The new program was developed in partnership with leaders of the Grand Strand's tourism industry. "A major component of Coastal's mission as a university is to respond to the needs of the community it serves," said Barr, "and the resort tourism management program is not only an important addition to Coastal's curriculum, but it is a meaningful development for the area's hospitality industry. The degree's curriculum has been molded to meet the needs of the community."

In planning the program, the Wall School of Business faculty conferred with consultants Duncan R. Dickson and Robert J. Wacker, retired human resources executives of the Walt Disney World Company in Orlando, Fla., and with the Myrtle Beach Area Hospitality Association. The curriculum for the program reflects the input of many area tourism industry leaders who were interviewed in focus groups.

Participating students will be involved in internships during all four years of the program. Classroom curriculum will complement the internships and will be broad based, covering many topics, such as environmental issues and real estate, which are not typically part of undergraduate tourism programs.

"These students will have four years of experience in virtually every aspect of the hospitality industry," said Dickson, who was responsible for the Disney internship program for 20 years. "By the time they graduate, they will have gained the background, experience and skills which will give them an edge in getting a job and will help them to rise quickly to management and executive levels. They will also have the expertise to start their own businesses."

The new program is being marketed through a nine-state direct mail campaign. "Tourism is the second largest industry in the world – second only to health care – and the opportunities for qualified graduates are tremendous," said Wacker, former vice president of Human Resources at Disney. "What better laboratory for tourism education than Myrtle Beach, one of the nation's top destinations?"

For more information about the tourism resort management program, contact Taylor Damonte, director of the program, at extension 2698.

Coastal Carolina People

Faculty and staff are encouraged to submit information to be included in the "Coastal Carolina People" section of On Campus. Information will be published following the presentation or activity.

- Stacy Cretzmeyer co-authored an article with Dr. Joseph C. Rotter, chair of the University of South Carolina's Department of Educational Psychology, which was published in The Family Journal: Counseling and Therapy for Couples and Families. The article, entitled "Do You Remember the Day We Met? Early Couple Relationship Memories," appeared in the October 1998 issue.

- Sandra Merriam, teacher-in-residence in the Center for Education and Community, was honored by the North Strand chapter of the American Business Women's Association for service in the field of education.

- Subhash Saxena published an article on the 20th century mathematician, G. H. Hardy, in the Biographical Encyclopedia of Mathematicians. The Encyclopedia gives biographical sketches and lists important contributions of great mathematicians from Archimedes of Antiquity to Zermelo of the 20th century. It also includes biographies and contributions of many women and African Americans.

Coastal Carolina University hosts Renaissance Fair Day

Area adults and retirees can choose from 27 workshops and seminars at Coastal Carolina University's Renaissance Fair Day Saturday, Feb. 6 on the Coastal campus. Topics include investing, health issues, international travel, philosophy, computer instruction, golf, history, music, photography and more. The cost to participate is $15.

Following a Continental breakfast and registration at 8:30 a.m., participants may attend one seminar from three separate sessions – two morning sessions and an afternoon session concluding at 2:30 p.m. A bag lunch is included. Seminars and workshops will be held in Kearns Hall, the Lifelong Learning Society House and the Admissions Building. Shuttle service will be available.

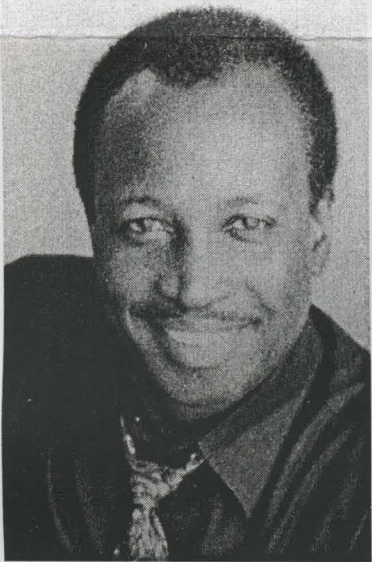

Scheduled seminars, led by Coastal faculty and staff and area experts, include:

- Session A, 9:30 to 10:45 a.m. – Wills vs. Living Trusts; Ethical Dilemmas and Life Decisions; Taoist Tai Chi; Computers for the Terrified; Kinetic Golf; See the World . . . and Learn!; The Strangeness of the Ordinary; Essays and Editorials; The Role of Newspapers in Today's Media; and "Ow, My Aching Back"- Therapeutic Massage
- Session B, 11 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. – American Railroads; Advanced Directives; The Churches of Horry County; Yoga for the Young at Heart; Social Security-Past, Present and Future; Introduction to Microsoft Word; Caregiving or Caretaking?; Piano Primer-Tickle those 88's; and Mixing Meds-The Volatile Cocktail
- Session C, 1:15 to 2:30 p.m. – Voice 101-How to Care for Yours; Surf the Net; Historical Folklore; Everyone Has a Story-How to Tell Yours; Images of the Grand Strand and More; Investing 101-For the Novice; Creative Memories; Consumer Fraud-Don't Be the Next Victim; and Gardening for Wellness-Step Into Spring.

The event is sponsored by Coastal's Lifelong Learning Society, a learning in retirement program which offers more than 60 courses each semester. Cosponsors of the event include Charter Sands Behavioral Health System, Waccamaw Pottery and Linen, Benjamin's Bagels, Krispy-Kreme Doughnuts, Pepsi-Cola Bottling Company, Wendy's and Winn Dixie.

Actor plays multiple roles in one-man show at Coastal February 3

Actor Paul G. Anderson will portray four African American leaders in a one-man, one-act musical drama, "Expectations of Triumph," to be presented in Coastal's Wall Auditorium Wednesday, Feb. 3 at 7 p.m. as part of Coastal's 12th annual African American Celebration. The event is free and open to the public. Following the performance, Anderson will answer questions from the audience.

Anderson, a professional actor and singer who has appeared in films and on television, will portray abolitionist author Frederick Douglass, singer Paul Robeson, civic rights leader Martin Luther King Jr., and Kujumu, a West African slave, during the course of the 55-minute play.

Anderson, who has presented "Expectations of Triumph" at colleges and universities throughout the United States, says that the play "illuminates the persistent yearning of the human soul for its ultimate liberation and expresses the universal themes of hope and determination."

A trained bass-baritone singer, Anderson has been involved in the performing arts most of his life, beginning as a teenager when he won oratorical contests. As an actor, he has appeared in the movie "Double Dragon" and on NBC's "Unsolved Mysteries." His other recent appearances include network commercials for AT&T and Delta Airlines. Anderson also has appeared in many music festivals and live theatrical performances in the U.S.

In addition to his performing career, Anderson has published a quarterly business and consumer magazine for African American professionals and worked as a stock broker with Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner and Smith.

Preparation for Coastal's Celebration of Inquiry Conference Picking Up Steam

The preparations for Coastal's first Celebration of Inquiry are well underway. This year's keynote speaker will be Nobel Prize winner Archbishop Desmond Tutu. To date more than 150 faculty, student and staff proposals have been accepted.

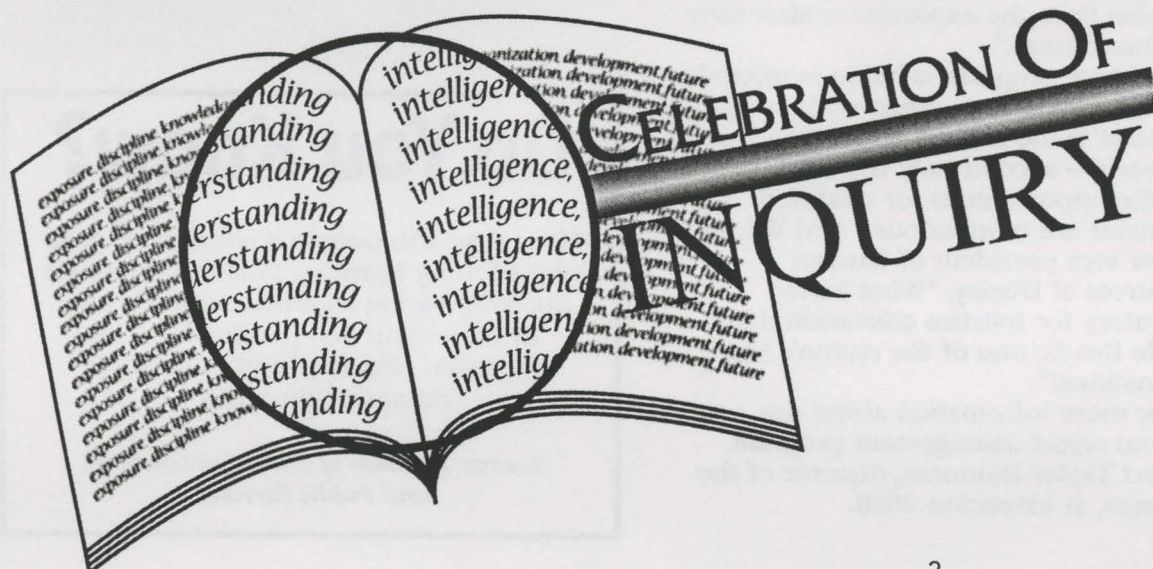

The conference promises to be a very busy three days. Wednesday, February 17, 1999, will mark the beginning of the conference with the opening session at 4:30 p.m. A valuable pre-conference session, at 3 p.m. in the Wall Auditorium, led by Richard O. Collin will introduce or reacquaint attendees with Desmond Tutu's role in South Africa. Thursday morning at 8:30 a.m. the sessions begin and will continue throughout the day, mirroring the schedule for Tuesday/Thursday classes. Friday's sessions, corresponding with that day's course schedule, will run from 8:30 a.m. to 12:45 p.m., with a post-conference session at 2:30 p.m. Sessions for these two days will vary in format and will take the form of panel discussion groups, presentations, field trips and even a one-act play. An amazing amount of information will be shared. A sample of some of the sessions which will be presented includes:

- What Makes Us Human
- Taking Sides - A Debate Between Science and Business
- Academic and Athletic Conflicts of Student Athletes
- Is Science as Objective as it Claims to Be?
- "Sex at Eight" (a theatrical production)
- Speakers Corner - in Spadoni Park
- Saving Our Lives by Choosing Creativity
- Are You an Educated Person? Revisiting the Core
- Are Birds Flying Dinosaurs?
- Learning to Live in South Carolina
- How to Tell If You Are Being Treated Fairly in Your Courses at CCU
- Conflict in Constitutional Government.

Classes will be redirected on both Thursday and Friday so students, faculty and staff will have the opportunity to participate in as many sessions as possible. Don't miss out!

New CCU courses focus on earning college degree

Two new classes offered through the Division of Extended Learning and Public Services focus on assisting people of all ages in earning a college degree.

"College Choices and How to Fund Them" is a three-hour seminar which explains how the Internet can be used to explore a variety of information about prospective colleges. Participants will learn how to visit a college campus through virtual reality tours, how to apply to colleges on the Web and how to search the Web for scholarship and financial resources, including the new LIFE scholarships.

The fee for "College Choices and How to Fund Them" is $89. Two sections will be offered:

- Saturday, Jan. 30, 9 a.m. to noon, at Coastal's Society House
- Monday, Feb. 8, 6 to 9 p.m., at Coastal's Society House

"Doing What it Takes . . . A Guide for Earning Your Degree," applicable to first time college students as well as returning students, is an evening workshop designed to help students organize and plan for the demands of college. The class will offer practical advice on budgeting for college expenses and applying for financial aid and scholarships. Information also will be presented on how life experiences may translate into class credits.

The fee for "Doing What it Takes . . . A Guide for Earning Your Degree" is $10. Two sections will be offered:

- Wednesday, Feb. 10, 6:30 to 9:15 p.m., at Coastal's Society House
- Monday, March 1, 6:30 to 9:15 p.m., at Coastal's Society House

For more information about these workshops, contact Trenna Page Metts at extension 2694 or visit the Web site at www.coastal.edu/learn.

Coastal Carolina University's Georgetown Campus Advisory Committee awards scholarships

Selection process for Resident Assistants begins

The Office of Resident Life has begun the 1999 Resident Assistant Selection campaign, "Soar With Residence Life," to recruit candidates to serve as Resident Assistant student staff members for the 1999-2000 academic year. Campus housing offers three distinct communities: Buildings A-F, apartment style living for many sophomore students; Buildings G and H, apartment living for upperclassmen, and; Building M, traditional residence hall living for freshmen students. Twenty-four Resident Assistants make up the staff in these three communities. Residence Life officials anticipate 10 to 15 RA position openings for the 1999-2000 academic year.

The process will entail two weeks of publicity. All interested candidates should pick up an application packet at one of our four scheduled Information Sessions.

Many students will ask Coastal Carolina University faculty and staff to complete Reference Forms. Reference Forms are due to the Office of Residence Life by Monday February 22, 1999.

If faculty or staff know of students who are leaders who want to make a difference in the lives of residence hall students, please encourage them to go to an information session. For more information, contact Gregg Dodd in the Office of Residence Life at 347-2406.

Coastal offers SAT preparation courses

Students interested in earning high SAT scores may sign up for a SAT Preparation course offered through Coastal's Division of Extended Learning and Public Services. The eight-week course is designed both for students who are taking the test for the first time as well as those who are planning to retake the test.

The strategies of the course include determining students' strengths and weaknesses and developing an interactive training program to help students boost their scores.

The fee for the class is $200. The following sessions will be offered:

- Saturdays, Jan. 23 to March 13, 9 to noon, at Coastal Carolina University
- Mondays, Jan. 25 to March 15, 6 to 9 p.m., at the Burroughs and Chapin Center for Excellence in the Founders' Center, Myrtle Beach
- Thursday, Jan. 28 to March 18, 6 to 9 p.m., at the Loris Library

For more information, contact Trenna Page Metts at extension 2694 or visit the Web site at: www.coastal.edu/learn.

A Note of Appreciation

"I would like to express my sincere appreciation to all those here at Coastal for their many thoughts, prayers, flowers, phone calls and cards during the recent death of my brother. I am truly blessed to be a part of the CCU family."

Thank you,
Judy Hawkins
