Coastal Carolina released its "Master Plan" in February 2011, after completing a yearlong planning process to determine the school's best use of existing landscape and future growth prospects.

The school would like to accommodate 12,500 students in the future, up from the 8,500 currently enrolled.

Substantial campus additions are needed to facilitate the growth, the present's office projected the school needs an additional 226,800 sq. ft. of instructional space.

The Lilly Jackson Student Center alone should triple in size, according to national standards. In the fall, it will be turned into a student union complex housing additional dining, meeting, and lounge space.

The plan calls for a more pedestrian-focused campus and will move classes currently held on East Campus back to the main campus. Keeping the facilities on East Campus open for applied research and "back of house" administration use.

According to the Master Plan, it will consolidate all academic facilities within a compact pedestrian academic core formed by a westward Chanticleer Drive.

Coastal plans to add a bike path from University Place to campus across HWY 544 and along the second street east from Quar Creek Golf Course.

The plan will eliminate all parking in the campus core to plan for the future of the new academic buildings and enhance the campus aesthetics. Parking will be located on the edges of campus, and vehicular traffic will be circulated around the campus and便于 pedestrian and bicycle movement within the core.

Construction on the Library began in April and is scheduled to be complete by May 2012. An addition to the library will give students access to a wide array of study and research tools open 24 hours a day 7 days a week.

The S.N.A.P. Mentors

A Small Organization Making a Big Difference

JILLIAN FREDERICK

The S.N.A.P. (Students Navigating And Advising Prospective Perry) mentoring program is a great program for incoming freshmen to get involved in. The program is sponsored by the Office of Multicultural Student Services. Students can fill out applications to be considered for eligibility and placement before beginning their first semester at Coastal.

Once invited into the program, freshmen are linked with a mentor from the same field of study. Mentors provide freshmen with a sense of belonging, helping them adjust to the college lifestyle.

"S.N.A.P. gives freshmen a firsthand look at someone who is in their major. That person can tell you the ins and outs of your major, give you advice on classes, and tell you which professors are best to take," said Kiera Jenkins, a mentor and senior majoring in Communications.

Jenkins said the event freshmen attend with their mentor allows mentors to make connections with other freshmen, upperclassmen, faculty, and staff. The program helps freshmen enjoy their first year, while encouraging good decision-making.

"The program gets incoming freshmen acclimated to their new surroundings, and gives them a head-up on many issues that face college students and how to handle situations that may arise," added Mysh Woods, another Coastal senior majoring in Communications. "It also gives them someone to talk to, since many freshmen come to college not knowing anyone; it helps prevent depression, knowing that someone is there to help."

As a former mentor, I agree with the two mentors' accounts of the program. It helped me adapt to the college environment, making my transition to college much smoother. The program preserved networking opportunities and learning experiences. If you are interested in applying to the program, the application can be found online at:

The Roommate Experience

CHRI. STIAN GAMBLE

Do you know your roommate? For the sole few who do, good for you. For the ones who do not know, you are not alone. Meeting and rooming with people you have never lived with is one of your first tasks as a college student. Although many face more day in day with their roommates, you may conquer their skepticism into opinions if you take the right steps.

Liz Wood, a rising senior exercise sports science major and Resident Advisor, said the most important thing freshmen and transfer students should do before coming to Coastal Carolina is get in touch with your roommates.

If you do not know who your roommates are, the best thing to do is find out through self-admission. Self-admission provides people with their roommate contacts, along with room and building information. After finding out who you will live with, the next step is getting in touch with those individuals. Since incoming freshmen and transfers

Message From the Department of Communication & Journalism

Welcome to the first edition of the redesigned Chanticleer. The Chanticleer is steeped in Coastal Carolina University tradition. The new staff embraces this history, but also looks forward to a new day in student media. As the faculty advisor, I'm honored to work with such an excellent group of students. I hope to bring the knowledge I gained as a professional journalist to the staff. We are setting ambitious goals, but I feel sure the talented staff will make them a reality.

This is an exciting time for the field of Journalism. Universities across the country are re-evaluating the ever-changing field of journalism by working to create programs that embody both the theory and research of a traditional Communication degree and the practical skills needed to work as a journalist.

The Department of Communication and Journalism looks forward to assisting The Chanticleer in building a quality publication based on strong journalistic practices. The new staff is dedicated to providing relevant information with a focus on the entire campus community.

We welcome your input as we strive to grow the all-student media platform.

We want YOU!

As a new staff, we are currently seeking as many contributing writers as possible. Starting in the fall, we encourage any prospective writers to attend our 3 PM Monday meetings in the Lib Jackson Student Center 206. The Chanticleer is a great way for prospective writers to acquire published material and gain valuable experience for possible internships and job opportunities. Story ideas can be submitted to The Chanticleer via email at chanticleer@gmail.com. You can follow us on Twitter @TheChanticleer, and look for us on Facebook at The Chanticleer Newspaper. We look forward to receiving your articles and welcoming you to our staff!

The Chanticleer is the editorially independent student-produced newspaper of Coastal Carolina University. It is published weekly during the fall and spring semesters with an orientation issue distributed during summer months.

Opinions expressed in The Chanticleer are those of the editor or author and do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the University’s student body, administration, faculty or staff.

Letters to the editor are welcome from the CUC community. The editor reserves the right to condense submissions and edit for style and space. Submission does not guarantee publication.

Advertisements are paid advertisements and reflect the views and opinion of the advertisers, not The Chanticleer or Coastal Carolina University.

Some material MAY NOT be suitable for people under 17 years of age.

The Chanticleer is committed to accuracy. If you find an error in this edition of The Chanticleer, let us know. Report mistakes to thechanticleer@gmail.com and corrections will be printed in the following issue.

WHAT’S THE WORD?

Each week The Chanticleer asks our readers “What’s the Word?”

We asked 3 selected questions to three random CUC students...

...Here’s what they had to say

What Aspect Drew You to Coastal?

Jenn Stone
Stonehoma MSC1 Major

“I've always wanted to be a marine biologist and it’s right next to the beach and that was a pretty big thing, we have our own island to work on.”

Christian Johnson
Junior BDS1 Major

“It had a really nice beautiful campus, and it’s not too large [like] other universities where you have 200 students in a classroom setting. It’s really personal. Of course athletics too, run Cross Country here. The beach too!”

Timothy LeBlanc
Sophomore PGM Major

“What drew me in was definitely the beach and I play golf so the PGM program. Every one of my home school had a really good PGM program.”

FROM THE EDITOR

Shane Norries

It is said that time is one of the most measurable of the five senses. It is also said the quickest way to a man’s heart is through his stomach. This may be true. One of the things I miss most about my freshman year is my unlimited meal plan at The Commons. Now, many people may complain about the taste of meals at The Commons, but I think it’s pretty good.

As a student athlete, I burn a ton of calories everyday during practices and biking to class. This leaves me with a pretty big appetite; I can eat quite a lot. My freshman schedule went a little something like this. Go to 6 a.m. weight lifting, then head to the commons for breakfast. After that, I went to my early classes and then back to The Commons for breakfast number two. I would then either go to another class or practice before returning to The Commons for lunch. This would be followed by either an afternoon class or relaxing until dinner time, again, at The Commons. With much credit to my active lifestyle, this lead to absolutely no weight gain.

As you may imagine, this routine lead my body to expect a lot of food daily, so when my sophomore year rolled around and I no longer lived on campus I, the good ol’ diesel or was required a meal plan, things got ugly. I found out quick it’s a lot harder to get that sort of intake when you have to buy your meals or cook them yourself.

So what does this little story mean? Well, my advice to you is to take advantage of your meal plan while you have it, but do not become fully dependent on it. Start learning how to cook now! That way, if you mess up you can always just go to The Commons. By the time you’re a junior living off campus, you will be able to take care of yourself.

The Clock is Ticking

Chad Yates

Coming from the perspective of someone who came to college without a clear set of goals in mind, I’m here to stress how important it is to take action now. Be prepared to go on a rollercoaster of a ride, because freshman year will be full of experience you’re life is yet to see. Don’t get me wrong, I’m not here to tell you not to enjoy yourself. That would be, for lack of a better word—wrong.

But beware; don’t let the good times get the best of you. While you will undoubtedly have the best time of your life, whether its meeting new people or starting food, remember you are here for a reason. Don’t be scared to be a bit of an overachiever. Don’t just go to class. Don’t just do your work. Try to exceed expectations. But most importantly, get involved. As someone entering their senior year in college, I can honestly say it flies by. You may get it now, but trust me, you will. Although I consider my time at CUC the best experience of my life you for, there are parts of它 I can say I regret. Most of those regrets stem from me living away from family activity. Looking back, I can’t stress you enough how much I wish I was more involved as a freshman. And I’m sure you are thinking the same about the taste of meals...

I know that everyone may take this advice right off the bat and apply it to their own experience. But I promise you, getting involved early and setting goals for yourself will be exponentially rewarding in the long run. I’m pretty sure you are all new to this experience, but I’m trying to say keep it perspective in college. It’s what everyone’s in school to do, and it starts at orientation. Get a head start, the clock is ticking...

5 Ways to keep it Safe This Hurricane Season

1. Secure Your Belongings

A category 5 hurricane can produce sustained winds of up to 155 MPH, so you won't want to leave anything important behind outside. Find somewhere indoors as close to your bike if you have one, locks don't guard against hurricanes. Don't forget your pets. If you have pets, bring them inside!

2. Prepare in Advance

When preparing for a hurricane, it is a good idea to have about seven days worth of supplies ready in case the power goes out or you are stuck inside for an extended period of time. In your kit, you should include: canned food and a can opener, cooking tools and fuel, blankets, extra clothes, a first aid kit and any kind of necessary prescription drugs, a radio, a cell phone, cash (include small bills, all important documents, and food for your vehicle). Also, since water sources can become contaminated during storms, you should stock up on bottled water or sanitize your bathtub and fill it up with water for use in the toilet or for drinking water.

3. Make a Plan

During a hurricane, all classes will be cancelled, and students in the residence halls will be asked to go home or to a safe inland area. Students and parents should have a plan in place ahead of time in order to avoid chaos in the days leading up to the hurricane. If a student cannot make it home, they can find a local hurricane shelter or stay with a friend/neighbor if possible.

4. Know the Basics

A Hurricane Watch means hurricane force winds (sustained winds of higher than 119 MPH) are possible within the next 72 hours in your area. A Hurricane Warning means hurricane force winds are expected in your area. It is important to know the difference between preparing for a hurricane becomes a lot more difficult after the wind starts blowing. You should also know the different classes of hurricanes. A category 5 hurricane is far more dangerous than a category 2 hurricane.

5. Make the Best of it

If you are going to be locked inside your house with your friends for a few days, why not have fun? It can be a good chance to bond over poker games or candlelit dinners. If the storm is not too bad, invite your neighbors over for a hurricane party, just make sure you have enough supplies for everyone.

Minority students impact the CCU campus in a major way. According to the 2011 Spring Demographic Report, the minority students make up about 27% of the student body population. Although small in number, the minority community at CCU stands out with an array of clubs, programs and events geared towards these students.

The Office of Multicultural Student Services, located in the Prince Building, is the heart of the minority community. Under the direction of Paiget Singleton Young, the mission is to enhance a multicultural academic, social and cultural environment. "We provide these services with the end result being retention and graduation. Everything we do is about helping these students feel comfortable," Singleton Young said.

Incoming minority students will get to experience some of the Multicultural Student Services' events during Fall 2011 Welcome Week. "The Tiki That Bites," a program for all incoming minority freshmen, focuses on understanding what brings them all together. Another event incoming students should look forward to is the Minority Mixer. The event showcases all Greek, religious, and cultural minority groups on campus. Annual events such as Cultural Celebration, African-American Celebration and Hispanic Awareness are programs the entire CCU student body can enjoy. These programs bring the CCU community not only to learn about different cultures and countries, but also raise awareness of problems many of these people face daily.

Multicultural Services offers more than 15 programs, organizations and clubs for students. From the Freshman Mentor Program (N.A.P.), to Leadership Challenge, which allows students to stand out as leaders among their peers, Multicultural Student Services' goal is to produce well-rounded professional students.

The minority community at CCU embodies pride, unity and respect to all ethnic backgrounds. The nationally recognized Multicultural Student Services contributes a great deal to the community.

"Incoming [minority] students need to know that we are here," said Singleton Young. "And we are here for them."

are not aware of the student mailing system, the best form of communication is on Facebook. Through Facebook, you can get a visual picture of who to look for on move-in day, as well as acquire general information about your roommates.

Your roommate doesn't have to be your best friend, but you do have to communicate. Learning to communicate with your roommate is vital. Rooming together will not always be as appealing as the brochure pictures. Wood stated that although RA's are helpful, minor problems will have to be solved on your own. If you have major problems with your roommate, the first person you should contact is your RA. If they cannot solve the situation, the residence life office will be called. Because room changes and roommate situations can be difficult, RA's and RAs at CCU try to make the best way they can.

Wood believes everyone should experience living with a roommate. It is one of the first every college student experiences, to make your first CCU memory a lasting one.
From sporting events to on campus activities, students spread CUCI spirit with the famous "C-U-C-I, Coastal is Number One!" chant. Most students think the CUCI card is just a student ID or need to print out paper in the library. Coastal Carolina University went beyond the typical student ID card and teamed up with local businesses to offer great deals for college students and off campus using CUCI Cash.

Every student and faculty/staff member is issued a CUCI card. In order to activate your CUCI cash account, you must deposit money at the CUCI Card Office or online. Your CUCI Cash can be used on campus for meal plans, at The Commons dining hall, CUCI Grill, Java City, and for school supplies at the bookstore and library, just to name a few. In addition to on campus purchases, CUCI also allows students to use their CUCI cash off campus. Some local favorites that accept CUCI Cash include the Bagel Factory II at Carolina Forest, Cheers eBook U. on 544, Coastal Grill on 544, Crafty Rooter Bar and Grill in Conway, Mac & Erma's at Coastal Forest, Tire Town, and Waccamaw Bowling Center.

Coastal Carolina University wants students to know the CUCI card is not just a student ID. It is extremely important to carry with you, especially on campus. The card is required to check into the gym, check out library books, receive tickets for events, and even attendance in some classes. The CUCI card is your identity as a college student, so you should keep it in a safe place, don't let others borrow it, and protect it from being damaged.

For more information on the CUCI card, visit www.coastal.edu/cinocard, or the CUCI Card Office on campus.

Student Radio Station to Start Fresh in 2011

SHANE NORRIS
EDITOR

August of 2011 is a time for new beginnings. New freshman and transfer students will start their life at Coastal, the football team will gear up for a new season, and student media will undergo major changes. Not only did the Chanticleer Staff lose their former advisor, but WCCU Radio is also starting anew.

WCCU is a student-run activity of the Department of Communication and Journalism. It's an online radio station accessed via its website, wccuradio.com. It first aired in April, 2009, but never saw the growth or popularity originally intended. However, that is all about to change.

The station is set to relaunch in August, 2011 with a fresh appearance and sound. The staff is currently developing all new programming for the coming year. Station Manager Matthew Parris is eager to see his plans come to life.

"Myself and the rest of the staff are excited to get started. We're already hard at work to make WCCU a source for news and entertainment on campus," Parris said.

The staff plans to showcase local bands and highlight issues, organizations, professors, sports and more. Looking to offer more than just music, they hope to become the first place students turn to for an insight into campus life.

WCCU is looking for DJs. "We are interested in DJs that are knowledgeable, dedicated and entertained for our listeners so that we can offer something for everyone from music and sports to news and talk," said Parris.

Auditions will take place throughout the summer. If you're interested in hosting a show, please send a developed show concept to WCCU Faculty Advisor, Michelle Card, at mrcard@coastal.edu.

Hey there, I'm Shaw Noris the new Editor-in-Chief of The Chanticleer. I am a journalism major with a minor in Spanish. I am on the Men's Track and Field team here; I run the hurdles, I love the outdoors and I want to travel the world. I am very excited for the future of the paper. We have a great staff and lots innovative ideas to better serve you. I would love to hear lots of written from across the spectrum of the Coastal community.

Hey everybody my name is ChadYeah. I just want to say that I'm super excited about this coming year. I've got a good feeling about this coming year and I've got an idea for a newspaper. I'll keep y'all updated on the progress.

My name is TJ Summerville. I'm a senior marketing major here at Coastal and I'm going to graduate soon. I've wanted to write about sports ever since the 2006 season. What's going on with the Chanticleer football team? I can't wait to see the Chanticleers' new quarterback.

My name is Josh, and I'm a senior Communication Major here at Coastal and I'm graduating in May. I've been a Chanticleer fan my whole life. What's going on with the Chanticleer baseball team? I'm very excited for the future of the paper.

My name is Lindsey Bean, a senior Communication Major Journalism minor, with hopes to graduate in December of 2011. I will be the Features and Sports writer for the Chanticleer this fall. I am from the Outer Banks, NC and have lived in Greenville for the past four years. In my spare time away from schoolwork I have a deep passion for photography and handball playing. I am also a proud member of the Coastal Carolina Equestrian Club Team. I am very excited to share this experience through my writing.

Ways to Save on Textbooks

CHAD VATES

As an incoming freshman, many new things will be thrown at you. For most of you, one of those things is buying textbooks. Most of you never purchased your own books before, so you may find the prices a bit scary. No worries, The Chanticleer is here to give you some tips to save money on textbooks.

Imagine the last fall, the on-campus bookstore located in Baxley Hall provides a textbook rental program to all freshman. The price of the books with a credit card used solely for college, any customer at least 18 years of age can rent eligible titles for roughly half the retail price. The book is yours until the last day of fall, and must be returned with no missing pages or water damage. Writing and highlighting is allowed. Not all textbooks are rentable, but those eligible save an average of 40-60% off the original price.

"We work hard to make sure all of the choices are available to the student so they can purchase books on-campus and still save money," said Jodi Vite, textbook manager at the CCU Bookstore. Vite said the eligibility of a textbook is determined by Follett, meaning the textbook is used as you move through a series of classes. A popular continuation course is Biology 121 and 122, core requirements for many majors. Though different classes, the same textbook is used. In this case, purchasing one book is more cost-efficient than renting the book for one semester, reverting it, and reserving the same book again the following term.

Identifying continuation courses by talking to your professor or a book-reader representative can help save money in the long run.

In increasing popularity, Chegg.com is an alternative to buying textbooks on-campus. Similar to the University Bookstore's rental program, Chegg gives students the option of renting books at a substantially lower cost. Chegg is a great way to save money, with some books available at more than 75% off retail price.

"I absolutely recommend it," said Amber Basiliko, President of Gamma Phi Beta. "The only downside is making sure you remember to send them back in the proper binder with the correct pages." However, you must pay shipping and handling, and according to the list of General Policies, you may be charged the full price of the book if there is too much writing or highlighting on the pages. That being said, Chegg.com gives incoming freshmen more popular ways to save money on textbooks.

During your first year at CCU, you will end up spending a good bit of money on books. But textbooks don't have to be a hole in your pocket. Shopping right and renting when it's most beneficial can help cut back on spending. And who couldn't use some extra money nowadays?

CCU Fraternity & Sorority Life

CARL NOGAS

Greek life offers great opportunities to students looking to reach out to their community. Coastal Carolina University is home to 18 Greek letter organizations. Although deciding which organization to join is a tough decision, most students always find when they fit in.

I am trying to figure out which fraternity you want to join is easy to look at the different groups and see those are the guys, or they seem like the cool guys, and things of that nature,' said Amber Basiliko, President of Gamma Phi Beta. "It's a tough decision, most students want to join its easy to work on and join that fraternity." But the right way to decide is to talk to the fraternity and figure out which one is the best fit of all the qualities you don't have and that you need to work on and join that fraternity. It's a group of people who can help you learn more and be a better leader and make you a better person.

Going Greek offers many opportunities like academics, networking, leadership skills, and service to the community. Most chapters give back to the community by contributing time to philanthropy. Some philanthropic on-campus includes: Paws America, Campfire, Alpha Xi Delta, Special Olympics and Breast Cancer research.

Greek life also helps students gain a sense of leadership. There are many positions in each organization members can run for. Communication skills are also enhanced when working in a larger group, providing many networking opportunities.

"It's rewarding to be able to work with others and to gain knowledge that will benefit me in the future," said Amber Basiliko, President of Gamma Phi Beta. "It's a great experience that has taught me more than just being a leader, but life lessons that make it beneficial to me." Many students must remember to stay calm and be themselves throughout the process. It is a decision that benefits them and gives them a brotherhood or friendship for the rest of their lives.

The Importance of Getting Involved

SHADIA TYLEH

Starting your freshman year at a university can be one of the scariest times of a young adult's life. So many things run through a freshman's mind. How to fit in, which classes or professors to take, what organizations to join, and the best places to shop and eat near campus are just a couple of the many questions one may have during their first semester. One of the most important things I can stress to someone who is stressed to new freshmen is to become active on campus. Coastal Carolina University has over 100 clubs and organizations, each meeting at different times during the week. These clubs and organizations can lead to future internships or possible jobs. Some freshmen may not enter the work field immediately after college, opting to go to graduate school. Finding internships early on in your college career will benefit you in many ways.

Men of Teal Will Win Big South Despite Departures

Call it luck, bogey, or whatever else you wish, but last season your men of teal, Coastal's football team, obtained a Big South Conference title and the first Big South automatic bid to the FCS playoffs.

This coming season, some wacky rule won't be the reason you see the Chants placed on a bracket on selection Sunday. In the words of the great Terrell Owens, "Giv­ tha poppin' ready."

The Chanticleers boast more than enough pieces to fit the puzzle of a con­ference title for the upcoming season, es­pecially on the defensive side of the ball. Of course, offense puts fans in the stands, but definitively is where the Chants took games over last season. With matters like shutting down cornerush Jordan Norman and locking machine Andre Jacobs returning to the field, opposing offenses won't know what to do with the football.

Defensive guys fare not, even with record setting quarterback Zach Mac­Dowell and mad running back Eric O'Neal graduating, the offense looks sul­dier. Although the quarterback situation simmered up in the air in the springtime, whichever steps in under center has a plethora of weapons in their artillery. All-American tight end David Duvall fits perfectly into the Chants high-powered offense, and his experience makes a quar­teback's job easier than kicking an extra point in Madden.

The most important piece to this sea­son is none other than head coach Dar­vid Bennett. Coach Bennett is entering his 15th season in the Chanticleers head coach and his players respond positively to him and his staff year in and year out. The Chanticleers open their season September 3rd against in-state Fur­man at Black Stadium. And for you freshmen, a home opener at Brooks Sta­dium is something never forgotten.

THE CCU CLUBHOUSE

CCU ‘Club of the Year’ Finishes First Season

LINDSEY JYON
FEATURES EDITOR

Coastal Carolina University saddled up with students to join the Intercollegiate Home Wear Association (IHWA). The CCU Equestrienne Team competed in Zone 4 Region 3, and finished their 2010-2011 season in February.

Horseback riding is a passion some students share and the IHWA gives them the opportunity to compete. In Spring 2010, 15 girls from CCU established the Coastal Carolina Equestrienne Team to compete within the IHWA. The team began competing in Fall 2010 with college in their zone and region including: Duke, NC State, UNC-Chapel Hill, UNC-Wilmington, East Carolina and St. Andrew's Presbyterian College. The lending of the IHWA arises from Ober and Harvard/International Over Brothers to Beginner Walk Trot. The CCEUT consists of girls from a variety of riding back­ground and experiences.

"It is such an awesome experience meeting riders from other schools that share the same passion," said team president Gabby Philbin. "The team was such a success this year. Our best hope is to set a positive foundation for future riders on the CCU Equestrienne Team."

Philbin said she loves the experience of getting to know new riders everyday. "All of our girls get along great, which is what really makes us a team; we are a co-ed team and gym we are encouraged to join," she added.

The team rides in Anderson Stables in Conway, SC under the instruction of Jer­nifer Stubble.
