We need more onions
The high price of onions in India left at least one man in a haze of fury after he didn’t get enough of the vegetable on his omlette.

The man, angry that he didn’t get enough onions, pulled out a gun and opened fire on a street food vendor last week.

The customer complained that he didn’t receive enough onions and the vendor dismissed the complaint by saying, “Don’t you know that onions are expensive?”

This is the latest crime triggered by the soaring cost of onions in India.

Hey, you lost your finger...
Rashad Johnson, the Arizona Cardinals safety, is recovering from surgery this week after he got the tip of his middle finger ripped off and then reattached after a game against the New Orleans Saints.

The tip of his finger somehow became detached from his hand during a routine tackle on a punt return against Darren Sproles.

Johnson was surprised when he took his glove off when he made it to the sideline and saw blood in it. He said it was probably the most painful injury he’s ever had.

I ain’t goin’ back to jail
Eight prisoners in Oklahoma had a short stint on the run last week after they stole a prison van and made a break for freedom.

Prison guards transporting the men left the car parked outside of a hospital with the keys still in the ignition and the car running when one of the prisoners kicked out the middle partition and stole the car.

Six of the fugitives were apprehended shortly after the attempted escape and the other two were caught later that night.

Island!
An earthquake in Pakistan, which killed more than 200 people, created a new island off the coast of the country last week after part of the land mass became visible from out of the water. The new island is about 650 feet long.

Battle of the Dorms: Which is Worst?

Eaglin Hall
You think your dorm is bad? Well, what if your computer lab had five computers but only one of them worked? Sometimes, if that.
Imagine if you had to do work but you can't because you get to the computer lab and the only computer that works is taken and there's two people waiting for it. What's the point of having five computers if only one of them works most of the time, anyway?
But then you might think 'well you should have brought your own laptop.' Well, I did. Which brings up the fact that the Wi-Fi sucks. My roommate literally has to sit in the hallway to get connection, and that's not all.
My friend that live on the third floor has a boot on her foot and had to hop down all those stairs because the elevator was out of order. People say at least you have a computer lab or at least you have an elevator. But is it really worth having it if most of the time it's not working?
You think your dorm is bad? Well, come stay a week at mine.

The Gardens
You think your dorm is bad? What if its name literally meant "growth" but nothing grows there?
What if it was in the middle of a parking lot with shady looking banisters and cracked pavement?
You'd hope it would at least have some fun stuff like a pool, a volleyball court, an outdoor grill, a trampoline or something. It doesn't. We are lucky to have a basketball goal in the middle of two parking spaces.
We don't have a computer lab. It wouldn't work because Wi-fi and phone reception are non-existent. You'd have better luck making your own electricity than sending a text to your BFF three doors down.
And while its not practical to have an elevator here, everyday we get into fights with the territorial gangs of spiders, palmetto bugs, and mosquitos hanging around our doors.
You think your dorm is bad? You wouldn't want to stay a week at mine.
What is your dorm like? Let us know on Facebook or Twitter, @thechanticleer.

Choose one from each group that best describes you. When you are done add up how many A’s you have and how many B’s you have.

A.) You are slightly disorganized, unpredictable and emotional.
B.) You are goal orientated and well organized.

A.) You are good with people and philosophical.
B.) You are a critical thinker and rarely absent minded.

A.) You read laying down
B.) You read sitting up

A.) Things are done spontaneously; keeping track of time is not important.
B.) Things are done in a planned and orderly way like a to-do list.

A.) You tend to ponder and act on feelings.
B.) Your feelings do not get in the way when making decisions.

A.) You are skilled at sports, writing fiction, drawing or playing music.
B.) You are skilled at math or science and sequencing ideas.

A.) You solve problems intuitively and don’t like reading directions
B.) You like to read directions before doing something.

A.) You are interested in the unexplained and mystery stories.
B.) You prefer to read realistic stories and write nonfiction.

A.) You prefer rock music and can study with music or television.
B.) You prefer classical music.

A.) You love cats.
B.) You love dogs.

A.) You prefer to work in groups with interaction and activity.
B.) You prefer to work alone in a quiet environment.

If you have more B’s, you are left brain dominant: You like to be in control and are good at organizing things. You typically process information by taking pieces, lining them up, and arranging them in a logical order to draw conclusions. You are extremely realistic and deal with everything the way it is. When your environment affects you, you can easily adjust. Tips: Since you like to be in control, you would be a good leader in a study group or group project. Try not to argue with the teacher too often because you can be quite stubborn. If given a choice, choose factual assignments as opposed to open-ended assignments, you would do better with these. Finally, avoid freethinking teachers when you can, they tend to confuse you.

If you have more A’s you are right brain dominant: You work well in groups and are typically good at interactive activities and art. You are holistic and process information starting with the answer. This helps you to see the whole picture first, and not just the details. You tend to be fantasy-oriented and process information based on what you think the answer is. This is good, because you often find the answer intuitively. You tend to process information better when the things are concrete. You like to be able to see, touch, and feel the object. Tips: Remember to always prioritize finishing a project. Try to write directions down in order to stay on track. Avoid getting bogged down by thinking of all the possibilities when answering questions. Try to avoid teachers who lecture a lot, they tend to bore you.

When it comes to students paying attention in class, the number one distraction is texting.

For whatever reason, some students think that professors can’t see or don’t know what they’re doing. It’s no surprise to find out that students texting in class is one of professors top pet peeves.

“When students text/play on their phones in class and then ask questions that have already been answered, I have learned to just smile and answer again because it’s not worth getting frustrated over,” said Victoria Hoffman, Math Professor.

Sometimes it’s tough to pay attention when your phone is sitting on your lap or in your pocket vibrating every once in a while, that is, if you even get service in the academic buildings.

“If someone texts me, I’ll answer,” said Jess DiTripano, sophomore Communications major.

What students don’t take into consideration is that having the opportunity to be in college, let alone taking classes to further their education is a privilege.

“Literally billions of people in the world won’t get what my students do, and yet those same students prefer to look at an Instagram photo,” said Jon Trierise, Philosophy Professor.

So what about getting caught? Sometimes it depends on the professor, or where students sit in class, or how much they care.

“If it’s a class that is mostly lecture, then yeah I’ll spend a good amount of time on Instagram or Twitter but it’s hard to keep up in labs if I do that. But I haven’t gotten caught yet,” said Zachary Cafiero, sophomore Physics and Philosophy major.

For some students, there are not really any conditions as to when they should text in class.

“I don’t feel bad because I can still focus and listen to what my professor is saying while I’m texting,” said Matt Kern, freshman undeclared major.

The more a student pays attention and actively participates in class, the more a professor will most likely not care if they check their phone every once in a while.

“It just bothers me when students don’t pay attention in class but then want me to make extra office hours to help them out,” said Hoffmann.

Considering the fact that professors know that students not only text in class, but cannot stop staring at their phone, they try to prevent these situations from happening.

“I try to keep the students actively involved in class; giving exercises, examples, group work, and thought experiments that make them a part of the learning process, rather than passive receivers,” said Trierise.

As far as disciplinary action is concerned, every professor is different in how they handle certain situations.

“I have not had to take any disciplinary action yet, but I will say ‘put your phone away and pay attention,’” said Hoffman.

Although texting is among the top most annoying things that students do in class, there are other pet peeves that professors hate.

“It’s so rude when people pack up early, especially when I am in the middle of lecture,” said Hoffman.

Typical ideal student acts may include showing up on time, having assignments prepared, participating in class, and asking for help when it is needed.

“I would far rather have a class full of engaged but mediocre students than a class full of brilliant lazy ones,” said Trierise.

Celebrating the freedom to read

This past Wednesday September 25th, the Kimbel Library teamed up with the English honor society, Sigma Tau Delta, to present the annual Banned Books Readout in honor of Banned Books Week.

The readout took place in the Kimbel Library from 1:00pm to 3:00pm where CCU faculty and staff read excerpts from their favorite challenged or banned book.

Just a few of the selections read this year by CCU faculty and staff included, “And Tango Makes Three” by Peter Parnell and Justin Richardson, “Ulysses” by Joyce and “Fifty Shades of Grey” by E.L James.

President of Sigma Tau Delta, Lina Leonard explained, “This is the week when we get a chance to celebrate the freedom to read.”

Banned Books Week first began in 1982 in response to numerous challenges made to remove certain books from schools, libraries and even bookstores. The reasons behind challenging a book are typically because it is thought to have offensive language, sexually explicit instances, homosexuality, violence, drugs, nudity or a religious viewpoint.

According to the American Library Association (ALA), “A challenge is an attempt to remove or restrict materials, based upon the objections of a person or group. A banning is the removal of those materials. Challenges do not simply involve a person expressing a point of view; rather, they are an attempt to remove material from the curriculum or library, thereby restricting the access of others.”

The result is having that book physically removed from the library.

Some of this year’s list of challenged books include Sherman Alexie’s “The Absolutely True Diary of a Part-Time Indian,” and Barbara Ehrenreich’s “Nickel and Dimed,” Orson Scott Card’s “Ender’s Game” and Stephen Chbosky’s “The Perks of Being a Wallflower.”

Over 11,300 different books have been challenged since 1982.

Leonard said, “It’s important to recognize Banned Books Week because a lot of people take something as simple as reading what they want for granted.”

Campus group seeks liberty

Last week, the Coastal Carolina Chapter of Young Americans for Liberty made appearances on Prince Lawn.

On Monday students were invited to write on a free speech wall and the turnout was phenomenal. Phrases ranging from "DO T' SLUT SHAME" and "FOLLOW JESUS" were written by students and faculty in a pressure-free setting.

On Tuesday, YAL celebrated the 4th amendment by raising awareness of recent disclosures that the NSA is wiretapping United States citizens. A large version of the United States Constitution was hoisted up in Prince Lawn on Wednesday. Student had the opportunity to leave their own "John Hancock" alongside those of the founding fathers' signatures.

Thursday, YAL hosted one of their bi-weekly meetings.

Young Americans for Liberty (YAL) is the most active, biggest, and quickest-growing organization supporting pro-liberty values on college campuses throughout America. YAL is a non-profit, non-partisan, libertarian organization devoted to promoting leadership and liberty among college campuses.

A straight-to-the-point explanation of libertarian ideology is an identity in which one is "socially liberal and fiscally conservative", according to Daniel McDonough, the president of YAL and a graduate student.

The libertarian philosophy values individual liberty, political freedom, and voluntary association. "Many people in our generation have libertarian leanings or are libertarians, but don't know the term," McDonough said.

The goal of the Coastal Carolina Chapter of YAL is to encourage students to be more politically involved, and at the very least, more politically informed.

"It's a good way to get students involved in politics in a friendly way," said Adam Chamberlain, assistant professor of politics. "It's really trying to promote liberty for a range of people."

Though the Student Government Association does not currently recognize this chapter of YAL because they do not have the required number of members, the group hopes to be official within the next week or two.

"We want to be active on campus... it is painfully obvious that this campus isn't politically active and our chapter is set on trying to change this," said McDonough.

In the future the group plans to bring speakers to campus and hold policy debates with people of different political persuasions.

If you would like to get involved with the Young Americans for Liberty you can attend their bi-weekly meetings or contact the group at YALCCU@gmail.com.

Ground breaks on Student Center

Coastal Carolina is currently going through a complete renovation of the Jackson Student Center. They are removing part of the parking lot and replacing it with a fully renovated space for students seeking many different kinds of activities.

The student center will be fully completed spring of 2015.

All student amenities are still available such as Aramark/Dining Services, CHANT411, CINO Grille, Coastal Activities Board, Student Government Association, Student Media Publications ~ The Chanticleer Newspaper, Archarios Literary Magazine, Tempo Feature Magazine, and Student Activities and Leadership.

The New Jackson Student Center will add over 30,000 square feet of space to the campus. This area will include: an expanded and updated Game Room, a 250-seat Movie Theater, a Convenience Store, three state-of-the-art meeting rooms, and one conference room. Plus, it will have a lounge space for relaxation and studying.

Many members of the community will benefit as well as the students because there will be new offices for Career Services, International Student Services, Multicultural Student Services, and The COAST. Also, there will be a new Student Organization Resource Center - SORC - designed workspace for all student organizations.

To show Chanticleer spirit, there will be a retail store filled with college memorabilia. Other amenities include pool tables, televisions, couches, tables, and arcade games. Not only will it help many students, but many programs will be packing up and moving to the new space. It will have a computer help center, career center, women's services, international students, and student service office.

"I wish I was here to see the new center next spring. It will be a great place to relax with coffee or simply read a book," said Marcella Morel, senior.

Some students feel annoyed by the renovations.

"I feel like campus is a maze with these fences, but I hope this school will generate more money in the future," said Sarah Waldowski.

The Student Center was named for Elizabeth "Lib" Benson Jackson on October 16, 2004 to commemorate a family gift in her honor to Coastal's 50th Anniversary Initiatives Campaign. Mrs. Jackson was born and raised in Salisbury, N.C., and is the oldest of four children. She married A.E. Jackson, Jr., and the couple moved to Myrtle Beach in 1939. The Jacksons were among Myrtle Beach's earliest residents.

Human trafficking hits home for one student

Nelson Hardwick speaks to Deborah Breede’s class

Every day across the world 3,287 people are sold or kidnapped and forced into slavery. That is 136 people every hour, most of them children, and most of them are sold for sex.

Human trafficking is a $32 billion a year business that in 2008 saw around 200,000 Americans sold into sex slavery, according to statistics provided by the U.S. Department of Justice, and that is just the cases that get reported.

Some people may not be familiar with the human trafficking practice because they think it could never happen to them, but for one Coastal Carolina student the scenario is all too real.

The student, who asked to remain anonymous, attended an annual concert called Jerryfest at Boathouse, a local bar located directly on the Intracoastal Waterway, with about a dozen of her friends when she said they were approached by men who intended to sell them into sex slavery.

She said she and her friends had some drinks before they got to the bar, so when they got there they split up and a few of them went to use the bathroom. There was a long line, so one of her male friends went to wait with them.

While they waited in line the friends were approached by three hispanic men who asked to buy the girls drinks.

“These guys were just asking us stupid questions,” she said.

Initially the girls declined the drinks, but after repeated advances from the men the girls agreed to let them buy Coronas because the bartender would put a lime in the top of the bottle, which the girls said would block the men from putting anything in the drink.

When the girls finally made it into the bathroom one of the Hispanic men approached their male friend and asked if the girls belonged to him.

The girl’s friend said ‘yes, those are my girls,’ and the man asked how much he wanted for them.

“I’m going back to Mexico soon. I need them. I’ll give you anything for them,” the man said.

Jokingly, their male friend said, “Ya sure, I’ll give them to you for five grand.”

The man took him seriously and walked away to inform his friends of their deal.

When the girls came back from the bathroom their friend told them what happened and they laughed it off as just being odd but not serious.

“I joked and said ‘oh he’s going to roofie us, we’re going to get sold,’” the girl said.

Later on in the day the girls went back to the bathroom. When they came out she said she saw the man and some of his friends standing by the doors nodding at each other and the girls like they were trying to communicate something.

The girls were then approached by one of their other friends who overheard some of the men speaking in Spanish, and they mentioned something about a van in the parking lot.

The girl said she became freaked out so she went to round up the rest of her friends so they could leave before anything bad happened. One of the friends went to pull their car around to the front to pick them up and they all walked outside to leave.

When they got outside the girl said she saw a large white cargo van in the parking lot with more Hispanic men standing around it, but before anything bad happened her friend who spoke Spanish yelled something at the men and the group of friends left.

“If I was drunker, or not with my friends, who knows what could have happened,” she said.

Deborah Breede, associate professor at Coastal Carolina, specializes in gender violence, and said occurrences like this one are all too common and not everyone is as lucky as the student and her friends.

“A good looking girl stays behind with a cute guy she meets, and before she knows it she’s basically unconscious and getting loaded into a van in the parking lot,” Breede said.

Breede has been trying to raise awareness about human trafficking on campus and in the community for years. She has worked on projects with the Eastern Carolina Coalition Against Human Trafficking, a local group dedicated to stopping human trafficking, and helped to get legislation passed in the state.

“We kind of identified some areas where we need to do some work and get some things done,” she said.

Two bills sponsored by Rep. Nelson Hardwick (R-Horry County) have passed the South Carolina legislature since 2011. One of the bills increased the penalties for people caught human trafficking and the other dedicated more funding for human trafficking investigation and made it easier for agencies to help each other.

Hardwick said it is hard to prosecute the crime, though because it is hard to find evidence of human trafficking.

“Lots of times people, even having been violated, don’t want to testify,” Hardwick said.

Hardwick said the traffickers often threaten the people they kidnap and threaten to harm their families, so instead of testifying against them the victims stay silent.

Breede said it is important for people to know the signs of human trafficking, because it could happen to anyone.

“We really try to train women,” she said. “Don’t take drinks from strangers, use the buddy system, watch your surroundings, never leave a man behind, that type of thing.”

The Coastal offense racked up 50 points for the third consecutive game and demoralized the Elon defense with 652 yards of total offense as the Chants cruised past the Phoenix for their fifth straight win.

Quarterback Alex Ross accounted for 382 yards of total offense and four touchdowns while running back Lorenzo Taliaferro bulldozed his way through defenders for 205 rushing yards on 32 carries and three touchdowns.

Neither defense seemed to be existent in the first half.

Coastal got the ball to start the game and cruised 75 yards down the field to take an early lead. Taliaferro’s 24 yard touchdown run and Alex Catron’s point after put the Chants in the driver’s seat 7-0.

Elon returned the favor during their first possession when running back Kierre Brown broke away for a 55 yard run that set up a five yard touchdown pass. The extra point tied the game at seven.

The CCU offense picked up where it left off on the Chant’s next possession and drove 75 yards for another touchdown. Taliaferro capped the drive with his two yard rushing touchdown. A bad snap during the extra point made the score 13-7 Chants.

Elon led for the first time 14-13 after they found the end zone and converted the extra point on their following drive.

Coastal regained the lead on their following possession when Ross punched it in to the end zone from a yard out. A failed two point conversion attempt made the score 19-14 Coastal.

After a series of defensive stands by both teams, Elon took a 21-19 lead that was short lived thanks to a 79 yard scoring drive by Coastal on their following possession. Taliaferro broke away for a 29 yard run and Ross hit Niccolo Mastromatteo in the left corner of the end zone for a 15 yard touchdown. Another failed two point conversion put the Chants up 25-21.

The defense forced Elon to punt and then put the ball back in the hands of the offense, but an Alex Ross interception gave the ball back to the Phoenix at the CCU 24. The Phoenix took advantage of this opportunity and found the end zone to take a 28-25 lead.

Ross made up for his interception on the Chants next drive with a 40 yard touchdown pass to Tyler Banks with 28 seconds left before half time. The touchdown put the Chants up 32-28 at the half.

The second half was all Coastal. The defense came out firing on all cylinders and held Elon scoreless for the remainder of the game. The offense picked up where they left off and ripped apart the Elon defense for 21 unanswered points to make the final score 53-28 Chants.

The Chants are off to their best start in the program’s history and head into their bye week undefeated at 5-0.

Coastal returns to action October 12 when they host Gardner-Webb at 6pm in Brooks Stadium.

Coastal Carolina Rugby hosted last year’s number three seed in the Southern Rugby Conference playoffs, Elon, on Saturday at 1 pm.

Coastal Carolina lost only one player from last year and 14 of the 15 starters were veterans this week. Led by the team’s new Captain for the 2013 school year, Coastal came out with a convincing 47-0 victory despite numerous penalties and other missed opportunities.

Coastal came out aggressive and ready to play.

In rugby, a “try” is the equivalent to a touchdown in American Football. There were nine tries scored on the day which began just moments into the game by the team’s speedy full-back Mike Tillman; Tillman also recorded a hat trick on the day (3 tries). The remaining six tries were scored by six different players, respectively: Zaefala Anderson, Robert Donahue, Thomas Barnett, Tyler Stiffler Justin Williams, Eric Cortez.

Rugby teams are generally separated by the big men (forwards) and the faster flashy guys (backs). The honor was divided into two awards which were to Zaefala Anderson as Forward of the Match and to Mike Tillman as the Back of the Match. Zaefala also earned the “Hammered Award” for having the most vicious tackle(s) of the game.

CCU will be traveling to College of Charleston Saturday in hopes of improving to 2-0. The next home match will be on Saturday October 19 against The Citadel.

Chants drop Winthrop but fall to Presbyterian

The Volleyball team came away from Rock Hill, S.C., with a 3-1 victory over Winthrop on Friday, but were sent packing in Saturday’s 3-2 loss at Presbyterian.

The Chants took the two opening sets 25-21 and 25-14 in Friday’s game. Winthrop took the third set 26-24, but lost the fourth match to the Chants 25-20. Coastal had a team hitting percentage of .238, 54 total digs, and 14 blocks.

Sophomore Gabriella Horvath led the team with 17 kills, 10 digs, and three blocks. Senior Lauren Alejo racked up 42 assists, seven digs, and two blocks. Redshirt junior Lindsay Gill led the team with 16 digs. Gill has 1,233 career digs and is one away from tying the record.

Alejo dished out 58 assists in Saturday’s contest at Presbyterian but the Chants could not pull off the win.

Coastal took the first match 41-39 and went on to win the second match 25-20 before the Blue Hose took the last three matches for the win.

The Chants return to Conway this Friday to host High Point at 7pm.

Men’s Soccer Wins Five Straight Chants down Gardner-Webb 1-0

Jakub Stourac’s goal in the 87th minute of play was all Coastal needed to defeat Gardner-Webb in Saturday’s home match-up.

It was a defensive first half.

The Bulldogs finished the half with four shots on goal. All of those shots were saved by CCU goalkee Devin Cook. The Chants only attempted two goals in the first half.

Coastal got their offense going in the second half with. The Chants recorded 13 shots on goal and recorded the only goal of the game. CCU almost broke the tie three times in the 52nd minute of play; however, Gardner-Webb saved each of the Chants three shots.

Coastal’s defense maintained its strength throughout the second half and only allowed the Bulldogs to attempt one shot.

Stourac provided the lone goal for the Chants when his low kick slipped past Gardner-Webb goalie Mathew Swan.

Coastal had a 15-5 shot advantage and a 6-2 edge in corner opportunities. Cook was the winning goalie and recorded his third straight shut out.

The win marks the fifth straight win for Coastal, making their record 6-2-0 and 2-0-0 in the Big South Conference.

Coastal’s next game is next Saturday at 7:30 pm at High Point.

Chicken Enchiladas

What you'll need:
- 6-8 corn tortillas (enchilada size)
- 1 pre-cooked plain chicken
- 1 cup corn
- 3 cups shredded Mexican blend cheese, divided in half
- 3 tablespoons butter
- 1/2 can Jalapeno's
- 1 small onion, chopped (about 1/4 cup)
- 1 can (about 4 ounces) chopped green jalapenos, drained (optional)
- 1 1/4 cups prepared enchilada sauce

Directions:
Chicken Enchiladas are fun to make, and very tasty. If you are looking for a filling meal or some Tex-Mex flair, this dish is for you.

Preheat your oven to about 325 and make sure it beeps before putting it in. This is a very important step for any beginner baker.

First, stir the chicken, 1 cup cheese, onion, jalapenos, and corn into a bowl. Once your mixture is stirred, you can now prepare your pan. Spread about half of the enchilada sauce in the bottom of a shallow baking dish.

Now, open up a tortilla and spread your mixture down the center of the tortilla. Roll the tortillas around the filling and place it into the pan seam side down. Do this will all of your mixture and tortillas. Pour the remaining enchilada sauce over the filled tortillas. Now, top with cheese. Bake for 25 minutes or until the filling is hot and bubbling.

Once it is done, you can make it a little more fancy if desired. Top with lettuce, sour cream or tomato.

The Top 5 Worst Things about Bars

1. Girls
We all understand that you're dressed up in your best party dress (even though you're just going to Tongys) and you're feeling like hot stuff, but no one else cares that you don't feel like waiting in line with everyone else. Your attitude is vile, you're loud and obnoxious, and even though you think you are hardcore threatening to hit a guy in the face, just think, one day you will threaten the wrong guy and his girlfriend just ruin your night.

2. Guys
Just because your boy is the bouncer and you've been to the same bar three nights in a row does not give power over everyone else. Even though you are laughing and joking when you shove your way to the bar doesn't make it a joke, and everyone thinks your less of a bar celebrity and more of a tool.

3. Bartenders
It's cool that you think you're going to get a bigger tip flirting with the underage girl that's trying to convince you to give her a shot of Jack in the coke she just ordered, but when someone else has been waiting at the other end of the bar for five minutes, you just screwed yourself out of any gratuity.

4. Shot Girls
Have you ever told one of those girls walking around with a tray of shots that you might buy one later? Because if you do, bet yourself you're going to get some attitude. Think of them like an animal in the wild; don't make eye contact and when they start heading for you, push your friend to make him the victim and run like hell.

5. Bouncers
Ignore the fact that they just let the entire baseball team in ahead of you and that they insist that your drivers license is fake and they might be pretty nice guys. Just kidding, they just let twenty girls in ahead of you and turning you away because the bar just reached maximum capacity.

Justin Timberlake
The 20/20 Experience

Justin Timberlake is at it again. The artist's album The 20/20 Experience - 2 of 2, released last week.

Yes, this is volume two of the series. But since it leaked over a week early on iTunes some of you may have already heard it. The 20/20 Experience - The Complete Experience features all 21 songs, including 11 brand new songs.

Justin wasted no time to release part 2 of the series. After taking nearly seven years between FutureSex/LoveSounds and The 20/20 Experience, he only waited a little more than 6 months to release part two.

This is actually pretty smart since the 2 albums combined is a total of two-and-a-half hours; it would have been quite lengthy for one album.

The album is packed with hits. Some of the songs include the soulful, "Take Back The Night," "True Blood," "Drink You Away," and "Cabaret."

The album includes features from Drake, Jay Z, and of course Justin had to team up with Timbaland to make yet another amazing album.

And if that's not enough for you Justin fans, the singer will be touring through the fall. On top of that he will also be in two movies coming out soon "Runner Runner" and "Inside Llewyn Davis."

Justin stays busy and who knows what he has planned next for us.

How I Met Your Mother

Now that the mother has been unveiled, How I Met Your Mother, which first broadcast in 2005, is better than ever. With seven seasons on Netflix, there are more than enough episodes to satisfy anyone's comedy craving.

How I Met Your Mother is narrated by Ted Mosby, played by Josh Radnor, as he sits down in the year 2030 to tell his kids the story of, well, how he met their mother.

The storyline frequently cuts in and out and mostly shows how annoyed his kids are having to hear a story that, if it is as long as the show itself, seems to have lasted eight years. Their annoyance is not unfounded - half of the story does not even deal with his search for their mother.

Throughout the entire show, we are given clues as to who the mother is. Some of them are as simple as a yellow umbrella or her being a student at the university Ted teaches at. The show sometimes even leads you into thinking that the woman Ted is currently dating is the mother until the relationship ends and he reassures his children that the woman was indeed not her.

While some of the story line deals with Ted Mosby's search for true love, most of it deals with funny bar meet ups and the adventures he has with his friends, Barney, Robin, Marshall, and Lily.

Barney Stinson, a notorious womanizer played by Neil Patrick Harris, frequently sleeps with various women and uses different aliases in order to do so. As the show progresses, he even develops some of his own catch phrases including "legen... wait for it... DARY!" and the ever famous "challenge accepted."

On the other hand, Robin Scherbatsky, played by Cobie Smulders, is a rising journalist and most of her storyline deals with her struggle to rise in the broadcasting ranks. She, too, goes through a long list of boyfriends, but she is not as worried about finding her true love as Ted is.

While everyone else in the group is almost always single, Marshall and Lily, played by Jason Segel and Alyson Hannigan, have managed to make their relationship last ever since they met in college. They also battle with their careers but most of their struggles come from helping, and perhaps meddling, in their friend's painfully single lives.

Their adventures together mainly happen when they are drunk, but some of them are simple - like the time they found out that Robin was a Canadian pop star in her teen years and the "Slap Bet" that occurs throughout the seasons.

Together these characters create a perfect storm and always leave their viewers with a laugh. Now that the ninth and final season is beginning and the story of how Ted Mosby met the mother of his children is coming to a close, there is enough time to catch up and not be left in the dust.
