USC-COASTAL CAROLINA COLLEGE

RICHARDSON TO SERVE FULLTIME AS BASEBALL COACH

Former New York Yankees baseball star Bobby Richardson has resigned his position as athletic director at USC-Coastal Carolina College to serve fulltime as the school's head baseball coach, Coastal Carolina Chancellor Ron Eaglin has announced.

Richardson, who has divided his time between coaching and administration since he came to the school in 1984, will continue to assist the college in public relations activities as an associate athletic director, but will largely devote fulltime attention to coaching the college's baseball team as it enters NCAA Division I competition.

"Coach Richardson believes that for Coastal Carolina College to compete effectively in the NCAA the athletic director's position must be a fulltime responsibility, and I agree with him," said Eaglin. As those of us who have admired his spectacular career in professional baseball would expect, Bobby's first choice of assignments was to coach Coastal's baseball team on a fulltime basis.

"I am pleased with Bobby's service to the college for the past two years and for his willingness to serve in two important capacities simultaneously. That's asking a lot of someone at a time when the college is entering more challenging competition, and Bobby has performed admirably. I am very happy to have someone of his professional reputation and personal character in a major position in the college athletic program and I know our baseball program will benefit from his fulltime attention."

Eaglin said he has appointed Professor John Vrooman, who is dean of the School of Social and Behavioral Science to serve as interim athletic director.

"Professor Vrooman has proven himself to be an able administrator," said Eaglin, "and as a former baseball coach he is also familiar with athletics at Coastal Carolina College."

Richardson issued a brief statement Wednesday expressing his wishes to serve fulltime as head baseball coach. "It is imperative at this stage of the development of its athletic program that Coastal Carolina College has a fulltime athletic director who does not have coaching responsibilities," he said.

"I am excited to have the opportunity to devote full attention to coaching baseball and I am happy to represent the college in some public relations capacities. I think whoever is appointed fulltime athletic director will be extremely fortunate to serve at an institution like Coastal Carolina College."

The Intercollegiate Athletic Committee at Coastal Carolina College issued an official statement Wednesday which "acknowledged with deep appreciation the efforts and contributions of Coach Richardson to the growth and development of the college's athletic program" and expressed "sincere appreciation for his willingness to continue these same contributions as head baseball coach."
