Breaking the Cycle

AIMEE DE WINTER

Women of color are finally having their voices heard - and didn’t have to say a word.

"For Colored Girls," a film released Nov. 5, is bringing issues to the surface that have been suppressed for decades...until now. And the stories of color women are finally being told.

"Women of color have had a hard time, many of them feeling that their voices were lost," said Alemar, a storyboard artist who worked on the film. "But now, with this movie, people are finally being heard.

The film was directed by Tyler Perry, who is known for his work in African American cinema. He has faced criticism for not casting more women of color in his films, but with "For Colored Girls," he has proved that he is capable of telling stories that are important to women of color.

"I wanted to break the cycle," said Alemar. "I wanted to show the world that women of color are not just victims, but are capable of telling their own stories."

At Thanksgiving and the end of the semester draw near, burglaries are becoming more frequent. Provost Robert Sherhan and the Department of Public Safety (DPS) theorize that some robbers are connected to drug-related activity. According to the present, drug dealers want to ensure they are paid before students leave campus.

"We have discussed the theory with the police," said Sherhan. "We didn't see it this last year, but the two or three years before that, we saw break-ins and home invasions that seemed to be correlated at the end of the semester and drug dealers trying to get their money before students leave campus." Sherhan stated the illegal activity occurred before apartments were University-owned.

However, burglaries have already been occurring in the new University Place phase three on Campus Edge. "There is no one around at night and there have been minimal thefts since CCU bought Campus Edge because of the University's law enforcement," said Suttles.

Dr. Danny Harrington, sophomore sociology major and a resident, has also not had anything stolen from his apartment, but he also said the economic times could be a factor. "These bad economic times affect students as much if not more than non-students, because they're having to pay for books and tuition and can't get a full-time or part-time job," said Suttles. "The whole lot we can do about the economic condition, but protects our stuff is something we can do." Public safety recovered 18 iPods during Thursday's and Friday's bust, and is conducting an investigation to find the owners of the devices and the GPS device and the person who stole them.

"We keep our doors shut and locked at all times," said Breuer. "I've heard of things being taken around here so we keep everything locked, even when we're getting the mail or going to the gym." Harrington said he hopes to meet the person who returned his iPod.

"They're pretty expensive and you can't just go into the store and buy another one," Harrington said. "I'm really fortunate to have my iPod return to me."

Airel Bennett, senior elementary education major and one of the resident assistants (RA) in UP3, and Shirley, a 30-year-old War vet from Afghanistan because students aren't securing their items, we want to keep an eye on their things.

"We want to caution our students as they get ready for holiday time that the Christmas that they the incidents of burglaries which people seem to be, is concern to us," said Sherhan. "We want to talk to their possessions, and want to know what they think they should have at home if they're going on the holidays. We want to keep people safe because any burglary or any criminal activity has the consequence of hurting somebody and it is very important that we keep our students safe."

A dedication ceremony was held Nov. 5 to unveil the Chad Michael Beaty Memorial Bell Tower. In an effort to celebrate Beaty's life and contributions to Coastal Carolina University, Pi Kappa Phi fraternity planted the memorial in Beaty's honor.

The bell was installed on Feb. 9, 1995. He is remembered by many at CCU's campus, and his legacy lives on through a number of awards and scholarships. In 1996, the national fraternity on a motion of Chad Beaty as the 124th member of theEta Phi chapter. In 2002, another resolution by the Eta Pi Chapter was passed authorizing the posthumous induction of Chad Beaty as the 124th member of the Eta Pi Chapter.

More than 50 CCU alumni and fraternity brothers attended the ceremony - the best alumni turnout of any fraternity this month and the ceremony was spearheaded by CCU alumni James Dees.

Dees said the tower honors leadership and each time the bell rings, it will be a reminder of passion and commitment. Beaty was killed in an automobile accident on Feb. 9, 1995. He is remembered by many at CCU's campus, and his legacy lives on through a number of awards and scholarships.

CCU offers nursing program in collaboration with HGTC

Coastal Carolina University has established a Bachelor of Science in Nursing completion program in conjunction with Horry-Georgetown Technical College (HGTC).

The 23-credit, three-semester program is designed for nurses who have completed an associate degree in nursing and are licensed in the state of South Carolina. Students who complete the program will earn a Bachelor of Science in Nursing (BSN) degree from CCU and will be eligible to apply for graduate study in nursing.

"This was initiated as a collaborative project with HGTC in response to an urgent need in the region," said Pat A. Bohanan, associate professor and director of nursing, who was hired in January to develop the program.

"The hospitals want it, and the nurses want it," Bohanan said. Classes began in January 2011 with an expected enrollment of 20 to 30 students.

More than 50 prospective students have inquired about the program, nearly all of them graduates of the nursing program at HGTC. Saturday classes are planned to accommodate working nurses. Through a collaborative agreement, classes will be held in the Spier Building on HGTC's Grand Strand campus.

The program has received approval from the South Carolina Commission on Higher Education and the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (SACS). National accreditation is being sought from the National League for Nursing Accrediting Commission.

For more information on the program, call Bohanan at 843-349-4112 or e-mail her at paboahann@coastal.edu.

Research competition continues

While the Celebration of Inquiry Conference is on hiatus for the Spring, the Undergraduate Research Competition, which is a part of the Conference, will continue next Spring. The day-long event will feature undergraduate research projects and papers presented before faculty judges on Saturday, April 2, 2011 in the Wall Building. A "Call for Submissions" will be e-mailed soon.

One of the valuable outcomes of undergraduate research is sharing the results with others. The Undergraduate Research Competition is the on-campus opportunity for students to present their research results and be part of an award competition. Presentations are eight to ten minutes long followed by five to seven minutes of Q&A.

Presenters are judged on: Originality/Creativity, Methodology/Design, Argument, Evidence of Research, Importance to the Audience and Clarity. Organizations or students who may be presenting their research at other conferences, it is an opportunity to practice the presentation and to glean feedback. In addition, the first place winner receives $500.

One change from last year's competition is the year's submission form requires the name and department of the faculty research mentor. This helps reviewers to validate the research completed and gives recognition to the faculty mentor. For students who produce a poster of their research results, there will be a poster session scheduled for displaying their posters. However, to enter the competition, each student must present their research. "Face-to-face" is the judges according to the competition guidelines.

Dear Editor:

My name is Tim Snyder, a junior here at CC, a big time reader of the Chanticleer. I sometimes wonder why I still read the Chanticleer. I think it's because I am hopeful for a decent publishing. Time and time again I just throw the newspaper away. I am sick of thearring columns.

A few weeks ago Ms. Tiera Smith basically blasted the students here at CCU for their lack of school spirit or whatever. Though, I have never seen Ms. Smith at a football game. If she's been there, why don't I hear her screaming? I am an executive for SCREAM. I take that personally when you blast CCU students for not supporting their team. The most recent article made me really want to write this letter. Cody Sumazi, What is this guy doing? Sports is the easiest thing to cover here at Coastal. Did not forget the heartbeat that WINDSHOP caused us last March. He said "After a tough loss to Charleston Southern University... say the last line again," Are you freaking kidding me? Who edited that? Small inaccuracies just bother the hell out of me, as they should as well to any decent reader. Granted, this isn't USA Today. I know we've college ap here. But 4 paragraphs talking about "The NFL is a big sport after?" Why don't you keep us up with the Kardashians while you're at it... That is all.

Dear Editor:

In a recent letter (Nov. 8-14), Jesse Riley claims that President Obama received support from young people "solely because he is black," and that the minority elections prove that informed voters "looked past his color" and voted against him. These assertions are questionable at best. According to analysis by the Pew Research Center, voters who said race was important in 2008 "voted overwhelmingly for McCain" (http://www.pollingreport.com/pubs1023/exit-poll-analysis-2008). Moreover, election analysis almost always favors the opposition, especially during a time of economic crisis.

There are informed and uninformed voices of all persuasions. When someone makes baseless assertions that "politically uneducated people," vote for one party or the other, that person merely displays his own ignorance.

Women are queens, should be treated as such

Women have been passing us by as merely sex objects or inferior to their masculinity. It's a mentality that should be treated as such, and should be treated as such, just as we are. It makes me want to make any drastic changes in my life, but I don't feel the movie was meant for only black women. It was meant for everyone. It is OK for me to say that the ink, skin and hair color was meant for only black women, but it is not for me to say that the movie was made for everyone. The movie was made by our society and should be treated as such.

Winter break will bring changes to class time slots

ELIJAH BLACK

Coastal Carolina University is changing its class time slots. The University will implement the change next semester—spring 2013. The new class time slots will have 10-minute breaks instead of the 15-minute breaks the University now has. And classes that are usually held two days a week will be held three days a week. The University will no longer have Monday/Wednesday classes.

According to Michael Ruse, chair of Faculty Senate, these classes will have 60-minute periods, and more sections of these courses will be offered. "Things haven't changed a lot, but more classes will help handle the rapid student growth," Ruse said. More classes have been offered during the day to make it more convenient for students, especially those who work at night.

The student population growth at CCU pushed for more buildings to be built on the West Campus. "Because of the increasing student population, we need to maximize facility space on campus," said Dan Lawless, CCU University Registrar. Lawless also stated that while CCU is waiting for new buildings to be built, the time slots will undergo some changes to meet the need of students.

Some CCU students agreed with the Office of Registrar's time slot changes while others disagreed. Chris Smith, a senior political science major, disagreed with the new class time slots. "The random times may cause me to be tardy," says Smith.

Kaleb Murphy, a sophomore drama arts major, Shaldrick Iyeman, a junior accounting major, and Michael Miller, a sophomore business management major agreed that their grades would not be affected by the 10-minute slots between classes.

"Shorter breaks will keep me focused and my day will go by faster," says Murphy. Iyeman said that the time changes aren't a big deal and shorter breaks help keep her focused as well.

Miller said, "Changing class times shouldn't interfere with class performance at all.

First 'Fitness Frenzy' a success

NICOLE NEDWODEK

A new event has come to campus—and it's getting people in shape.

With Thanksgiving around the corner, faculty, staff and students turned ways to get fit (and stay fit) at Coastal Carolina University's first "Fitness Frenzy" held Nov. 6.

The event included activities in which all students could participate such as spinning, yoga classes, Zumba, strength circuit and nutrition discussions. Cans were also collected for Coastal Activities Boards canned food drive. Tara Farrell, assistant director of Campus Recreation and coordinator of the event, was pleased with the results.

"We had a great turnout, with 39 participants," said Farrell. "And with so many students living on campus and able to come out and join, we'll like to see the number of participants double next time."

Farrell said the majority of the participants attended more than one of the events, something they hoped for.

Students assessed their body fat percentage and body mass index during the body composition assessments. Cans were also collected for Coastal Activities Boards canned food drive.

"We had a great turnout, with 39 participants," said Farrell. "And with so many students living on campus and able to come out and join, we'll like to see the number of participants double next time."

Farrell said depending on the amount of participation, she hopes to hold another "Fitness Frenzy" event early in the 2011 spring semester. She hopes to have 100 people attend and wants to attract another demographic—men.

"We may shift things to target more male participants, such as opening the gym early to have them come and work out," said Farrell. "Because even with the strength training this time, there was still little male participation. I was really pleased with the outcome, it was a lot of fun while being healthy as well and I hope to have even more participants the next time around."

SPORTS

IN THE HOT SEAT

GREG MARTIN

What stood out to you about CCU that made you decide to come here?

"Coach Ellis. He has a great track record and has proven that he knows what he's doing. I wanted to play for him here."

What do you want to do when you graduate?

"I want to keep playing somewhere, so I want to start my own recruiting service. Stay involved with the game."

Did you play any other sports in high school?

"I played football up to high school but due to injury, I chose to only play basketball."

Do you have any pre-game rituals? A specific pre-game meal or a favorite play list you listen to?

"I actually can't eat before a game. I don't have a specific song I listen to. I just listen to the shuffle buttons and listen to whatever comes on."

Last year, you scored a career high of 17 points and had four assists in the win over Indiana State. What was one thing you think you did well in that game to have so much success?

"I was aggressive, attacked more, got my teammates involved and played hard."

You were named to the Big South Conference All-freshman Team in 2009-2010. What's one strength you have - and want to continue to use this season?

"I had speed, but I didn't use it like I felt I should have. But this year, I am going to use it more to set up my teammates."

What is one weakness from last year that you've improved on?

"My jump shot. I was more confident taking my jump shot. A lot of times play off me, so I'm going to be ready to take that jump shot and knock it down."

How has your role on the team changed?

"The coach has Thanksgiving dinner at his house for the team, what is the best dish he has to offer? "They had Queso dip, and I think everybody on the team would agree that was the best."

If I asked coach to describe you what do you think he would say?

"Quiet and Humble."

1991, Ellis released a record called "Love Island" by Cliff Ellis and the EBS All-Star Blues Band. He cut another record, "Cliff Ellis and Friends," which includes several rock 'n' roll songs and a rendition of "Amazing Grace." Have you ever heard coach sing? And what do you think about it?

"I've never heard him sing. I've heard music that he's recorded, I don't think it was bad at all. We still like mock it and make fun of it but it's not bad at all."

What offensive system will be run this season?

"We will play inside and out like last year. We got Chad and Mike in the paint which will draw a lot of attention on the inside and we guards have to be ready to shoot."
