Chant for a Day a big success

The Coastal Carolina Football program hosted its annual "Chant for a Day" on Friday, June 9 at Brooks Stadium. More than 260 participants, ranging from grades kindergarten through rising high school seniors participated in various position drills. Participants also toured the football facilities and met with CCU football players.

"I have a 9-year old son and this is his third year. I brought three kids with me from North Myrtle Beach and they love touring the locker room and meeting the football players and coaches. It's great that David Bennett does this for free for everyone. The kids really love it, said parent, Betsy Faulk. The event last from 9 a.m. until 12 p.m. and concluded with a pizza and soda lunch. All students in attendance received teal "Chant for a Day" T-shirts.

Campus job openings

Applications are now being taken for the following positions on campus:

Web Manager / Information Resource Coordinator I - ITS

Jonathan Ady, graphics designer in Coastal's Office of Marketing Communications, has sold a design concept to the Turn 2 Foundation, a youth organization founded by New York Yankee shortstop Derek Jeter. The innovative design, which turns the stripes of Jeter's uniform into lines of copy, is being considered for various visual uses for the foundation's fundraising efforts, for backdrops and other presentations. He made his pitch last November and got a call back from Sharlee Jeter, Derek's sister, who loved the idea. Ady, a self-described "lifetime Yankees fan," views the transaction as a great opportunity to help the foundation which promotes healthy lifestyles for inner-city kids. He will act as art director when his concept is put to work next year.
