A Message From The Chancellor

I have had the opportunity to attend two functions of the Afro-American Student Organization in their recognition of Black History Month at Coastal Carolina College. The programs have been excellent and well planned; however, the most recent one, while an excellent program, suffered from lack of audience participation. I know that all of you are committed to our Affirmative Action goals and recognize the importance of our reinforcing the efforts of all student groups, but, especially the minority student groups and, therefore, I am asking each of you to participate in the two remaining programs and encourage students to participate as well.

We must provide opportunity and recognition for our minority students. Nothing helps this goal more than our involvement and giving of our time; therefore, I hope each one of you will join me in attendance at the next two events so that we can all learn from and support these fine young people.

Dr. Ron Eaglin

Coastal Carolina People

o Pat Bennett, department of nursing and president of the Conway American Business Women's Association, was the invited guest speaker for the Waccamaw District Cosmetology Affiliate during the month of January. Topics presented were "ABWA Continuing Education: Verbal and Nonverbal Communication, Motivation /Enthusiasm," and "Organization and Personal Integrity." All presentations were developed and approved by the National American Business Women's Association.

o Karen Carpenter, assistant professor, School of Education and Health Professions, has successfully completed the requirements for a Ph.D in educational administration. Her dissertation was titled "The Relationship between Job Characteristics, Work Motivation, and general job satisfaction of academic middle managers for baccalaureate nursing."

o Dr. Ballou Skinner, professor of physics, spoke to elementary students at Lakewood Elementary School on January 28. His topic was "The Space Shuttle."

o Dr. Richard Dame, professor of marine science, recently had an article published in the journal Continental Shelf Research. The article entitled "The New Flux of Inorganic Matter by an Intertidal Oyster Reef," focuses on the uptake at release of suspended particulate matter on oyster reefs in North Inlet near Georgetown. Oyster reefs are identified as major processors of particulate material in estuaries because of their high rates of filtration and feces production. While biological processes, such a filtration, are important in the removal of material from the water, physical processes, such as water velocity, are important in the resuspension of particulate materials on reefs.

o Dr. Susan Libes, assistant professor of marine science, attended the 1988 joint meeting of the American Geophysical Union and American Society of Limnologists and Oceanographers held on January 16 through 22 in New Orleans. She presented a paper entitled "The Isotope Geochemistry of Particulate Nitrogen in the Peru Upwelling Area and the Gulf of Maine.
