COASTAL CAROLINA PEOPLE

o Ed Cerny, assistant professor of business administration, recently spoke at the annual Future Business Leaders of America banquet for Hallsboro High School in Whiteville, NC. The title of the talk was "Life - the Bad and the Not So Bad." The program was held at the First Baptist Church in Whiteville.

o Zdzislaw Sikora, associate professor of art, recently opened a one-man exhibition of his work at the J. Webb Gallery in Macon, Georgia. The opening was well attended by over two hundred people. A review of the opening and show appeared in the Macon Telegraph in their weekend edition of March 14. On Monday, March 9 he delivered a slide lecture to fifty invited guests of the gallery. The subject was the recent change in his work and future directions. Also, on April 10 Sikora opened a one-man show of his work at International Images, Ltd. in Sewickley, Pennsylvania. This show included not only recent prints but several drawings. This exhibition marks the first time he has included drawings as part of a show in five years. The opening was well attended by approximately 250 people. That evening Sikora did a demonstration of "a la poupet" colour wiping and presented a short gallery talk. When this show closes in late June it will go on tour to Glass Growers Gallery in Erie, Pennsylvania.

o Susan Webb, assistant professor of sociology, was the featured speaker at Lander College's Honors and Awards Day in Greenwood, SC. She was editor of the student newspaper there and received first prize for poetry in their literary magazine in 1974, 1975. Webb also chaired a panel on "Assessment and Accountability Issues in Higher Education" at the Southern Sociological Society's 50th Annual Meeting in Atlanta, GA. Webb was also elected vice president for membership of the South Carolina Council on Family Relations at their spring meeting in Columbia and served on the advisory board for SCCFR.
