Fitness assessment available on campus

Coastal is offering a Community Fitness Testing Program in the Smith Exercise Science Laboratory. This health-related benefit is now available to the CCU community, a low-cost option for scientifically-based fitness assessment and exercise prescription. The program has been designed to meet the needs of people who are beginners or advanced exercisers. Assessments may include body composition (percentage of body fat), flexibility, cardiovascular fitness, pulmonary function, metabolic rate and muscular strength. Packages are available for you to participate in all, or part, of these assessments. As an educational and service endeavor, the costs have been structured to encourage participation among the Coastal and surrounding community. Group rates are also available.

Visit the Smith Exercise Science Laboratory Web site at www.coastal.edu/hper/exercise/fitnessTesting for more information and details about the program.

For questions, or to schedule an appointment, contact Stacey Beam, laboratory coordinator, at 349-2807, or sbeam@coastal.edu.
