STUDENT NEEDS ASSESSMENT FORM

Letter: Dear Fellow Students,
I find that it is my duty to be an active participant in our great campus. Our very own Student Government Association, of which I am a part, needs to seriously consider the fair and equitable allocation of financial aid.

In my understanding, the campus should be open and available to all members of the community. Regrettably, the financial aid system has failed to recognize that the primary purpose of education is to provide well-informed citizens, women and men alike, with a better way of life. This unfortunate fact can be seen in the current system.

First, the Coastal Carolina Ensemble was not able to attend the band's concert because I did not have a band shirt.

Second, I am unable to attend the band's concert because I did not have a ticket.

Third, I am unable to attend the band's concert because I did not have transportation to the concert.

In conclusion, I want to emphasize the need for a fair and equitable allocation of financial aid.

Tetramethylammonium makes debut on drug market

By Philip J. Ely

I was at the weekly meeting of the student body. I am not sure what the meeting was about, but I do know that it was a good opportunity to learn more about the student body. I was impressed with the way the meeting was run. I was also impressed with the way the students were able to express their opinions.

In conclusion, I want to emphasize the need for a fair and equitable allocation of financial aid.

Staff Writer

Coastal Carolina students Donna Bonnes, Elizer Egbert, and Karen Davis are the instructors for The Children’s Art Workshop being held at Coastal Carolina College on Wednesdays from 7:30-9:30 p.m. from Feb. 19 through April 2. The Workshop is limited to twenty children from the grade levels Kindergarten through seventh. In order to register for the Workshop be in attendance at all sessions.

The Workshop will be held in Building 1202 in the College’s Visual and Performing Arts building.

Planning, preparing for, and instructing the various workshops is the responsibility of the instructors. The workshop is directed by Dr. Walkington, who is the Associate Professor of Art and Art Education at Coastal Carolina.

“Art is a powerful tool for learning and understanding. It is a medium through which ideas, feelings, and emotions are expressed and shared. Art can also be used to explore and understand the world around us.”

Spring Arts Festival set

The USC—Coastal Carolina College Spring Arts Festival will be under way beginning early next month. All students, particularly those involved with the arts, are encouraged to participate in the Festival.

The Spring Arts Festival has long been a highlight of the spring semester at USC-Coastal. The Festival provides an opportunity for students to showcase their work, whether it be paintings, sculptures, photography, or music. The Festival is open to all students, regardless of their major, and anyone who is interested is encouraged to participate.

Students have interests in a variety of animals

Boiled in a fevered lather together, but in the same vein of repulse of a signal offense. Dean Zander, a business major at USC-Columbia, states that it's his pet's bad condition. Zander was mauling the park when another man stole the pet. Dean says he bought the guitar rakes into the house with Satan and had them each a mower.

Since then, the guitar stroke has returned several times to catch the eyes and "guitar" with Satan. The reptiles seem to enjoy each other's company. Dean reports, and the guitar stroke, where he acknowledged, "It's a very exciting fishing trip before wiggling back into the woods. "It's the damned thing I've ever seen Satan do," Dean says. "Sometimes I see them fishing both, but not in an eerie way, and if I could wear by the gins in Satan's eye that he's describing that forbidden apple to his innocent Eve.

Another Coastal student, Michelle Muller, believes the "aura of a guitar" clothe does not always prove true, she once owned a forest and a mangrove at the same time, and the two continually fought. "If I spent more time with Cancer the Vermillion Fire with Rikki Tikki Tavi (the mangrove), Rikki would get jinjas and start chewing at Cancer," she says. A battle between the coastal species would usually ensue, and they would be locked in separate rooms until they called a forest truce.

Feathers and fins, claws and whips; you never know which animal will get along and which will violently fight. But if the laws of rational govern animal behavior, let's hope Satan and Rikki Tikki Tavi stay on!}

IMMEDIATE FULL AND PART TIME EMPLOYMENT!

We are looking for friendly, verbal, motivated individuals who can provide leadership in a sales-oriented retail environment. We have 10 stores in the downtown tourist area of Myrtle Beach and employ approximately 40 young people during the season. The hours are ideal for college students; weekends in the Spring and Fall, full-time in the Summer.

We look forward to working with you, not just this year but throughout your College education. This continued employment would provide increased levels of responsibility and greater compensation. There is also the opportunity for post-college career employment with a growing regional company.

Married students must juggle home lives, work and school

By Tina Bennett
Staff Writer

U.S.C. Coastal Carolina College has a diversity of students. There are international students, married students, students with jobs, and students who have a unique situation. Not only do they have to deal with writing term papers and everyday college life, but their life after class is often filled with children, spouses, and house projects.

"It's been very hard. The financial pressure, the sacrifices my wife and I make, and the pressure to finish as quickly as I can," reflected Jerry Chen. Jerry Chen is 18 years old and has been a student since August 1984. He and his family have gone through many changes since he decided to return to school.

There are several married students. Lorrie Cooke has been a student off and on for several years. When this reporter asked how her family copes with her being a student, she replied, "They give up a lot. I try to be around there, they aren't too uncomfortable with me. Lorrie has her husband, Bill, one child in business. "It's pretty hard carrying a full load. Working 16 hours a week and having a family to care for. Lorrie doesn't think she's going to school during the day. "It's a lot more appealing!"

Students

Although all the students interviewed came to the United States for many reasons, the impression they had of the country before arriving seemed similar. They found it to be the case. The University of Chile said, "Americans are very fortunate for they have many opportunities to succeed." One student came to the United States to attend one year of high school and decided to stay for college. Another student already has a degree in business from her own country but came to study marketing techniques in the United States. Several students are here on scholarships. One European student's credits will not transfer back to her school. Another student said he expected a lot of education in Animal Science and was a little disappointed. The world recognition of a United States' education is a reason cited by Jorge Montenegro of Costa Rica. All of the foreign students interviewed came to study in the United States because of the deal opportunity for education in the American culture as well as the campus.

Lastly, the students interviewed were asked their impressions of people in the United States now that they have lived among them. The answer consistently given was, "Americans are friendly. When asked if anyone had directed you because of your accent from another country, Venetia Oram of France said, "on the contrary. I think people are interested in me because I am from another country." While we are not yet a global community, perhaps the presence of these students at Coastal is a small step in that direction. Our thanks is offered to all of the students who allowed themselves to be interviewed and contributed to this report.
