Coastal Carolina University celebrates its Golden Year

By Anne-Marie D'onofrio

It is the evening of Sept. 20, 1954. Earlier in the day, classes commenced at Conway High School, and you are now walking the halls of the empty building. You are one of 53 students and are looking for the room where you will meet your professor, a part-time faculty member of Coastal Carolina Junior College, a branch of The College of Charleston. Fifty years later, this day will be remembered as the humble beginning of Coastal Carolina University, an ever-changing and ever-growing undergraduate university.

Those 53 students were able to attend classes that night because of the work of the Coastal Education Foundation, Inc., a non-profit organization formed by a group of citizens who met at the Horry County Memorial Library and proposed the idea of a local college. Classes offered when Coastal began included several history classes with history of England, Medieval Europe and Greece and Rome reserved for advanced students; a public speaking course, shorthand, typewriting, business courses and elementary French, among a few others.

Through the years, Coastal continued to grow and become more independent. In 1958 Coastal Carolina Junior College became independent of The College of Charleston, and residents of Horry County raised taxes to fund the school. The present location of Coastal Carolina University was chosen in 1961 by the Coastal Education Foundation, and before another year had passed ground was broken to build the Edward M. Singleton building where 110 students attended classes. Finally, in 1975, USC Coastal Carolina College presented its first four-year degree. It wasn’t until July 1, 1993 that Coastal Carolina College became Coastal Carolina University, an independent, public university.

Today, Coastal employs over 200 teaching faculty, welcomes 6,780 students and offers 13 international study programs.

Coastal has reached a milestone in 2004, celebrating its 50th year anniversary. Founders’ Day will be the focus of the 50th Anniversary celebrations, including a special event on Sunday, Sept. 19. On Monday, Sept. 20 there will be a Founders’ Day picnic in Spadoni Park, the Founders’ Day convocation in Wheelwright Auditorium and the dedication of the Graham Family Bell Tower as well as the burial of a time capsule in Spadoni Park. Everyone is welcome to participate in these events.

In commemoration of the 50th Anniversary, and so that 50 years later in 2054, the Coastal family can remember our Coastal family of today, a time capsule will be buried in Spadoni Park. The Founders’ Day Committee is asking for the donation of items to be considered for inclusion in the time capsule. The capsule is a 14-inch metal cube with an opening of 11 inches in diameter. Suggested items include: jerseys, newspaper articles, photographs, class rings, event programs, course syllabi, and other items related to Coastal Carolina University in 2004. The deadline for submission of items is Friday, Sept. 3. Items can be delivered to Charmaine Tomczyk (349-2403) or Sallie Clarkson (349-2448) in the Kimble Library.

Also a part of the 50th Anniversary celebration is the Celebration of Inquiry. According to Charmaine Tomczyk, all committees began planning for the 2005 conference immediately after the 2004 Celebration. This academic year’s conference will begin on the evening of Wednesday, Feb. 16 and continue through the afternoon of Friday, Feb. 18.

The planning committee is pleased to announce that the keynote speaker for the 2005 conference will be Dr. Rushworth Kidder, the director of the Institute for Global Ethics. Charles Biebauer and Brad Land will also be speaking at the conference. The theme of this year’s Celebration is “Memory, Places, and Wisdom: Behind Us Before Us Within Us.”

“It comes from an Emerson quote and we feel it fits nicely into our 50th Anniversary Celebrations,” said Tomczyk, Director of the Celebration of Inquiry Conference.

For the previous year’s Celebration, classes were redirected so that students could take advantage of sessions offered during the conference.

“To fulfill the mission of the conference, the entire academic community will be engaged in the sessions of the Conference,” said Tomczyk. “We continue to make special efforts to involve faculty and students from many disciplines to collaborate on cross-disciplinary topics. With the university’s initiative of public engagement, we are particularly interested in showcasing the accomplishments of our community partners and friends.”

As a member of Coastal Carolina University, take pride in your University and join other members of the Coastal family in celebrating the accomplishment of 50 years of providing a “premier undergraduate education,” serving the community and the world.

7/16/04
Incident
Type: Simple Possession of Marijuana;
Possession of Drug Paraphernalia; Improper
Tag

While a CCU Department of Public Safety officer was patrolling University Blvd., a vehicle with an invalid license plate was noticed. Once the vehicle was stopped, it was determined that the driver did not have a license to drive. The driver was arrested, and her vehicle was searched. Some drug parapherna and an amount of green leafy substance were found. The passenger of the vehicle was also arrested on possession charges.

2. 7/16/04 Incident Type: Damage to Real Property
At 4:45 p.m., the victim stated that while his bus was parked at Santee Hall, unknown person(s) damaged the side of the bus.

3. 7/16/04 Incident Type: Breaking and Entering an Auto
The victim stated that she parked her vehicle next to the Singleton Building in parking lot “F” at 2 p.m. The doors to the vehicle were left unlocked. While the victim was gone, unknown person(s) entered the vehicle and took her prescription drugs and other personal items. The glove box was also damaged.

4. 7/23/04 Incident Type: Larceny of Cell Phone
The victim stated that he placed his cell phone with some other personal items in the weight room of the Williams Brice Gym. Once he was finished, he reported to the police that his cell phone was missing.

5. 7/23/04 Incident Type: Burglary At approximately noon, it was reported to the CCU Department of Public Safety that between the dates of July 15 and July 23 unknown person(s) entered the control booth of Wheelwright Auditorium and removed some audio/video equipment.

6. 7/28/04 Incident Type: Larceny
The victim stated that while he was in the Kinbel Library, unknown person(s) stole his bike that was attached to the rack outside of the library.

7. 7/28/04 Incident Type: Larceny
The victim stated that while she was away from her office in the Williams Brice Gym someone took her wallet.

8. 8/10/04 Incident Type: Possible
Peeping Tom
The victim stated that she had gone to take a shower when she realized that she did not have a towel. As she walked through the living area of her University Place apartment, she noticed a white male looking through the win-don. She returned to her bedroom, at which time she heard what sounded like her door closing and then the power went out. She braced the bathroom door and used her cell phone to call for help.

Job Talk

By Mollie Fout
for The Chanticleer

Welcome back Coastal! Changes are happening that will have an impact on your life! The staff of Career Services and I encourage you to jump right in - be actively involved on campus and in the world. Get political! It's a Presidential election year - the outcome will have a profound impact on your economic life in the years to come. And now is the time to begin to figure out how your personal career decisions will shape your future. To help you make good career decisions, Career Services announces the following new services.

NEW - 20/20 Career Vision Plan. Check out the plan linked to the Chanticleer image on the CCU Career Services homepage and look for an on-going feature in every issue of The Chanticleer to keep you on track with your career planning.

NEW - Every CCU Student now has an automatic account in MonsterTrak, the national college job search system connected to Monster.com. CCU Career Services is now using MonsterTrak as the official registration system for its services. Update your account online through the CCU Career Services web site at www.coastal.edu/career. login as usual if you already registered, and if you are new to the system simply use your Coastal email address as your username and the randomly generated password sent to you by MonsterTrak. Register and get access to information about part-time jobs now, internships, and full-time jobs later.

NEW - Each academic college at CCU now has a Career Services Coordinator. Make an appointment with the Coordinator in your college to set up your personal career profile and begin creating your own 20/20 Career Vision. Education: Carolyn Hickman Williams - 349-2358 or cwilliam@coastal.edu Science: Connie Jones - 349-2677 or cjones12@coastal.edu Humanities: Tom Woodle - 349-2357 or twoodle@coastal.edu Business: Mollie Fout - 349-2333 or mfout@coastal.edu CareerExpo 2004: Plan to attend on Tuesday, Sept. 21 in the Kimbel Arena from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. There will be academic program representatives, graduate school representatives and employers.

This is a career information fair for ALL students. Freshmen, start your career exploration including academic major selection, sophomores, scout out part-time employment or internship opportunities; juniors, research for information about job titles and learn which companies hire graduates with your major; seniors, talk to graduate school representatives and to employers about the hiring outlook. Network, pick up business cards, ask for information interviews and connect.

EMPLOYMENT ASSISTANCE

Seniors, START YOUR JOB SEARCH TODAY! Here are some strategies to maximize your chances for a successful job search:

- Take the time and make the effort to identify your strongest skills and research job titles that match to those skills. See MonsterTrak at www.coastal.edu/career for help.
- Research the employers scheduled to attend the CareerExpo (complete list is available on the Career Services web site) and any others who hire people with your degree and your skills. Start networking with alumni, faculty, past employers, and parents. Use Career Services SmartStart workshops to develop your job search skills. (See Below)
- Keep an open mind about where you want to be and what you want to do; some compromise may be necessary. Prepare a sharp, professional resume(s) to use in all of your job search strategies. Store resumes in the CCU/MonsterTrak resume bank and with our recruitment programs; register with the national OneStop Career Centers network, available through our Partnership at the S.C. Employment Security Commission and begin applying for employment three to six months before graduation.
- Smart Start Program for Job Searchers: All workshops will be held in the Wall Auditorium.

Wednesday, Oct. 8, 11:40 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 15, 11:40 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 23, 1:30 p.m. to 2:30 p.m.

Participate in the CareerExpo 2003 and in the Smart Start Programs to get your job search started. Career Services can provide assistance to you for local, regional and national job searches. December 2003 graduates and May and August 2004 graduates are encouraged to use the structured services of the CCU Career Services Office. Online registration with Career Services is required along with submission of your resume to the new CCU/MonsterTrak Resume Bank. Follow-up with an individual appointment with Connie Jones, Career Placement Coordinator at 349-2677 or Mollie Fout, Director of Career Services at 349-2333.

Coastal Carolina 20/20:
What are you looking at?

By Dr. Tom Woodle
for The Chanticleer

Even a blind squirrel stumbles onto a nut every now and then. That statement may seem as if it has absolutely nothing to do with career planning, but surveys of graduating seniors indicate that college students often take the "blind squirrel" approach to their career planning process. They go to college for three and a half years and then begin to think about a career during their senior year often hoping to "stumble" upon a job that they will enjoy and in which they will be successful. Blind squirrel approach.

The stark reality of career planning is that if you wait until your senior year to start, you are running three years behind. But the other reality of career planning is that if you follow the Coastal Carolina 20/20 Career Vision Program, by the time you get to your senior year you will have completed career counseling assessments, chosen a major that fits your interests, personality and career goals, completed internships with organizations for which you might want to work full-time, been trained in resume writing, interview skills and job-search strategies and will have developed a career portfolio that includes a list of potential employers which you are ready to contact for the purpose of securing a job that excites and motivates you. The reason for a college education is simple and straightforward: You're ultimate purpose for being here is to prepare yourself for "life after Coastal." Although there are a multitude of interesting and fun-filled distractions along the way, the end result should be preparation for real life outside of college. After all, even if you decide to stretch four years of college into seven years, the time spent in college is short compared to the time you will spend working for a living. By taking the time to follow the 20/20 plan you can assure yourself (and your parents) that you have put thought and effort into your future and that you will finish your college career with well-defined career goals and plans that match your interests and personality.

The Career Services Office is located in Prince 122. Specific career counselors are assigned to each college of the university so that students will have access to career planning professionals that understand their major and how it relates to the job market. Call 349-2341 for an appointment or drop by the office to find out more about the Coastal Carolina 20/20 Career Vision Plan. Blind squirrel or 20/20 Career Vision? What are you looking at?

USER ACCOUNT and EMAIL

What? A PIN number?
Each student is assigned a computer account consisting of a username and a PIN (Personal Identification Number), also known as a password.

Where? 417-348-2998

WEBCHS

The username and PIN number will provide access to the following services:
- Residence Halls Internet Access
- CCU Email
- WebCT
- WebAdvisor

Retrieving Your username and PIN number
You can retrieve usernames and PIN numbers by:
- Using the online Search at http:// www.coastal.edu/search/pin/ or
- Visiting the Registrar's Office
  (Bingfield Building), or SCS HelpDesk
  (Prince 204-A) - must bring a photo ID

Accessing Your CCU email
You can access your email from any computer connected to the Internet anywhere in the world. An open web browser (e.g., Netscape or Internet Explorer) and type in http:// mail.coastal.edu. Enter your username and PIN to access your mail. Your email address at Coastal is username@coastal.edu, e.g., john_doe@coastal.edu.

TIPS for using email
- All students have an email storage quota of 15M. "Use it wisely!"
- Students should purge deleted messages to free space.
- Students should delete unwanted email messages from the Sent Folder.
- Students should always LOG OUT after using email.

WebAdvisor
WebAdvisor allows students to register for:
- add, and drop classes.
WebAdvisor also allows students to print their grades and unofficial transcripts, and pay their tuition fees.

Accessing Your WebAdvisor
With your username and PIN number, you can access WebAdvisor online at

WebCT
WebCT is a delivery system for online courses. Many professors use WebCT to expand & enhance the teaching and learning process.

Accessing Your WebCT courses
If you are registered for a course that uses WebCT, visit http:// www.coastal.edu/webct and use your username and PIN to logon. Once you logon, a list of the courses you are enrolled in appears. To access the homepage of a course on the list, click the course name.

COMPUTER LABS
There are many specialized labs, general access labs, and smart classrooms that will help meet your academic needs. CCU ID may be required to use the labs.

General Access Labs
Library Lab, Library (HelpDesk):
M-Th: 8:00 am - 12:00 noon

Microcomputer Labs
- Student Center
- Cybersite
- Waccamaw Lab
- Santee Lab

Resources in Labs
The labs provide a variety of software packages. Most labs have word processing, spreadsheet, charting and graphics software. Some labs include more specialized software such as database, desktop publishing and programming tools. Printing capabilities are available throughout the labs. Also, scanners, digital cameras, and video tape tutorials are available.

Laptops to check out and use within the Library are available at the front desk of the Library.

ACCESSING CCU NETWORK

CCURestNet
CCURestNet comprises all on-campus Residence Halls, including the University Place network. With the exception of the Gardens, all Residence Halls are wired to access the network and the Internet. The Gardens Residence Hall has wireless access to the network.

All Residence Halls (except the Gardens) What is needed?
- Each room should have one dedicated Ethernet jack as the number of students. (Ethernet jack is similar to a phone jack, but it is slightly larger)
- Students need to purchase an Ethernet cable (Category 5 straight) that connects the Ethernet port

WEBCHS

VIRUSES
Virus pose a major threat to the network and individual computers. Students should be vigilant when opening suspicious email with attachments. Also, as the Computing Policy states, students must:
- Have Antivirus such as Norton or McAfee and update antivirus program definitions regularly
- Patch their computers
- Run Windows Update

BE AWARE OF SPYWARE
Spyware is any program that helps gather information about individuals without their knowledge. Spyware planters usually use file sharing programs such as KaZaA and Morpheus to spread.

AD-Aware 6.0 and SpyBot
are utilities designed to combat spyware.
They are free always online.

STUDENT RESPONSIBILITIES

GENERAL TIPS
- BACK UP BACK UP and BACK UP
- Befriend your projects on various storage devices.
- 2.5 Floppy Drives are susceptible to damage. Expose new storage media such as the USB Pen Drives
- Seek directions from SCS Help Desk for academic projects that require advanced use of technology.
- Be familiar with the terms of your computer warranty to obtain optimal technical support from the vendor.

A lawsuit filed against Snoop Dogg last year by Louisianaans Jaime Capdebecosq and Whitini Candiotto was settled recently, with the two girls receiving undisclosed settlements.

At a 2002 party for Snoop Dogg, a photo was taken of the girls exposing their breasts while standing on either side of him. At the time Capdebecosq was 17 and Candiotto was 18. The picture then appeared on the DVD and VHS cover of "Girls Gone Wild: Doggy Style." The "GGW" series was created by Joseph Francis, who was also named in the suit.

The girls testified that they were offered Ecstasy and marijuana by Snoop Dogg in exchange for exposing themselves. They also stated that they were promised by Francis that the photo would not be used in connection with "GGW." Snoop Dogg's response to the accusations was that the girls "voluntarily consumed alcohol and other intoxicants" during the photo shoot and exposed themselves by their own will. Both Francis and Snoop Dogg contended that a sign posted in the filming area read "By entering, you consent to the use of such film and your image in a commercial film product."

The settlement reached by both parties was approved by U.S. Magistrate Sally Shushan and signed off on by U.S. District Judge Robert McNamara.

Rolling Stones drummer Charlie Watts, 63, is being treated for throat cancer, according to the band's spokesperson.

The diagnosis was made in June, and Watts has completed four weeks of a six-week radiotherapy treatment at London's Royal Marsden Hospital. Earlier in the year, he had a minor operation, and gave up smoking several decades ago.

It is expected that Watts will make a full recovery and will begin working with the band again later this year. The treatment has not affected any tour or recording plans. In the mean time, the rest of the Stones' members are taking a break and fulfilling other commitments.

After five successful seasons of his CBS late-night talk show the "Late, Late Show," host Craig Kilborn announced last Thursday that he will be ending his show.

Kilborn stated that he wanted to try something new, so he will now be working on writing and producing different projects for television. Kilborn's last show is expected to be at the end of August or early in September. CBS will need to find a replacement for Kilborn, and the first suggestion was NBC's "Late Night" host Conan O'Brien. It has been reported that O'Brien is apparently open to the idea, but still has one more year of his NBC contract. CBS may fill the empty slot with guest hosts until a replacement for Kilborn has been signed.

Since Kilborn took over the show in 1999, the audience grew by 34 percent with an average of 1.7 million viewers this season.

Late Marriage a film by Dovar Kosashvili
In the tradition of such recent comedic hits as My Big Fat Greek Wedding and Monsoon Wedding, comes this sexy, funny and revealing satire Late Marriage. Unmarried at 31, Zaza is a blot on his family. Trotting him out before one potential bride after another, he never manages to tie the knot. Curious, his family investigates and soon discovers the reason for Zaza's reluctance... his secret relationship with divorcee Judith. Powered by the erotic chemistry between Zaza and Judith, Late Marriage is both provocative and heartrending - a hilarious and unblinkingly honest film which reflects the complications of sex, love and the family's role in the rocky road to the altar.

Aimee & Jaguar a film by Max Farberbock
Based on a true story, Aimee & Jaguar is an unforgettable film about love, passion and the triumph of the human spirit. In the darkest days of World War II, while the allies are bombing Berlin and the Gestapo is purging the capital of Jews, a dangerous love affair blossoms between two women. For Lilly (aka "Aimee"), a married woman, the mother of four sons, and an exemplar of Nazi motherhood, this affair will be the decisive experience of her life. For Felice (aka "Jaguar"), Jewish, and a member of the underground, their love fuels her hope for survival. A half-century later, their incredible story became an international bestseller.

Osama a film by Siddiq Barmak
Inspired by a true story, this Golden Globe winning drama is the first film made in Afghanistan after the fall of the Taliban. After the brutal Taliban regime bans women from working and forbids them to leave their homes without a male escort, a 12 year old girl and her mother find themselves on the brink of starvation. With nowhere left to turn, the mother disguises her daughter as a boy. Now called "Osama", the young girl embarks on a terrifying and confusing journey as she tries to keep the Taliban from discovering her true identity.

Unknown Pleasures a film by Jia Zhang-ke Unknown Pleasures follows two 19-year olds, Bin Ban and Xiao Ji, as they wander the streets and hang out in pool halls, dance clubs and karaoke bars looking for excitement. Sparks fly when Xiao Ji meets a beautiful dancer and Bin Ban pursues a romance with a young student. Taking a cue from American crime movies, the temptation of easy money becomes too alluring and in a final attempt to break free, Xiao Ji and Bin Ban embark on a half-baked plan to rob a bank. Unknown Pleasures is a harrowing account of disillusioned young people living in China.

THE LITTLEST EDITOR SPEAKS: THOUGHTS FROM JESSICA McMURRER

I got the idea in my head during middle school; I started saving money and planning the summer of 2003; I lived my dream May 10 through 29. How did I do it? I went to the Ecuadorian rainforest and the Galapagos Islands as a student in Biology 39.

Those 20 days of May were a trip, a class, an extraordinary experience and so much more all wrapped up into what seemed like a blink of an eye. Upon returning to the U.S., I found it difficult to describe the trip in words other than “awesome” and “amazing.” Since then I’ve worked on a few more descriptive phrases to make my vivid memories clear to you, who will hopefully gain a desire to take the class because of my stories.

First, you should know that in every possible meaning of the words, this is not a regular class. The fourteen classmates and I had to arrange to get vaccinations such as Yellow Fever and Malaria in order to participate. I must have spent over $200 in camping supplies and clothes I bought for the sole purpose of getting muddy and never using again. But I also got to swim with sea turtles, egg in the glass of jewelry at a huge market and watch toucans eat bananas in the rainforest. And it was because of those things and so many more that I was glad not to be part of a regular class.

However, for as much out-of-the-box learning as there was, Dr. Koester (Dr. K) made sure that conventional methods were also a big part of the time and the entire grade. Two two of the greatest cultural shocks and differences: a lower legal drinking age and insanely low prices for everything. The bar sold wonderful chicken wrap/hurricane type sandwiches for only $1 of U.S. money. Everything else that was served also had the price of $1. If we did not have to get up early the following day to travel to the rainforest, we would have spent a lot more time in the bar.

The journey to the jungle was a long one as we traveled through the Andes Mountains. The drivers of our passenger vans were either highly experienced drivers of that road or they had a death wish for themselves and us judging by the way they drove. They would pass tanker trucks while driving an up hill (mountain) 90 degree turn at 60 or so miles per hour. But somehow, no accidents occurred and we all lived to tell the story.

We reached the city of Qeninday and left the crazy van drivers and real civilization for a week. (We and our equipment) were loaded into flatbed trucks for the ride through the mud to what would be our new jungle home in Jatunsasch in the Bilsa area. It was two stories with only a bamboo ladder to reach the second floor. The building overlooked the body of water that is the area’s namesake. In this lagoon was where we bathed and swam during our stay. The water was very cool and so murky that the visibility was less than the distance from your face to your outstretched arm.

While at La Lagoona, we went on an extensively long hike through the jungle. We had to walk through shin-deep mud, up and down steep hills to get where we were going. And where was our destination? It was the edge of a 40 foot cliff. We had to scale the side of the cliff to get to the bat cave that was at the bottom of the drop. Once we reached the bottom with the help of our local guides, we crawled through a tiny opening to enter the cave. Inside the cave, there were hundreds of small bats flying around our heads and hanging upside down. After traveling through the cave for almost an hour, we reached the exit and started our hike back to the trucks that would take us back to La Lagoona. The trek was exhausting, and the trucks were a welcomed site.

The next day we headed out for our mule ride to our next place of residence in Bilsa. Bilsa is also part of the Jatunsasch area and is one of two last natural forest stands. The mule ride began in the morning, and after about six hours of riding through mud up to the knees of the mules with only a wooden saddle for padding, we reached what I thought to be the most beautiful sight all day: a sign that read “Bilsa” and told of our arrival.

While in Bilsa we stayed with people from around the world who have dedicated their lives to reforesting the jungle or studying the animals who make their home in the trees. Our group did not do any of the actual reforestation work, but we did learn of the methods and importance of the work that is done. We also learned some of the different species of trees found in that area of the rainforest and of their uses to the local people. Of course, we did not learn all of the types of trees because it is estimated that there could be over one hundred different species of trees in the Bilsa area.

We again went on an extremely long hike from the houses at Bilsa through the jungle and then back towards a different way. We ate lunch at the river and then did some refreshing swimming in the cool water. Our Ecuadorian guide through the jungle, Carlos, was our own personal hero for the way he was able to maneuver through the rough terrain with the greatest of ease. He even climbed a waterfall that must have been over 40 feet tall barefoot and without the safety or help of any guide ropes. It was truly a remarkable sight, and it was just one of the many reasons we all loved Carlos.

We left the Bilsa camp after four days just the same way we entered: on the backs of mules. Arriving back in Quito after the four hour mule ride and the trip back through the Andes Mountains was one of the most satisfying things of the journey because it meant that we would be sleeping in a real bed for two nights. The day following our arrival in Quito, we did a tour of the city during which we visited the historical cathedrals, the presidential palace and the Equator (a.k.a. Middle Earth). While at Quito, we learned of the way of life of the native people who once inhabited the area before the Spanish settled. Some of the guys on the trip shot fake poison darts at a cactus and we learned how shrunken heads are made.

The following day we left for the Galapagos Islands at about 4:45 a.m. My roommate and I were supposed to receive a wake up call at 4:00, but our room did not have a phone so the wake up call was impossible and we were woken up just before the bus left to go to the airport.

We were picked up from the Galapagos Airport and taken to the dock where we met the Lobo de Mar which would be our home and mode of transportation during our seven-day stay in the Islands. At this point, I was pinching myself just to make sure that I was not dreaming and to help realize that I was actually going to be living on a boat in the Galapagos Islands. I became even more thrilled when we met a friendly sea lion at the dock that was very welcome to being photographed. The day only got more exciting and incredible when I went snorkeling for the first time. There were times when I was so overwhelmed by the fact that I was snorkeling for the first time with the tropical fish in one of the few naturally pristine water habitats left in the world that I was close to hyperventilating. I had an underwater camera with me and my excitement made me very trigger happy with my picture taking.

Everyday in the Galapagos we snorkeled once in the morning and once in the afternoon. It is the law that no one can be on the Islands between the hours of 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. so during those hours we returned to the Lobo de Mar to rest and have lunch. While on the Islands, we listened to and wrote down the information that was given to us by our Galapagos guide Wil about the plants and animals of each island. One of the mornings was spent at the Charles Darwin Research Station located on Santa Cruz Island. The Research Station is the place where young endangered tortoises are hatched and raised until they are old enough to be released into the wild in their individual native islands. While at the Research Station we also learned of the threats to the tortoises, such as feral goats and donkeys, and the actions being taken to remove their threats.

Obsessive, compulsive detective

By Chris Brown
staff writer

Tony Shalhoub (the taxi driver from “Wings”) is the staring character in the best kept secret on television. Tony Shalhoub stars as Monk.

Monk is not your average detective. He is obsessive compulsive, has a fear of crowds, heights, the dark and dirt. Yet he is the greatest detective around. Monk’s compulsive disorder and a variety of phobias stem from the murder of his wife, Trudy, in 1997. Despite his photographic memory and his amazing ability to piece tiny clues together, he is now on psychiatric leave from the San Francisco Police Department. Aided by his friend and practical nurse, Sharona Fleming, the duo solves all the crimes that are too complex for the other gumshoes. They are the modern day Sherlock Holmes and Watson.

For example, a prostitute had overdosed on some pills. Over a dozen cops said suicide. Monk said murder. They all thought he was crazy. The chief asked, “Why murder?” Monk pointed out that if she was committing suicide, there would have to be a glass of water to get the pills down. Where was it? It makes for an intriguing detective drama, along with a wonderfully honest form of humor, as we laugh at Monk’s failings, while marveling at his abilities.

I give this show a 10 out of 10.
CHARLEY WELCOMES STUDENTS TO COASTAL
Hurricane Charley made a brief appearance in Horry and Georgetown counties on Saturday, but left the areas with some damage. The storm had reached the Myrtle Beach area by noon on Saturday and came with 75 mph sustained winds and torrential rains, causing many trees to fall and littering the area with debris. According to Santee Cooper, approximately 65,000 people were left without power after the storm.

The storm made moving in to University Place and the dorms on campus a little more difficult than usual, and also may have deterred people from checking in Saturday morning. According to Waccamaw Hall Resident Assistant Dave Devlin, check-in early Saturday afternoon was not as busy as usual. He was surprised however, that some people checked in and moved in during the rain Saturday morning.

The campus and surrounding communities including University Place and the Pines did have brief periods of power outages. Immediately after the storm, the streets on campus were littered with debris from trees. Several trees were down, including a few newly planted trees along Residence Blvd. leading to University Place, and a palm tree in front of the Singleton Building that had snapped in half.

Sergeant Lee Butler of the CCUPD felt that the storm was not as bad as it could have been. "There was a lot of rain and there's some damage, tree wise, but it really wasn't that bad of a storm. I was here for Hugo and that was a bad storm," he said.

Some students may have been affected by the evacuations put into effect Saturday evening by S.C. Gov. Mike Sanford. All four lanes of U.S. 501 were northbound, allowing more people to leave the evacuated areas (those east of Highway 17) quickly. The mandatory evacuation was lifted at noon on Saturday, and after 2 p.m. people were allowed back into those areas; however, still remained closed due to damage.

As of Sunday, there was a general advisory against swimming along the Grand Strand, issued by the Department of Health and Environmental Control. This was due to the heavy rain and high bacteria counts; the water near the beaches will soon be tested for fecal bacteria.

Also because of the effects of Charley, the new student Convocation was cancelled. It would have taken place on Sunday at 7 p.m. in Brooks Stadium.

"The check-in process was slow and that was one factor," said Lynn Willett, Vice president of Student Affairs. "We still had a continuing prediction for thunderstorms through the afternoon and evening and as well as the fact that the campus was full of debris and downed trees and broken trees. It just was the wrong weekend for us to try to be able to do the convocation. It was disappointing but I think it was the right decision and we certainly look forward to doing the event next year.

Throughout the weekend, students continued to check into dorms and move in. Eyes are now watching the other tropical storms making their way through the Atlantic.
"The Fraternity of a Lifetime"

OVER 100 YEARS ago a group of law students at Cornell University began with a vision; they founded the Delta Chi Fraternity. Since that October evening in 1890, from our origins as a professional law fraternity to our status today as one of North America’s leading and most progressive social fraternities, Delta Chi still continues to stand for and promote its classic values: Justice, Character, Friendship and Education.

Leo (July 22-Aug. 22): At this point in your life, you may feel that you are just surviving one storm to battle another. But fear not, you have the strength to get through whatever life and Mother Nature throw your way. Your strength will be very helpful as you try to find a rhythm that works for you in the coming months. Soon you will find the way that is best, and you will have smooth sailing from then on.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Focus has always been a bit of a problem for you, and that is something you are going to have to try to work on in the coming semester. The beginning of the school year is the best time to practice this so that when it is time for tests, you will have no problem with the necessary studying to get the grade you deserve. The end of the month may prove to be a time of great happiness; make sure you enjoy it.

Libra (Sept. 22-Oct. 22): It may no longer be spring Libra, but now is the season of new beginnings and change for you. Maybe in the recent past you were not exactly happy with some of your actions or the way things turned out in a relationship. Well, now is the time to make things right with yourself and others by taking some proactive measures. Do what you have to so that you are the person you want to be to yourself and those around you. You will find that the changes you make will make you a happier person.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): College is not just about the education you will get from your professors and the books, although that is a big part of it. You will also be learning about yourself and the people around you through all of the coming events, big and small. Remember to view all experiences as an opportunity to learn something new. And of course, make sure that you have fun while learning all of these new lessons in and out of the classroom.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 20): If you have been feeling a little under the weather recently, now is the time to improve your health. Before you check yourself into the local hospital, you might want to try some of the old fashioned, over the counter methods. It is important to take care of your health now, Sagittarius, before the stress of the school year sets in. Stress can make even the Capricorn (Dec. 21-Jan. 19): Love and relationships can be very tricky things, and you are no stranger to this fact. Like all other aspects of life, practice makes perfect. Do not shy away from a potential relationship just because you feel you have weakness in this area. Even if the relationship fails, you will be able to learn from it about the type of person you should or should not be dating. With that knowledge you will be able to find that one true love.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 17): It’s the age of Aquarius. Take advantage of your good luck and moment in the spotlight. Your happiness and good fortune will be felt by all you meet. They will be willing to join your company. Now would be a great time to get involved with an organization that interests you because they will surely be open to your suggestions.

Pisces (Feb. 18-March 19): Your imagination is a powerful tool, Pisces. You are the person who your friends and family turn to when they need a creative solution to a problem. In the later part of this month you may be required to use this tool to your benefit and pleasure. You may even amaze yourself with your creativity.

Aries (March 20-April 19): Nothing is an accident. Everything in your life happened to bring you to this point and place, and everything that continues to happen will take you to your place in the future. Although things may not seem right or good at the time, they are just the way they are meant to be.

Taurus (April 20-May 19): If shyness has haunted you in the past, now is the time to change that. In the coming days, opportunities will abound for you to speak up and speak out. Your friends will enjoy seeing this brave new side of you, and strangers will most likely become friends because of your newly acquired outgoing personality.

Gemini (May 20-June 20): You worked hard all summer, Gemini. Even though it is the beginning of a new school year, you may also want to take some time and relax. Maybe go see a movie with friends who you missed the past few months because of your busy work schedule. It will be a great way to unwind and catch up.

Cancer (June 21-July 21): Lying will solve nothing. Tell the truth, no matter how awful or hurtful you may think it is. The people in your life will be more hurt by you hiding the truth than the truth itself.

Dear Lolita,

My girlfriend always wears very sexy, skimpy and silky lingerie. Of course, I am not complaining; her fancy bras and panties always arouse me. And I was wondering why it is so arousing, and if me wearing something other than plain boxers would turn her on in a similar way?

Too Plain in Plain?

Dear Plain,

You have asked some very interesting questions and bring up some great points, so thank you.

Now, as for your attraction to your girlfriend wearing the sexy undies, I can only assume the reason is because you get to see more of your favorite aspects of her compared to - sports bra and a pair of briefs like what your grandmother wears.

I can only make that assumption because I actually have no idea about why you are so attracted to this kind of underwear. Everyone is attracted to different things and most of the time the reason why is unable to be put into words. It's the same way that some guys are into books, while others like butts. Some guys, you like, are all about the sexy and skimpy, while other guys find it a total turn on when a girl wears an old t-shirt and boxers shorts.

For this topic of you wearing silky and skimpy undies to arouse your girlfriend, it might not be as simple as you think.

Most girls would say that a woman's lazy thong is sexy, even if it is just lying around, the authors of Guide to Getting It Off! point out that, "not many of us would look at a pair of men's briefs that were laying on a bed and use the word 'sexy.'" The only exception to this concept may be that very large Calvin Klein model in Times Square. The Calvin Klein model works so well to promote the brief underwear because he is an all over sexy guy with a huge package under that extra tight wrapping. On the regular, nonmodel guy, the underwear might seem rather plain.

In this modern time, the lines between masculine and feminine are becoming more and more blurred by popular fashion and culture. So it is possible that your girlfriend will not be horrified by the fact that your undies share a similar cut and fit (bikini). However, culture has not gotten so liberal that lace and silk are likely to be accepted.

But as I stated before, every person's idea of what is sexy is different. Ask your partner about what she would like to see you wear to arouse her. You both could be pleasantly surprised by the outcome of the conversation.

Lolita is not a licensed doctor or psychiatrist, although she is a licensed driver. She is just a single, hot, funny and knowledgeable girl that gives advice on everyone's favorite topic for free. Dinner and a movie: "Collateral" and Sticky Fingers

By Randy Engstrom

Hey, it's your boy Randy here. I'm excited to be back doing the column you all have grown to love. Dinner and a Movie. I guarantee this year's reviews will be filled with as much excitement as the previous year, if not more. So kick back, relax and let me take you off into the magical world of movies, food, pixie dust...ok maybe not the pixie dust, but you get the idea.

My first column of the new school year is going to be about the movie "Collateral" starring Tom Cruise and Jamie Foxx. This movie falls under the category of thriller/Hollywood crap. Yes, that's right, I said it. Hollywood will do this to probably 60-70 percent of the movies they ship out. They put in a couple big stars, come up with a good story line, advertise like hell for it, but put absolutely nothing into the movie. This movie had so much potential, but I'm sad to say the makers got a little too lazy and didn't take care of the fine-tuning, which any movie lover can detect.

The first mistake I noticed was the dead guy in the hospital morgue who moved and looked at the camera; hmm that shouldn't happen if he's got one bullet in the forehead and another two lodged in his chest. All that it would have taken to fix is a "Cut, re-shoot that one real quick boys the dead guy moved." When I go to a movie, I like being immersed in it; I want everything to be how it really should be. That's why these guys get paid...the more, not to cut corners so they can begin filming the sequel to it.

Another scene which really threw me off was when Max (Foxx) was driving Vencini (Cruise) around and they had to stop for a red light. That's normal and understandable, but the part that threw me for a loop was seeing a coyote crossing the street while they were stopped. I guess some would say this is normal, maybe in some Arizona city, but this whole movie takes place Los Angeles, CA. No not the outskirts either, I'm talking downtown L.A. Of course, I've never been there, but I have yet to hear about any coyote sightings in that area; forgive me if I'm mistaken.

Sure there were other things which I disliked, like sloppy screen writing, very little dialogue between characters, characters knowing too much or too little for that matter; you'll know what parts I'm talking about if you see the movie.

But I don't want to completely rag on this movie. Cruise played a great villain. It was nice seeing him in a slightly different role than most of his usual work. Cruise wasn't like most villains that you hate and hope gets defeated; I was halfheartedly rooting for him. I mean he was actually one hell of a nice guy when he wasn't killing everyone who got in his way. The lead actors were where it was at; they really had good chemistry between them.

Another positive for the movie was the action. The movie got an "R" rating, and there wasn't any nudity, so clearly there had to be a high amount of gore and foul language. Those two things are key ingredients to a good thriller. One other positive I will promote for it was the soundtrack. Although there was a lack of dialogue which I mentioned before, they filled the gaps nicely with jazmin music.

So, although I criticized the movie it is still worth seeing in the theater especially with the other options which are out right now. I saw it at the new theater that opened in Coastal Grand Mall. The sound was amazing, and it had reclining seats; it was a real treat.

As you know, or may not know, I like to link the movie I see to the restaurant where I eat. The link I used for these actually had nothing to do with the movie, but the location. I went to the theater at Coastal Grand, so I chose to check out one of the new restaurants that opened there as well. My choice was none other than Sticky Fingers.

This place is cool. Everything about it is exactly what you ask for in a restaurant. I love putting up a place and getting that delicious aroma from the kitchen. This place had it. And once you get in, you get a friendly greeting from the hosts. That's all fine and good, but the food has to be up to par as well. So I opened the menu to see an array of options before me, and without the sticker shock either. Meals were appropriately priced which is rare, especially in a touristy Myrtle Beach restaurant.

I chose to start off with a side salad, you know, try to stay healthy when I can. And why pass up on a salad when it's only two bucks with your meal? I ordered the Cheesy Chicken sandwich which comes with seasoned fries. It was a grilled chicken breast made with one of their special barbecue sauces on a Kaiser roll with bacon, lettuce and two cheeses.

Mmm, mmm it was delicious. I recommend going with a larger than normal appetite because they don't skimp on their portions. What better to wash it down with than a freshly brewed tea? I didn't have one complaint about the place. The food was quickly served and plates cleared just as fast. I got my refills in a timely manner. This was top notch service, so head out to Sticky Fingers if you haven't already and given it a shot.

Here are a few celebs you may have heard of who have been and enjoyed it: Jessica Simpson (she wasn't stupid this once for eating here), Tom Petty (he knows where to get his munchies), Jerry Seinfeld (looking to save a couple ba-ks), and Tom Brady (winners know a good thing when they see it) just to name a few.

Sticky Fingers is even rated amongst the top 15 in America for best BBQ in "The BBQer Magazine," and if they think it's good, it must be true.
The Family Man

By Danny Nolan

Ingle’s plans for the new stadium, Bennet knew Coastal is the place for him.

On a late and rainy summer day, David Bennett pulls up in his white pick-up during training camp, jumps out and runs into the locker room, his eight-year-old son, Jeb, walks alongside him. At this moment, Bennett does not look like the football coach in charge of a second-year program. He looks like a dad with his hands full. This is something that Coach Bennett calls “stealing time.”

Before coming to Coastal Carolina, David Bennett was a successful division coach at Catawba, his overall record was 63-17, and he won four titles and four Coach of the Year awards before being recruited by Coastal Carolina to be the new head coach.

The two most important things in Coach Bennett’s life are God and his family. Although he loved the idea of bringing his family to Coastal Carolina, which is nearby Cheraw, S.C where he was raised, he was not sure that Coastal would make that commitment to football. But after seeing President Ronald “Anything I do I want him and our daughter to see me and be around me; that’s my number one priority,” said Bennett. Bennet has been able to accomplish this by having his family join him after practice or shooting a game of golf with his son on off days.

“My mom and dad, my wife and kids and my brother and his wife all come on Friday nights to help serve the pizza, cake and cookies,” he said.

Of his family, Bennett said, “They are the only reason I am a decent coach because of all the support from those people.”

Play a major role in bringing events to YOUR campus!
It’s an unofficial holiday, and for the third straight year, I have taken off for this most magical of days. I feel almost like a little school girl thinking about her first crush. It’s the day that’s on every football-loving person’s mind all summer. That’s right, I am talking about the release date of that holiest of holy games, Madden 2005.

Last year, more than 5.4 million units of the game were sold across all platforms—PlayStation 2, Xbox, etc.—and you had a better chance of finding an anatomically correct Ken doll than you did a bad review of the game. The bad news that comes with the release of the ultimate football game is that millions of girlfriends across the nation are forced to play second fiddle to a plastic disc. For the record, I am fine with this, because I myself have driven a girlfriend away for some alone time with the big man. This was the typical argument with my then-girlfriend Amy.

Amy: “Danny I want to go out tonight and see a movie.”

Me: “Sorry, I am working my Dynasty. I have to decide who would make the better special teams coach, Steve Spurrier Jr. or Jim Gray. Who do you think I should pick?”

Amy: “I think you live a sad life and I hope you and John Madden are happy together.”

So yeah, she left me because I was too involved with a ‘video game’ but here’s the thing… I didn’t care.

Now that I am a free man, I don’t have to worry about any “crazy” girlfriends while I play up to year 2017 in franchise mode.

This new Madden is amazing. It’s like they took every wish list of every Madden fan and put the best ideas into the game. Players now complain if they are not thrown the ball enough, so now you know how it feels to deal with a pain in the arse like Terrell Owens. Oh yeah, I almost forgot the best part, the all-new “Hit Stick.” With the “Hit Stick,” all it takes is a quick flick of the joy stick in any direction to lay the smack down on any player and dislodge the ball to change the momentum of the game. My buddy, and Madden soul mate, Justin, says the “Hit Stick” is the greatest invention since the wheel.

Justin and I heroically braved hurricane Charley so we could grab our own copy of the game. I was quivering with happiness from the excitement of playing the game, or maybe I was quivering from the fact that I just drove through a hurricane! After Justin and I made our purchase, we headed home, but first we had to stop at Justin’s girlfriend’s work to inform her that Justin would not be around for the next couple nights. Justin would be facing some of those perplexing questions that I faced earlier.

Justin and I joined “Dinner and a Movie” Randy for our first of many PS2 battles, we played from noon till...uh...noon the next day. Of course I chose the Redskins, and I got to test out the new running back Clinton Portis. It makes me tear up a little when I think of him in a Redskins uniform. My current record with the Redskins is 0-6. In one game against Justin and the Eagles, QB Mark Brunell tossed 3-for-25 with four interceptions. He did everything but take a giant dump at midfield to stink up the game.

After my loss, I did what any sportsman would do, I called Justin a cheater and turned off the game. Hey, nobody is perfect.

My 2 Cents
Doug: Hey Danny, I watch poker five hours a week on TV. Does that mean I secretly want to have a gambling problem?
I think it means poker is on TV entirely too much, but I don’t mind, at least my boy Norman Chad is getting some attention.
