NOAA research ship Ferrel hosts Open House in Georgetown

The Ferrel, a research vessel of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), will be open to the public Friday, March 26 from 1:30 to 4 p.m. while it is docked in Georgetown at the S.C. Port Authority Pier. The Open House is free and open to the public.

The 133-foot ship is used by NOAA and university scientists engaged in a wide range of studies along the U.S. east coast and in the Gulf of Mexico. This month the ship is working off the South Carolina coast with students and staff from the Center for Marine and Wetland Studies at Coastal Carolina University. The ongoing studies are investigating the behavior and impacts of recent beach nourishment projects and also are identifying potential sand resources for future projects along the southern Grand Strand.

Ship time aboard the Ferrel is awarded competitively on a national basis through NOAA's National Sea Grant Program and South Carolina Sea Grant. Coastal has been awarded 20 to 25 days per year aboard Ferrel for the past six years – more than any other undergraduate institution in the country, according to Coastal Professor of Marine Science and Geology Paul Gayes. More than 100 CCU students have conducted research, lived and studied aboard the Ferrel, creating a significant opportunity for undergraduates and adding to the many activities that make Coastal's undergraduate program unique in the country.

Coastal's Center for Marine and Wetland Studies, under the direction of Gayes, is funded by several state and federal agencies, including Minerals Management Service-INTERMAR, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, U.S. Geological Survey, S.C. Department of Natural Resources-Marine Resource Division, S.C. DHEC-Office of Ocean and Coastal Resource Management, South Carolina Sea Grant and Horry County to address issues impacting the coastal zone of South Carolina.

The Center for Marine and Wetland Studies has assembled state-of-the-art acoustic sensing systems and oceanic sampling gear to conduct this work on the Ferrel, and will have it on display. NOAA personnel and Coastal students and faculty will be on hand to help facilitate tours of the ship and discuss their research.

The Open House will give the public a rare opportunity to go aboard a national marine research vessel and see how technology is used to help understand and manage coastal resources.

For more information about the Open House, contact Debbie Conner at extension 2568.

Professor Roy Talbert to lecture on Peter Horry

Roy Talbert Jr. will give a public lecture as part of the Pee Dee Heritage Center's lecture series on Sunday, March 28 at 3 p.m. in Wheelwright Auditorium. The lecture, "Reconstructing Peter Horry's Lost History of Marion's Brigade," is free and open to the public.

Talbert has done extensive research on Peter Horry, the little-known Revolutionary War soldier and rice planter for whom Horry County was named. Drawing from journals, letters and other sources, he has gathered a great deal of material on Horry, including information on his military career as an officer in Francis Marion's famous guerrilla brigade during the Revolutionary War.

The lecture is largely devoted to Horry's writings about Marion's brigade. Most of Horry's manuscripts were either lost or recklessly distorted by biographer Parson Weems in his The Life of Gen. Francis Marion.

Talbert joined the Coastal faculty in 1979. The first Horry County Higher Education Commission scholar-in-residence, Talbert is writing an official history of Coastal Carolina University. He also is the author of FDR's Utopia: Arthur Morgan of the TVA (1987) and Negative Intelligence: The Army and the American Left, 1917-1941 (1991), which won an Outstanding Book Award from the Gustavus Myers Center for the Study of Human Rights. Talbert earned a bachelor's degree in history from Furman University, and a master's degree and Ph.D. in history from Vanderbilt University. Talbert is the 1998-1999 recipient of the Distinguished Teacher-Scholar Lecturer award, sponsored by HTC.

Coastal professor publishes textbook for literacy tutors

A new textbook written by Arlene Adams is designed as a guide for non-educators who want to learn to tutor individuals in reading and writing. Published by Charles C. Thomas Publisher, Ltd. of Springfield, Ill., Handbook for Literacy Tutors: A Practical Approach to Effective Informal Instruction in Reading and Writing focuses on practical applications of literacy instruction for those who have no formal training in teaching.

"Tutors can use this book without the supervision of professional educators," said Adams. "The book combines literacy learning techniques with a lesson structure that is manageable for tutors and flexible enough to meet the needs of students, who progress at various speeds." Suggested record-keeping procedures are also outlined in the book.

Adams joined the Coastal faculty in 1991. She earned a Ph.D. in reading from the State University of New York at Albany in 1986; a master's degree in learning disabilities from South Connecticut State University in 1980; and bachelor's degrees in elementary education and anthropology from the State University of New York at New Paltz in 1976. She was named the first Distinguished Teacher-Mentor in Coastal's School of Education in 1998.

- Philip Schneider conducted a workshop on ethics for the Conway Hospital Ethics Committee in preparation for the committee providing live consultations as requested by patients, families, physicians and nurses.
- Dennis Wiseman has been appointed to the External Review Team for the Allendale County School District by the State Department of Education. The team will review the district's educational programs and operations, with special emphasis given to the areas of curriculum and instruction, and make recommendations to the district and State Department of Education focusing on strategies to strengthen student achievement performance in the district.

Coastal student club hosts seminar on impact, opportunities of increased relocation to area

The Coastal Carolina University student chapter of the Society for the Advancement of Management (SAM) will host a seminar, "The Carolina In-migration Industry - Our Twenty-Five Year Growth Engine," April 1 at 7 p.m. in Wall Auditorium. Patrick Mason, cofounder of the Center For Carolina Living, will review the economic, social and cultural impact of the ongoing population boom in the region. The seminar is free and open to the public.

The Center For Carolina Living, publisher of the Official Guide to Relocation and Retirement, is a division of American Lodging Resources, Inc. The Columbia firm provides migration trend research, strategic planning, database marketing, and prospect generation services to the tourism, real estate and economic development industries. The center produces the "Governor's Relocation & Retirement Kit," a package geared to help the more than 5 million annual visitors (of the estimated 80 million total) to the Carolinas who are in the process of considering relocating to the area.

SAM, the oldest professional association in the field of management, was founded in 1912. The Coastal Carolina University student chapter was founded in fall 1998 to serve as a forum in which students might learn more about the process and application of management.

For more information about this seminar, contact Darla Domke-Damonte at extension 2129.

1999 Faculty's Academic Excellence Award

The Office of the Provost is receiving applications for the University Faculty's Academic Excellence Award through 4:30 p.m., Friday, April 2. The Academic Excellence Award recognizes graduating students who have accumulated a record of outstanding academic achievement. The award will be presented at the University's Annual Honors convocation on Tuesday, April 20, at 7 p.m. Students eligible for this award must:

- Graduate in Spring, Summer, or Fall 1999;
- earned a 3.5 or above overall, cumulative grade point average; and
- submit a completed application form (and a copy of transcript from the Office of the Registrar) endorsed by a faculty member certifying academic excellence reflected by a discipline-related activity.

Applications will be reviewed, and a selection made, by a faculty committee representing the schools of the University and the Office of the Provost.

Eligible students may obtain the application forms in the Office of the Provost, SNGL 121. The application deadline is April 2, 4:30 p.m., Friday. Students or faculty having questions regarding this award should contact Chris Martin in the Office of the Provost, extension 2086.

Coastal sponsors conference on women's issues

"Perceptions," a one-day conference featuring 16 seminars and workshops exploring the many roles which women play in society, will be held Friday, March 26 at Coastal. The cost of the conference is $30. A group rate of $20 per person is available to personnel from a single agency or institution. Students, faculty and staff of Coastal may attend at no charge, however, pre-registration is necessary.

Conference seminar and workshop topics include:

- Race and Healing: The Relationship Between African-American and Euro-American Women
- Stop, Look and Listen: Awakening Emotional Intelligence
- Found and Lost - "Finding the Missing Pieces" - Issues in Adoption
- United Nations Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women
- Exploring Gender Bias in American Health Care
- Celebrating Life Stories: Writing as a Path to Self-Awareness
- Women and the Media: Do You Buy It?
- Abuse: The Reality of Misconstrued Beliefs
- Fostering Healthy and Whole Adolescent Girls in Today's Society
- Women at Risk of HIV

Seminar and workshop presenters include representatives of Coastal Carolina University, Citizens Against Spouse Abuse (CASA), St. Mary's College of Maryland, Grand Strand Community Against Rape (GSCAR), Horry County Schools, Mercy Hospice and Global Learning Partners, Inc.

The conference is cosponsored by the Women's Advocacy Center and Counseling Services of the Office of Student Affairs at Coastal Carolina University, the Coastal Carolina University Honors Program, Coastal's E. Craig Wall Sr. School of Business Administration, Coastal's Leadership Challenge and Peoples Underwriters of Conway, S.C.

For more information or to preregister, contact Stacy Cretzmeyer at extension 2900 or 2305.

SELF STUDY

► Coastal begins self study for reaffirmation of accreditation

The kick-off for the start of the University's two-year process towards gaining reaffirmation of its accreditation was held March 3.

Tom Benberg, an associate director of the Commission on Colleges, which is a part of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (SACS), was on campus to meet with university personnel and to help with preliminary organizational plans.

For the next 18 months, faculty, staff and administrators will be needed to help research and write the self study document. After the document is submitted to the Commission on Colleges, a peer review team will visit the campus in February 2001 and make recommendations for reaffirmation to the members of the commission.

If you would like to help with this project, contact one of the following principal committee chairs and offer to work with their section of the study:

Claudia McCollough, Philosophy and Purpose
Susan Libes, Institutional Effectiveness
John Beard, Undergraduate Program
Gilbert Hunt, Graduate Program
Wade K. Baird, Faculty
Philip Schneider, Academic Support and Outreach
Elizabeth Puskar, Student Services
Linda Vereen, Intercollegiate Athletics
Eddie Dyer, Administrative Processes
Prashant Sansgiry, Finance
Robert Nale, Physical Resources

The self-study process is a very labor intensive task, but should provide the campus community with a greater understanding of the unique strengths and opportunities that Coastal has as it serves the needs of the students into the next century.

Look for updates on the progress of the Self-Study in future issues of On Campus.

More on SACS

What is SACS?

The Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (SACS) is one of six private, non-profit, voluntary regional accrediting associations established for the purpose of improving education in colleges and schools through a process of evaluating institutions against a set of criteria. The association's Commission on Colleges (COC) accredits institutions awarding associate, baccalaureate, master's, specialists or doctoral degrees in 11 U.S. southern states (Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia) and in Latin America. The 77-member Commission is elected by the College Delegate Assembly, which consists of one voting representative for each of approximately 800 member institutions.

What is Accreditation?

Accreditation is concerned principally with the improvement of educational quality throughout the region and ensuring to the public that institutions meet established regional standards. Accreditation of an institution by the Commission on Colleges signifies that the institution has a purpose appropriate to higher education and has resources, programs and services sufficient to accomplish its purpose on a continuing basis.

The U.S. Secretary of Education recognizes accreditation by the COC in establishing the eligibility of higher education institutions to participate in federal programs. Without accreditation, for example, students cannot receive federal funding.

How Does One Become Accredited?

Accreditation is the result of thorough and careful evaluation of the educational quality of the institution. This qualitative evaluation depends heavily on the collective professional judgement of faculty and administrative staff of the institution during the self-study process, peer review by a visiting committee, and final evaluation by the Commission on Colleges.

What is the Self-Study?

The self-study is a multi-year, comprehensive, institution-wide self-assessment. The assessment and evaluation process helps ensure that an institution meets established standards of quality and that it evaluates the extent to which its educational goals are being met. From these comprehensive self-examinations come recommendations for future improvements or enhancements to policies, processes, programs, services, facilities, and personnel.*

Have you been invited?

For the fourth time, on April 17, CARETEAM will join other communities in a fund-raising project called Dining With Friends. To increase AIDS awareness and help subsidize the efforts of CARETEAM,

Dining With Friends is seeking people from the Coastal Carolina community who

with

are recognized as being motivated and compassionate individuals, who, for no other reason than to provide their friends with an enjoyable evening of dining, can also collect contributions for the CARETEAM project and increase community awareness of HIV/AIDS. The evening's apex is a private party at Hard Rock Cafe (for participants only) to enjoy coffee and scrumptious desserts and to tally the evening's fund-raising success.

If you are interested in organizing a luncheon or dinner for your department, contact Ross Bryan at extension 2311.

CCU Lifelong Learning Society offers Washington D.C tours

Coastal Carolina University, through a collaboration with the Close Up Foundation, plans to host several week-long, education-oriented trips to Washington D.C. in 1999. The tours will feature talks on current issues with policy experts, behind-the-scenes visits to Congressional offices and tours of the White House, the Smithsonian Institution museums, the National Cathedral, the major memorials and monuments, as well as an excursion to Williamsburg. The programs are organized in cooperation with AARP and are designed for adults only. Prices range from $1,000 to $1,099 per person, which includes conveniently located hotels, all meals except for one lunch, a privately chartered motorcoach, and professionally trained program instructors. Trips are planned for the spring from April to June and in the fall from September through November. An information session on tour details will be held Wednesday, March 24 at 1:30 p.m. in the Lifelong Learning Society House on campus. For more information, contact Kathy Doyle of Coastal's Lifelong Learning Society, at extension 2544 or 2665.

Coastal students excel in national business competition

Two Coastal business students ranked in the top 10 in a national-level annual competition sponsored by Phi Beta Lambda, a national organization of business students, held in Orlando, Fla. Pete DiMaio, a junior marketing major from Aynor, S.C., placed seventh in the business communication section of the competition. Wendy Ware, a senior management major from Surfside Beach, S.C., placed eighth in the human resource management section of the competition. For more information, contact Greg Krippel in the Wall School of Business at extension 2643.

48th Annual Buck-A-Cup to Brace-a-Child Campaign Kicks-Off March 10th

ARAMARK will sponsor a FREE cup of coffee on April 2 in the CINO Grille as part of the 48th Annual Buck-A-Cup to Brace-A-Child Campaign. The purpose of the campaign is to help children and adults with disabilities achieve independence. Funds raised in the campaign will provide medical equipment, physical, occupational and speech therapy, stroke support and vocational support programs. Officers and participating local restaurants will sell buttons and host special events throughout the state March 10 through April 2. BAC buttons may be redeemed for a free cup of coffee from participating restaurants. For more information, contact the Office of Law Enforcement and Safety at extension 2177

CCU's WalkAmerica team for the March of Dimes

The Horry County WalkAmerica for the March of Dimes will be Saturday, April 17 at 9:30 a.m. at the Pavilion in Myrtle Beach. Coastal's faculty, staff and students are invited to join Coastal's WalkAmerica team. Additional information about participation in fund-raising events and activities will be distributed campus-wide.

For more information or to volunteer to help, contact any member of Coastal's WalkAmerica committee.

In appreciation

I wonder how our family can merely say 'thank you' and let you know how sincerely these words are meant and that they come from the depth of our hearts. I don't know how we could have ever managed to accept the fate of Chris' death without the support, prayers and kindness shown by our dear friends. I, would at the same time, like to thank you for sharing our joy in celebrating the birth of Emery, who is truly a gift from God, I wonder if we could ever let you know how much your thoughts, prayers, gifts, and many acts of kindness are appreciated . . . and dearly treasured in our hearts. As we mourn our loss, and at the same time, celebrate our new life, we sincerely thank you for all the love extended to our family. Sincerely, Nancy Burton, Amy Peavy and family

CCU professor elected president of S.C. Political Science Association

Paul Peterson was elected president of the South Carolina Political Science Association (SCPSA) at the organization's annual business meeting Feb. 27.

SCPSA is a state-wide organization designed to encourage inquiry and to improve instruction in the field of political science through discourse and research. Its membership is derived primarily but not exclusively from the faculty of public and private colleges and universities in South Carolina.

Peterson has been a professor at Coastal, teaching courses in American government and political philosophy, since 1982. Prior to joining the Coastal faculty, he taught at Memphis State University, Illinois State University and Northern Illinois University. He also has been a visiting professor at Brigham Young University and Ashland University in Ohio and worked as a program officer with the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH) in 1985 and 1986 under the Intergovernmental Personnel Act.

While teaching at Northern Illinois, Peterson was a member of the board of directors of the Illinois Political Science Association. In addition to his service to two state political science organizations, Peterson has served two terms on the South Carolina Humanities Council, been an adviser to the Center for the Study of the Constitution, has served on peer review panels for NEH, the U.S. Department of Education, and the Commission on the Bicentennial of the United States Constitution.

Peterson earned a bachelor's degree in political science, with minors on economics and philosophy, from Brigham Young University in 1968; a master's degree in political science from the University of California, Riverside; and a Ph.D. in government from Claremont University. He has written numerous articles and essays on the founding principles of American government and on contemporary American politics. His most recent work includes "Ronald Reagan and the Reforming of American Conservatism," which appears in Ronald Reagan's America and "Democratic Envy in Sinclair Lewis' It Can't Happen Here," to be published in an anthology on literature and politics.
