Coastal Carolina celebrates Banned Book Week

JOSH FAYZICK

Each year college campuses and libraries across the country hold events to honor Banned Book Week, an event to celebrate intellectual freedom and the First Amendment and this year CCU is getting in on the action.

Coastal Carolina will hold two separate events in honor of Banned Book Week, which runs Sept. 24 to October 1. The first is a discussion with Dr. Preston McKeever-Floyd, assistant professor of philosophy, called “Censoring the Freedom to Read: The Ethics of Banning Books.” This is scheduled for Monday, Sept. 26 at 4:30 in the library.

McKeever-Floyd hopes to engage the audience in an open discussion about the three main ethical issues involved in the banning of books: freedom of expression, parental control, and censorship. “There have been books in the past 10 to 20 years that have been removed from book shelves, shadow in high schools, as well as public libraries because people have complained about certain issues,” said McKeever-Floyd. “My concern as an educator is with the freedom of expression and academic freedom. It concerns me when what’s being taken away from students.”

Some of the main issues that cause people, mostly students’ parents, to call for the banning of books are violence, sexual explicit material, and homosexuality, although some books are eliminated simply for having one vulgar word, according to McKeever-Floyd.

The second event is the “Banned Book Read-Out,” in which students and faculty can read passages from their favorite banned books, and hold open book showers, shadow in high schools, as well as public libraries because people have complained about certain issues.”

“Banning Books” is a project led by the Coastal Carolina University Department of Theatre and is their first production of the year, Iphigenia and Other Daughters by Ellen McLaughlin. The play is an adaptation to three Greek plays written by Sophocles and Euripides, but McLaughlin goes to call for Greek plays’ version,” according to Director Dr. Brech Brown.

The play ran for seven days in the Edwards Black Box Theatre. It is a series of stories that portray the Greek legend, in which King Agamemnon sacrifices his daughter Iphigenia to the goddess Artemis. Three distinct scenes, originally written as separate plays, are performed focusing on the relationship of three main characters: Chryses, Electra, and her daughter Orestes, Electra, Chryses, Iphigenia, and Iphigenia’s daughter, Artemis.

To the actors, the director’s, and the production team’s delight Iphigenia and OrestesDaughters were said out on opening night. The cast only rehearsed for approximately one and a half weeks.

“Weigh the shortest play I’ve ever worked on a short list at CCU,” said Kimberley Ward, Jo-
Coastal cutbacks leave foul smell

What’s causing the smell in Arcadia Hall?

SHANE NORRIS

The past few years have brought cutbacks to Coastal Carolina University. With shrinking funds from the state, the university turned to tuition increases and staff cutbacks. Coastal tries to cut positions that least affect students, but this year’s school may have done just the opposite.

Losses in the facilities Planning and Management department this summer put a strain on the university’s maintenance staff, according to Sandy Williams, director of the department. She said management was asked to cut six staff members in June.

In the past, certain buildings on campus had a single staff member assigned to clean and maintain it. Since the cutbacks, newly formed teams sweep campus throughout the day in shifts.

Arcadia Hall, a student favorite, is one of the halls that has been impacted by these cutbacks. Some students have reported a foul smell in the halls.

According to Williams, a member assigned to Arcadia cleaned every morning and throughout the day. Now, it gets cleaned once a day around midday by the second shift. This often conflicts with the athletes using the locker rooms.

"Now they are cleaned while we are getting ready for practice," said Sandy Miller, a senior on the Softball team.

"It is a inconvenience to us while they’re in there and I know they are not able to clean even by our lockers at all so we are changing by them," said Russel Kanter, a sophomore on the Men's Track and Field team.

NATO to Extend Mission in Libya until Christmas

According to Reuter, NATO agreed on Wednesday, September 28, to a three-month extension of its air and sea campaign in Libya as the country's new rulers try to dislodge well-armed Gaddafi loyalists holding out in several towns.

NATO took full control March 31. Ambassadors reached an agreement to extend the mission at a meeting of ambassadors of the 28 NATO states in Brussels, a NATO diplomat told Reuters.

This is the second three-month extension to the mission that involved a campaign of air strikes and a naval mission to enforce a U.N. arms embargo.

"Last year, the locker room was pretty well kept and that smell as foul as this year," said Russel Kanter, a sophomore on the Men’s Track and Field team.

Horry County to Investigate Misconduct by Officers

According to The Sun News, Horry County will conduct an internal investigation into claims officers mishandled equipment and confiscated drugs and money from the evidence room.

An anonymous source, claiming to be a Horry County police officer, sent a letter to members of the Horry County Council August 30.

In the letter, the writer said he didn’t feel comfortable discussing the inappropriate conduct with his supervisor, because it involved some of his supervisors. He hoped an investigation would launch in March after Dave Joffie, a former Horry County police officer, withdrew his name from consideration for Myrtle Beach's newly created police chief.

The State Law Enforcement Division reviewed their investigation before the Horry County Legislative Committee's recent last week, and they will present their findings in an executive session scheduled for October 6.

Georgia Executes Troy Davis

According to Reuters, the state of Georgia executed convicted murderer Troy Davis, last week in a case that drew international attention because of claims by his advocates that he could be innocent.

Georgia put Davis to death by lethal injection September 21 for the murder of a police officer in 1989, prison spokesman Ken Bran told Reuters. The Supreme Court denied the execution for more than four hours while they considered issuing a stay.

The case provoked protests, and an online petition accumulated nearly one million signatures because some people expressed doubts about whether Davis killed police officer Mark MacPhail.

MacPhail's death happened at a Burger King restaurant in Savannah, Georgia, as he went to the aid of a woman who said, "I don't know this guy. He's not my boyfriend, he's just been mistreated as a police officer."

Since Davis' conviction, seven eyewitnesses changed or recanted their testi­ monies. Some said police coerced them to testify against him, and some said they were never convened.

No physical evidence linked Davis to the killings.

Davis claimed innocence until his death, according to journalists who witnessed the execution.
Coastal’s Teal Day

Many students get pumped when spring rolls around and GINO Day comes to Prince Lawn to celebrate Coastal Pride. An event much like our beloved GINO Day took place last week out on the lawn. This event, known as Teal Day, featured a large blow-up slide, decorated booths and other events.

While Teal Day gave us students opportunities to engage in an array of different activities, it also offered a chance for organizations to show face and appeal to the masses. One of the organizations that took advantage of this opportunity was WCCU Radio, CCU’s revamped radio station.

"We participated in Teal Day to introduce our brand new team and shows," said Talon during Teal Day. "This day we declared WCCU here to stay as a brand new station under the Communication Department," said Amanda Diemer, Business Devise for WCCU Radio.

Teal Day provided opportunities for organizations and maintained both students and faculty, but there is an underlying reason for its existence.

While GINO Day is a celebration of Coastal pride, Teal Day is a celebration of another kind. It is meant to celebrate Coastal Founder's Day, honoring the individuals and entities that dedicated so much to shape Coastal Carolina University to what it is today.

You can find a full list of the founders both in the "Founders Book" in the Johnston building, as well as online at coastal.edu/university/statutes/founders-en.html

Gas vs. Water

Gas issues soon to wash away while larger water problems wash up

Hurricane season leaves behind massive amounts of waste in numerous countries and states each year. After viewing so many weather reports on the possibility of water this season, CCU students and media consumers may want to reflect on the issues the human species soon will face with drinking water if everyday behaviors are not soon changed.

Many over 75 percent of the Earth’s surface is water, but most are not aware only a little over 1 percent is actually drinkable. Sadly, not many have protecting drinkable water on their minds.

The major water crises come from greenhouse gases released deep under Earth's surface. Groundwater falls under a different set of rules. Most of the stores where bottled water is drilled fall under a set of rules known as Absolute Dominion. Adopted in the late 1800's, Absolute Dominion simply gives permission to whoever owns the biggest pump to take the most water. It also gives permission to monopolize the amount taken, without facing consequences simply by obtaining a permit.

"One important fact about the issue is scientists don’t even know how long it took the percentage of drinkable water to become clean enough to drink," said touring of Dean of Science.

"We are facing a situation of new water issues," said Elkin Smith, director of science.

The Pacific Institute is a non-partisan research institute, aiming to promote environmental protection, social equality and economic development. According to their website, www.gisloop.org, the institute estimates around 17 million barrels of oil are needed to produce plastic bottles. This is enough to fuel 1 million cars for an entire year.

"I alone right now have 5 half full water bottles floating around my car. Knowing how much gas is used to make bottles, I want to start using the reusable bottles more often," said Amanda Whelan, junior Marine Science major.

Beverage Marketing provides data on beverage industry sales. In 2010, the institute reported the sale of bottled water reached 8.75 billion gallons sold. On www.coastal.edu, the world population is estimated at more than 6.8 billion as of September 2, 2011.

"It makes me angry to think about how people die of thirst around the world every day, but more gallons of clean water are sold than the entire world population," said Lindsey Pennington, senior Music major.

"People really need to re-educate themselves about water usage."

Greatest than a quarter of Earth’s rainforests are located in Brazil, and Earth already lost over half of it tropical forests.

Recycling one ton of office paper saves 380 gallons of oil.

Over 30 million species of insects dwell in the canopies of tropical forests.

When you turn your central heating down by one percent, fuel consumption is cut by as much as 10 percent.

Crazy coaches? Crazy good!

SHANE NORRIS
Editor

Lastly, a lot of chatter circulated about excitable coaches. We all know about Coach Bennett's 15 minutes of fame for his "Can and Dogs" story, but that's not all. Recently, Clemson's head football coach, Dabo Swinney, caught flak for his comments at half time and after their defeat of defending national champions, Auburn, this past Saturday. Also, fans are laughing at Pittsburg's coach Todd Graham for pulling his hamstring while causing down an official for a timeout during their loss to Iowa this weekend.

Now, crazy coaches are nothing new. Mike Shula, I'm a MAN cave or Jim Mor's PLAYOFFS videos, but there is a difference between craziness and excitement for your team. I'm for, I love having a coach like David Bennett at Coastal. If you want a coach that will turn high school kids into men, look no further. His "Bennettisms" are just part of who he is, and they get through to us on and off field.

A wildlife experience

Last weekend, I get the chance to visit one of the coolest exhibits I've ever saw. On a trip to St. Augustine, my girlfriend and I decided to go to the "Alligator Farm." Although the captive amount of alligators and crocodiles are the park's main attraction, it is home to hundreds of different species of animals.

All the animals on display absolutely blew my mind. I felt like a little kid walking through an amusement park, "ooh-ing" and "aah-ing" at everything I saw. It's one thing to see rare animals on the National Geographic or Discovery channel, but it is entirely different seeing them in their natural state.

A few stand out in particular. One is the Red Ruffed Lemur, indigenous only to Madagascar. Just observing this one fantastic creature, alone, made me feel like a kid at Christmas. Another is the Komodo Dragon, which can grow to 2 meters in length, and has the ability to swallow a cow whole. But the most exhilarating sight of my visit was the Red Banded Lemur, indigenous only to Madagascar. Just observing this one magnificent creature, alone, made me feel like I was in a dream.

I know it's not a trip to an exotic tour through Africa or anything, but the experience temporarily took me away from the modern world and made me feel one with nature. If you get the chance to go to go to an exhibit like this one, I highly recommend you take advantage of the opportunity. You won't regret it.

We asked a question to random CCU students...

"What are your feelings about the construction on campus and how does it affect you?"

Here's what they had to say...

"Ever since I started school here there has been constant construction. It doesn't seem like much is getting accomplished. As a senior it's a downer that I won't get to experience all the changes and expanding that's going on. It's good that they're expanding though, the new gym and library show that they aren't focused on just one aspect of the university."

"I look forward to the new rec center being built."

"I don't get the chance to roam around campus much so it doesn't really affect me. I transferred from the University of South Carolina and construction was much worse there."

"I think the construction is a good thing as well as a necessity. I look forward to the new rec center being built."

What is your greatest accomplishment?

"Bringing up a son who is a compassionate, thinking human being. Also, learning Russian - it took many years of work, but opened a new world for me."

Who is your Heros and why?

"A friend of mine who was diagnosed with cancer and has overcome enormous obstacles to educate herself and to help others, and she never backed down on her ideals."

Words of wisdom for students?

"Take advantage of everything college offers - study abroad, plays, concerts, talks, do everything. But especially study abroad. You might never have as many opportunities to travel as when you're a student, and there's no better way to learn about the world and about yourself."

"Courageous" (Sept 30)

Four police officers face tragedy and challenge as they struggle with fatherhood. Ultimately they feel a call from a higher power to find the true meaning of parenthood. From the people who brought you Fireproof, this emotional drama could leave you with a different outlook on fathers.

50/50 (Sept 30)

Comedy meets drama as Adam (Joseph Gordon-Levitt) deals with being diagnosed with cancer, with the help of his friend Kyle (Benjamin Rovan), the struggle to accept his fortune and how to live with it changes Adam inside out. The Daily Show’s Jon Stewart and Evan Goldberg along with Rovani produced what looks to be a pretty good film.

Dream House (Sept 30)

Boasting a few big names and a decent plot, Jim Sheridan’s Dream House, could be a very good pre-Halloween thriller. Daniel Craig plays a successful writer who moves his family to a small New England town only to find out his new home was the site of a brutal murder. This Shutter Island-style thriller will leave you on the edge of your seat until the credits roll.

What type of things does your organization do to get involved in the community?
We participate in many different events throughout the year here in Conway and at CCU. Kappa Sigma's biggest recognition would have to be Relay for Life since we raised the largest amount in the past three years as an organization. Kappa Sigma also sponsors Singleton Road (where the hospital is located) and participates in roadside clean-ups throughout the month to keep the community looking nice and clean.

According to the Center for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), about 90,000 people in the US are infected with HIV each year. Half of those cases are age 25. The CDC also reported an estimation more than one million people are living with HIV in the United States. One in five of these people is unaware of their infection. South Carolina makes HIV in the nation for new AIDS cases annually. For three years running, the SC HIV Testing Reports shows the age group 20-29 with the highest percentage of newly diagnosed HIV positive people.

Among South Carolinians newly diagnosed with HIV who identify their risk factors, the modes of transmission are men who engage in sex with men at 50 percent, heterosexual at 40 percent, and injecting drug users at 9 percent of the reported population. According to the SC Department of Health and Environmental Control as of December 31, 2010, 31 percent of people living with HIV/AIDS are females, and the remaining 69 percent are males. Horry County is reported to have 736 people living with HIV/AIDS. Know your risks and avoid them. HIV is just as deadly as you are participating in any of the following behaviors engaging in any kind of sex, even if you use a condom, sharing previously used needles or syringes to inject drugs, tattooing, body piercing or any activity that breaks the skin and introduces blood to the single largest risk in the spread of HIV infection to the United States today (e.g., having multiple sex partners; and coming into direct contact with the body fluids.

As a member of your organization what are your responsibilities?
As a current alumnus of the Kappa Sigma Pi-Theta Chapter, I contribute by visiting the local chapter as much as time permits and lend a hand wherever possible. What are your plans for the future?
My current plans are to attend medical school and become a doctor. I plan on pursuing my dream to become an Anesthesiologist and work in healthcare. Where are you from?

The ladies of Phi Sigma Sigma host their 6th annual Sweetheart Competition Saturday, September 28. The competition, held in Vol Auditorium, starts at 9 p.m. Tickets are $5 and available through the offices of Phi Sigma Sigma. This annual competition began a few years back when sisters wanted a male figure to willingly contribute to the community and positively represent the sorority. With much success over the years, Phi Sigma Sigma is ready to kick off this new season with a new sweetheart.

The tradition of the sweetheart has been fun and exciting. Believing he can provide and support the lovely ladies of Phi Sigma Sigma was very rewarding," said Anthony Olson, brother of Kappa Sigma and Phi Sigma Sigma's most recent sweetheart. "Best of luck to this year's sweetheart, you have big shoes to fill!"

Struggling with technology

How students can manage their online work

COURNEY MULLIS

For some freshmen, online coursework is a new and daunting challenge. However, with technologies like Blackboard Learn and websites like mymathlab.com, it is easier for professors to assign homework and quizzes online. This saves paper because teachers do not print out worksheets or collect handwritten homework assignments from the students. It also adds some flexibility for research because quizzes are taken on a student's own time. However, if you are a student with no access to online work, or you simply like to do your work on paper, this new concept can cause a struggle. It is difficult to manage online work because it is not always accessible, and students must decide for themselves when they will set aside the time to do it. The Technology in Education to Advance Learning (TEAL) Center, located in the USG Library, is a resource for professors to learn how to use technology in courses. Alpha Delta Pi fundraiser

CARI NOGAS

The members of Alpha Delta Pi (ADPi) plan to host a fundraiser Thursday, September 29, for the American Heart Association. The ladies are preparing for the Heart Walk, set to take place October 6. The event, located at Reef O’Brady’s in Carolina Beach, runs from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. Alpha Delta Pi’s philanthropy is the Ronald McDonald House Charities, but they participate in other events for service committee.

“It is not only a good way to raise money,” said Kelsey Davlin, number of ADPi. “It’s also great to get good food and have fun.”

They encourage students to come support the cause. Ten percent of the proceeds go to the American Heart Association. Patrons may drop their reserves in a basket upon leaving the restaurant. This is the second year ADPi worked with Reef O’Brady’s to help in this cause.

“I was very successful, that’s why we’re doing it this year,” said Katie Casamass, a member of ADPi. “It’s great how they’re willing to work with us, supporting the Greek system and all.”

Students are encouraged not only to attend events benefiting the American Heart Association, but also to go out to the Heart Walk.

Just like in the movies. Snyder hopes one day the new team will proudly represent Coastal in the World Cup.

The Quidditch club practices every Sunday from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. on the lawn next to the track on campus. To receive more information on practices and scrimmage, email Mawie Snyder at makedyer@coastal.edu or find them on Facebook at Coastal Carolina Quidditch.

The competition consists of three parts: a talent show, Phi Sig trivia, and a quick fashion show in Phi Sig apparel. Contestants are then asked why they feel they fit the position of Phi Sigma Sigma’s sweetheart. Based on their performances, the sister vote who is best suited.

The winner of the competition is given a stitched Phi Sigma Sigma letter shirt and invited to an event the sisters host. Most importantly, the winner remains in the face of the society for the following year.

There is also a chance to win an "audience choice" prize. At the end of the competition, contestants collect money in a jar and whoever accumulates the most receives the audience choice award. Anyone interested in participating in the event should email Haley Gorbic at Hgorbic@gccmail.edu.

TheTEAL Center also includes resources for students. They offer test-taking tips for students who apply to any online assignments. Some students have to work outside of class, using practice tests if they are available, awareness of time limits, and reviewing the directions carefully. They can pose a challenge to all students, particularly those students without experience in courses that require it. A student cannot complete his or her online homework assignments and quizzes without first attending class and taking adequate notes, but resources like the TEAL Center and speaking with your professor can aid in a student's pursuit of good grades in courses involving online work.
A semester at sea

A new perspective on studying abroad

LINDSEY RYON

Semester at Sea (SAS), founded in 1963, is a study abroad program from the University of Virginia, which gives you the chance to experience the world beyond the pages of a textbook. SAS is open to students of all majors from around the world, providing transferable credits from the University of Virginia, as well as financial aid to those who qualify. SAS brings together a diverse group of people wanting to gain a new perspective of our global community and engage with people from cultures far different than their own.

"It is a lifetime worth of memories," said Dr. Dan Abel, a CCU Marine Biology professor. "Traveling around the globe with the same group of people, 500-600 students, 33 faculty, life-long learners, is kind of like your home is traveling from place to place."

Dr. Abel traveled aboard the Spring 2010 Semester at Sea Voyage. Professors are selected from top institutions across the country, providing knowledge to students and sharing the experience of a life-changing voyage. Traveling aboard the 600-foot "campus" may even wear a snapback.

"I will never forget being at sea, just being in the Indian Ocean was a life-changing experience," said a student. "Looking set on the continent of Africa, being on the Great Wall of China, in the Masai Mara, doesn't get any better... and being some of the world's most magnificent cities, I'll never forget it," said Abel.

SAS offers voyages during the spring, summer, and fall. There are also shorter-term programs between semesters. The 600-foot cruiser consists of multiple decks of cabin housing, dining halls, workout facilities and much more. Abel said the classrooms are converted lounges, so it is not the typical classroom. Most students take three classes and a global studies class, which is a required multi-disciplinary course about the world and the places they visited. Topics in and out of the Liberal Arts program are more common, with science majors as well, with college sophomores and juniors as the common range of students.

"I had a colleague with a l4-year-old son who was very bright. He sat in CPACS, which is currently under construction. Townsend said if the minor is not created in four years, they will have to work with those ideas out of the organization.

While popular now, Gibbs feels there is a possibility they will die as soon as the temperatures drop. However, as it turns fall, snapbacks are still on the way down the trend curve. The return of the snapback is still firmly in effect at CCU.

New trend sport an old "fresh" look

CHRISTIAN GAMBLE

Snapback has recently found a new way to ride a fashion trend. A popular hat from the '80s and '90s has become a hit in recent months, as a new trend. Pop artist, Tyga, is one of the many artists who wear the "campus" in his YouTube channel. However, while they're challenging or banning or two and then something else will come back in style, "I think this trend might stick around for another year or two and then something else will come back in style, maybe the bucket hat," said Townsend, referencing to the Kangol styled hat.

"We'd snapback his snapback and will is open to the library Association, in the library of the campus."

"How do you stop peace, how do you manage conflict, how do you effectively promote the values of human, respect, rights, and responsibility?" Townsend mentioned. "Unless there is an understanding of those ideas out of the population, the program will not have a major impact on the world."

The Athens effect

Coastal players warm up for the University of Georgia game.

Two weekends ago, I took a trip to Athens, Georgia for the Coastal Chanticleers vs. George Washington game. Of course, Coastal took a beating and lost 39-0, but the experience was as memo­ rable as an experience can be.

Upon my arrival, the night before the game, I took the opportunity to walk around some parts of campus and take it all in. As beautiful as the empty campus was, I couldn't wait to see how it would be on game day.

On Saturday morning's sunrise.

After parking my car in the media lot, I decided to take a quick walk around the tailgate areas on campus. And wow, let me tell you, it was one of the most amazing walks of my life. Put the image of a Coastal Carolina tailgate in your head, and then multiply it by about 91,000. This tailgate was like nothing I could ever imagine. It was a typically-Florida, playing-a-little-FCS school.

Fans decked out in red and black like it was the only color combination to don their closets. Everyone at the tailgate, whether complete strangers or worst enemies, became friends because of one thing: Georgia Bulldog football.

Keep in mind this wasn't even a con­ ference game; it was a mid-major FCS op­ ponent. Yet fans still came out like the National Championship was on the line.

This got me thinking, "why can't this happen at Coastal?" Sure, we don't have the alumni, history, or big time program status. Should that even matter? Why can't we start the tradition now? We should be able to pack our medium, it holds about 9,000 people. We should hold humongous tailgaters on campus, considering the space is offered to us.

We should come together as a commu­ nity and enjoy Saturday evenings. I see pictures all the time of Brooklyn Stadium packed out and students tearing down the field goal post with excitement. I always wonder what it was like back then and why we can't recreate that type of atmosphere this season.

We're on track for yet another great season, and conference play begins this next Saturday, let's get together and act like it.

COASTAL CAROLINA FOOTBALL

Men's soccer makes the Top 25

KYLIE JORDAN

Fall is here, and college and profes­ sional football are underway, the MLB playoffs are about to begin and yes, col­ lege soccer? While the majority of fans are glued to their television sets in their history during the week, fans watch college football on Saturdays and NFL football on Sundays, Coastal Carolina's men's soccer team is probably here at week knocking off another nationally ranked opponent.

While Coastal Carolina's success in football, basketball, and basketball is well known, Coastal's Men's soccer team usually flies under the radar. After starting the year with losses in their first two games, the men's soccer squad rallied by win­ ning five of their last six games, includ­ ing a 1-0 demolition of Richmond, a 2-1 double overtime thriller against 16th ranked VCU, and a 2-0 shutout of the 25th ranked Ohio State Buckeyes this past Sunday.

While playing big-time athletic schools is a good way for a small school like Coastal to get some national recogni­tion, beating them is what makes Coastal fans feel like Coastal is the school to watch. This is exactly what the Men's Soccer team is doing, running and putting Coastal on the map. That is exactly what Coastal needs and why Coastal fans love this team.

On the line.

The men's soccer team began confer­ ence play Friday, September 23, with the Coastal Carolina University Tou­ rament at home against Gardner-Webb.

Coastal's saltwater anglers find success at sea

TJ SUNDBERG

The Coastal Saltwater Anglers club began four years ago, when a group of students decided to break away from the freshwater fishing club. It enjoyed immediate success and people are taking notice.

"We are a fairly new club but have been growing since day one. Every year, incoming freshmen find an interest in our club, this year we have doubled our members from the previous year," said Zachary Ryba, club president.

The club competes in various saltwater competitions and accepts anyone who is interested in joining from the most experienced fisher to beginners.

"As the club continues to grow, Ryba said they are always looking for new members. If you are interested in joining, you can contact Ryba by email at ryzb8@coastal.edu."

The club improves each and every year, not only in enrollment but in tournament participation as well.

"Just recently we fished the Beauvoir Vile King Mackerel tournament and we placed 9th out of 73 boats with a 17.23 pound King Mackerel," said Ryba. "We also caught a nice 52 pound Bluefish which did not qualify for anything. However, it put food on the table for all of us," he added.

As the club continues to grow, Ryba said they are always looking for new members. If you are interested in joining, you can contact Ryba by email at ryzb8@coastal.edu.

Former Chants talent returns to the beach

DAVID TEIXEIRA

Chanticleer fans, there’s excitement in the air. From the early success of the football season to the recent national ranking of the men’s soccer team, you can now add basketball to the list. Some of you may think, “It’s not even basketball season, what’s there to expect about it early?”

Armed sports fanatics in the area know professional basketball is coming to the beach.

The NBA Warriors held tryouts on September 18. During the week following the tryout, the Warriors announced former Chanticleer standout basketball player, Jack Leasure and Calvin Stevens made the team.

Jack Leasure, who is one of the more notable basketball alums, named the Big South Player of the Year in 2006. Stevens joined the Chants in 2002 as a walk-on, and ended up starting 21 games that season, eventually earning a scholarship for the remainder of his time at CBU. In addition to Leasure and Stevens, former phenom Joseph Harris and Mario Edwards are still waiting for their results from their tryout sessions.

The season for the Warriors begins on November 18, where they take on the Carolina Jaguars at their temporary home, the Myrtle Beach Convention Center. Ironically, the Jaguars recently hired Mike Holmer to their roster Coastal Carolina indefinitely suspend­ed Holster last season after an alterca­tion involving another player. Whether Stevens and Leasure, Holster returning to the bench or the fact it’s the first professional basketball team in South Carolina, the first game of the season should bring a lot of fans, and favante a lot of excitement.

 PUT ME IN COACH!

with JULIE HAMER

Each week The Chanticleer goes into the locker room for a sitdown with the coaches and trainers of Coastal Carolina University.

Elizabeth Appenzeller
Head Cheerleading Coach

JH: What got you into coaching?
EA: My father and grandfather were both college coaches. I started cheering as a mascot for one of the teams my father coached and I continued cheering through college. While I was getting my masters degree I started coaching cheerleading part time and I have been coaching ever since.

JH: How do you try to improve yourself as a coach each and every year?
EA: Cheerleading is always evolving as a sport and it is important to me as a coach to push the team to learn new things while also keeping the core traditions of cheerleading in the forefront. We attend camps every year where we get introduced to new techniques and also get to see other teams from all over the country. I am constantly watching videos of cheerleading and some of the most inspirational routines are from the 1980’s. Finally, I have a great network of other cheerleading coaches that I talk to about everything from team bonding ideas, game day cheers to nationals.

JH: What can we expect from the Coastal Cheerleaders this year?
EA: You can expect to see them and hear them at all the home football games and men’s and women’s basketball games. The team works really hard to put on a great game day performance and they are constantly pushing each other for more elite stunts and pyra­mids. When you hear them cheering or holding up a sign join in. You can also expect to see the Chanticleer Cheerleaders competing again. We have a CoEd team that will compete at Cheer Ltd. Col­lege Nationals and an All-Girl team that will compete for the first time ever at NCA Nationals. Finally, you can expect to see CHANCEY representing Coastal Carolina University at NCA Nationals!
