Last week a U.S. federal appeals court affirmed Americans right to give police officers the middle finger.
In a landmark decision, the court ruled that the ancient gesture of insult is not a reasonable suspicion for police officers to pull people over and give them a ticket.
The trial came after John Swartz, a New York resident, flipped off a police officer who was doing radar detection at an intersection. The officer arrested Swartz for Disorderly conduct, but the charges have now been dropped.

WCCU Radio is back this year with a brand new line-up! Our shows range from rap, to hip-hop, to talk. We have new DJs that have put their fresh “spin” on their new shows, but we still have the seasoned vets that give listeners what they’ve come to know and love.

This year, WCCU Radio will be live at the OSAL sponsored Chant-a-thon marathon. This is the first year that WCCU will host this event. Chant-a-thon begins on November 7th at 7pm and ends November 8th at 12pm. This 17 hour event will raise money for the Children’s Hospital.

How do I listen to WCCU Radio?
Good question. WCCU’s station is internet based, which means that listeners can tune in from all over the world. You can download the Tune-In app on your smart-phone, iPad or laptop and search for Coastal Carolina. You can also find us on iTunes.

Listen to WCCU Radio- we are live!

From capstone to caring to leaving a legacy
One chanticleer’s mission to feed the hungry

By: Russel Alston
Staff Writer

Thanksgiving for Nicole Slatky usually takes place at her aunt’s house where the menu is turkey, ham, roast beef, a seven-layer dip and “a million sides.” And that’s after the appetizers that serve as a warm up.

Slatky, a 21-year-old communication major, says she can’t imagine that a family may have to go without a traditional Thanksgiving Day meal.

Determined to do something about that, she’s attempting to turn the final project in her capstone class into an annual tradition with the new Coastal Carolina University Adopts-A-Family Program.

Anyone can volunteer and donate: colleges, departments, Greek organizations, sports teams (both Division-1 and intramural) campus clubs, student organization and students.

“T of ten students in the dorms want to get together and adopt a family, let them,” she said. “My thought is, if you want to give back and have the means to do it, do it.”

All types of non-perishable foods are accepted. All baskets must include the ingredients of a traditional holiday meal, however, which the families will prepare for themselves.

“There has to be a turkey, mashed potatoes and gravy, stuffing, corn, carrots, green beans, cranberry sauce and dessert,” says Slatky. “We also will take kid-friendly items such as macaroni and cheese, chicken noodle soup and peanut butter and jelly.”

Slatky hopes enough food is donated so households can cook a Thanksgiving meal and load their pantry with excess groceries. She adopted a family as a student of South Plainfield high school in New Jersey. There, she once delivered a basket to a mother expecting just one.

“I told her we had five more baskets in the car,” she said. “Hearing that, she completely broke down.”

To get her idea off the ground, Slatky paid a visit to CCU’s coordinators of Civic Engagement & Orientation, Jordan Smith and Nick DeStefano. The trio then set out to make Slatky’s idea an annual program at CCU.

“I believe it’s an inspiring project,” said Smith. “Things really start to happen when students turn their passions into actions. This is the case for Nicole. I was very fortunate that she knew to seek out Civic Engagement.”

Smith and DeStefano have been helping Slatky with the logistics of the program. This includes helping her coordinate with various organizations in the community and generating the families who will receive the meals.

Slatky handled the drafting of proposals, signing up groups to donate, and the programs promotional efforts. She recently appeared on the TV show “Coastal Today” to spread the word to a wider audience.

“Nicole has laid the groundwork, so it is my hope that we can continue to provide families with Thanksgiving meals for years to come,” said Smith.

Slatky isn’t new to philanthropy. She credits her parents with demonstrating what it means to give to those who are less fortunate.

Back in South Plainfield, she volunteered at numerous events such as an all-day marathon called the Tiger 24, which raised funds for community members in need.

Slatky will leave her fingerprints on CCU thanks to all her efforts to give back. While she says she wouldn’t mind leaving a legacy, her true motivation comes from a simpler source.

“I’ve always enjoyed giving back,” she said. It just feels good.”

Any one interested in donating can contact Slatky at naslatky@g.coastal.edu, or Smith in the Office of Student Leadership, located in the Lib Jackson Student Center.

#Are #hashtags #overused #?

By: Samantha Riley
Features Editor

Long before the “#” symbol was called a hashtag, our ancestors commonly referred to it as the pound sign. However, like every other interesting or creative trend, the hashtag has found a way to wear out its welcome and has now gone overboard.

In a March 2013 survey done by RadiumOne, it was calculated that more than half of mobile-device users use hashtags on a regular basis. This hashtag phenomenon is not only cluttering our smartphones and laptops, but our televisions and regular day speech as well.

Hashtags are typically posted in a live feed online, letting your followers know what sports game you are watching on television, who you are voting for on Dancing with the Stars and even what you are doing at this very moment. These little symbols have a way to connect to other people with similar interests.

According to Twitter’s website, “People [should] use the hashtag symbol (#) before a relevant keyword or phrase (no spaces) in their Tweet to categorize those Tweets and help them show more easily in Twitter Search.”

But who invented the hashtag and where did it come from? About a year after Twitter was created in 2006, Chris Messina, a developer and designer for Google, sent out the first tweet with a hashtag. The rest was history.

However, if anyone takes a quick glance at any social media nowadays, it would seem that the hashtag is often abused.

“I have one friend who hashtags everything. Like every single word,” said freshman Beth Ross.

Unbeknownst to many of its users, Twitter has specific rules when it comes to the use of their hashtags.

Twitter’s website says, “Don’t over-tag a single Tweet. (Twitter Best Practices recommends using no more than 2 hashtags per Tweet.)”

With more than 200 million active users, ages 18-29 are the most likely age group to use Twitter and the hashtags territory that comes along with it. This abundance of hashtags has turned into an obsession, leading tweeters to start taking hashtags outside of their normal Twitter habitats and mixing it into other aspects of their life; Instagram, Facebook and even worse, the real world.

“Don’t use hashtags on Facebook. That’s just stupid,” said Ross.

Several tweeters refer to this stance as “Hashtag Etiquette” and should just be a rule adhered to.

So keep the hashtags to a minimum, and leave them on Twitter. If you use it anywhere else it just makes things #awkward.

Dance the night away at Chant-a-Thon

Coastal Carolina will host a dance marathon starting Friday night at 7 P.M. that will last until Noon on Saturday, with proceeds going to help Children's Miracle Network Hospitals.

The dance marathon is part of a national movement of universities across the country who help the children in the hospital network.

"We raise money for kids who can't fight for themselves right now," said Michael Smith, programming assistant with the Office of Student Activities and Leadership.

This year the Chant-a-Thon will last 17 hours and students will be on their feet the entire time dancing, playing games, and enjoying other entertainment to raise money for the children. "The 17 represents the 17 million children who are patients in the children's hospitals each year," Smith said.

The event started last year in November as a joint effort between Coastal Carolina's College Activities Board and Tyger Glauser, the assistant director of the Office of Student Activities and Leadership.

Dennis Davis, a student who participated in the event last year, said the Chant-a-Thon has a personal significance to him because he was a patient in one of the children's hospitals when he was younger.

"The nurses brought us stuffed animals and video games and the doctors would be really nice to us," he said. "All of that was made possible because of donations made to the children's hospital. This is my way of giving back."

Last year the Chant-a-Thon raised over $8,800 for the Children's Miracle Network Hospitals, and between 600 and 700 students showed up to participate.

"We would love to have more this year, but we hope to have at least as many people show up as last year," Smith said.

The 17 hours of straight dancing may seem like a challenge to some but it will continue to raise money through the end of the school year.

"In the moment you have a lot of energy, but after a while you start to get tired. Then you just think about all the children you are helping and it pushes you to keep going."

The next day can be kind of rough, though, Davis said he slept pretty much the entire day.

The Chant-a-Thon is sponsoring a program called 'A Million Miracles,' which also supports The Children's Miracle Network Hospitals. The program hopes to gather one million pennies, which equals $10,000, to give to the hospitals.

A Million Miracles will be collecting pennies at the Chant-a-Thon, but it will continue to raise money through the end of the school year.

Students believe CCU does enough to promote safety

By: Josh Fatzick
Editor in Chief

Over half of the Coastal Carolina students who participated in a live-vote during a talk about sex and ethics in college last week said student groups at the university do enough to promote a safe and healthy culture on campus.

Less than thirty percent of the students said Coastal Carolina needs to do more to promote safe sex habits on campus. The rest were undecided.

"Counseling services are always coming into classes and encouraging people to be healthy," Kelley McDonnell said during the questions portion of the event. "I think we definitely do enough to promote safety."

The talk was part of the Java Jabber series hosted by The Jackson Family Center for Ethics & Values. It focused on the impact of sexual assaults on college campuses across the country and the perceived causes of the assaults.

Members of the four person panel stressed the importance of speaking up about sexual assault for survivors, because it can be a traumatizing experience to go through, and even more so if you can’t talk to anyone about it.

"A lot of sexual assault happens in silence, and that’s even worse," said Nils Rauhut, the director of the Jackson Center.

According to statistics provided by Coastal Carolina’s student health center, one in every six women and one in every 30 men will be sexually assaulted during their lifetime.

The worst part about these numbers, according to Christine Donevant-Haines, assistant director of Counseling Services, is that around 54 percent of those who are sexually assaulted will never be report it to police or seek counseling for themselves because they are scared they will get in trouble, they don’t want to tell their parents, or they don’t want to have to face their attacker in court.

"If people don’t talk about what happened it puts them at risk for both long and short term mental health issues," she said. "It doesn’t matter who you are, just tell somebody."

The panel also spoke about the responsibility of friends of those who have been assaulted. April Daley, one of the student members on the panel said it is important for friends to be a support system for people who are raped or sexually assaulted. She said friends have to stick together.

"You’re there to be a friend to someone, you should listen to them," she said.

One of the panelists, Amy Fitzpatrick, a lecturer in Women’s and Gender Studies, said that the current culture in America is to blame for the sexual assaults we see. She said America is creating a space where rape is considered the norm.

Fitzpatrick said there are competing ideas of gender roles for men and women, and sometimes they conflict with each other.

The idea that guys need to have sex with a lot of girls to prove their manhood conflicts with the gender role of women who have to be pure or they will be considered a slut. But women also need to be available for sex because that is what men want, and that is how to get a man, Fitzpatrick said.

"This puts women in a place where they can’t say yes, but they can’t say no either," she said.

The panel ended by saying that consent applies to both parties involved in a sexual encounter, it’s not just on the female. There is a male responsibility to keep things consensual, and consent can be withdrawn at any time.

"Consent is a two way street," said Oshay Scott, a student member of the panel. "Yes means yes, no means no, and stop means stop. There are withdrawals during sex."

Homecoming week packed full with events

Talent Show Takeover

By: Briana C. Starks
Staff Writer

There's a lot of talent walking around CCU, and students and faculty are always excited to attend the talent shows during homecoming week.

The talent show on Wednesday, October 29th was held in Wheelwright Auditorium. The tickets for the show went on sale the previous Monday and they were sold out by that Tuesday.

The show opened up with the host's three angels. They performed a dance piece before introducing him. The three young ladies were very energetic which kept the audience's attention.

When the host came out, the crowd went wild. He introduced himself and the judges who were all faculty members at Coastal Carolina.

The host did a roll call of the people who were performing and the Panhellenic sororities and fraternities were full of excitement.

The first performer was a rapper who maintained to keep the audience's attention his entire show with a nice beat and metaphors in his song.

Alpha Delta Pi and Kappa Sigma held the next performance that had the crowd going wild.

"The poets that performed in the show were great," said senior Interdisciplinary Studies major Jasmine Jackson.

During the first poet's showcase, the young lady spoke about women and men respecting themselves.

"I enjoyed her message because it was a poem worth our generation listening to," said Jackson.

The second poet used his words to paint a picture in the audience's head.

"He took us to a place where most people probably never thought they could go, including myself," said junior Education major Raiven Smith. "A place full of hate, violence, and fear. I believed it was an eye opener for us all."

Later in the show, a young lady sung about being in love with a man who loves someone else. She made the audience feel as if she was truly experiencing that.

The male singer wowed the crowd with a country love song.

Everyone clapped their hands and stomped their feet as he let every note flow with ease.

The last showcase that left the crowd going wild was a young man impersonating Beyonce. He danced and performed a few of her songs. Every step he took was so good and some students even said that he looked exactly like Beyonce. Along with his dancers, they performed and stole the show.

The homecoming theme was showcased throughout the entire talent show which is, "The Teal Take-down: Knockout the Niners." There were props used to make a boxing ring that was quite creative.

"This is one of the best talents shows that I have ever attended, I really enjoyed it," said junior Communication major Taylor Sheets.

It's sink or swim for sustainability

By: Josh Fatzick
Editor in Chief

Members of the Pi Kappa Phi and Gamma Phi Beta team won the recycled boat race, which was held in the Williams-Brice Campus Recreation Center Pool.

Tyler Van Moppes and Matt Thomas captained the boat to a commanding victory over the other teams in the race, beating them by just over six seconds.

“It feels pretty good,” said Thomas. “But we were just thronging on top of the boat, it took a group effort to make this possible.”

Other teams in the race included members of fraternities and sororities, the club rugby team, and residents of Eaglin Residence Hall.

The Alpha Xi Delta team came in second place, Phi Sigma Sigma came in third place along with winning the prize for most spirited team, and The Eaglin Hall team took the “Titanic Award” for the fastest boat to sink with the most grace.

A record number of teams showed up for the race, and this was the third year in a row Coastal Carolina held a recycled boat race as part of its Homecoming Week festivities.

The race was sponsored by the CCU Sustainability initiative, who wanted to help bring awareness to recycling on the Coastal Carolina campus.

“It’s something different and fun, and it really incorporates sustainability with the recycled materials,” said Maria Ferio, one of the CCU Eco Reps.

Battle of the Bands arises good reviews among students

By: Kelley McDonnell
Assistant Editor

Last Tuesday, the students of Coastal gathered at Woods Pavilion to listen to hang out, drink hot chocolate and listen to some great bands play some of their best music. The event began at eight pm and lasted until about ten thirty pm. While there, students stood by the fire, the homecoming court was announced, and the judges chose the winning band to open for Gloriana last Friday.

Below the Baseline consists of Sam Goodwin on guitar, keys, and vocals, McKinley Devilbliss on guitar and vocals, Andrew McDermott on the bass, and Austin Perry on the drums.

“It’s awesome performing for students. We normally get a good reaction to our music from them—they tend to dance more,” said Perry.

The other bands who played were Paper Work Party Band, Conception of Being, and Arsenal Hill. All bands succeeded in getting students to clap along to the beat, wave their arms, and cheer after each song was finished.

“We put a lot of practice into our songs. We play them over and over and over again and again until they sound like we want them to,” said Perry.

The event was DJ-ed by Dennis Hubbell with Hubbell Entertainment.

“I actually liked how packed it was, I felt like I was at a real concert with how loud and crowded it was,” said Alexandria Veary, sophomore accounting major.

The Gloriana concert ended up being a success and members of Below the Baseline were able to meet Gloriana back stage. They hope to see everyone at Battle of the Bands again next year.

Niner-Knockout

By: Kyle Jordan
Sports Editor

De’Angelo Henderson racked up 117 yards rushing and found the end-zone once, while Lorenzo Taliaferro ran over defenders for 139 yards and three touchdowns to lead the Chants to their ninth win of the season in a 50-25 beat-down over Charlotte in Saturday’s Homecoming football game.

With his three rushing touchdowns, Taliaferro increased his season total to 21 touchdowns on the ground and tied the Big South single-season rushing record that was set last year by Stony Brook’s Miguel Maysonet. Taliaferro also increased his total rushing yards this season to 1,251.

CCU quarterback, Alex Ross, looked as sharp as he has all season after missing last week’s game against VMI. The sophomore quarterback completed 16 of his 22 passing attempts and threw for 237 yards and two touchdowns.

After their first offensive drive ended with a missed field goal that deflected off of the goal post, the Chants were able to put together a scoring drive on their second possession that ended with a two-yard rushing touchdown by Taliaferro. Alex Catron’s point after made it 7-0 Chants.

On their drive following Taliaferro’s touchdown, the 49ers were able to convert on third down three times to get into Coastal territory. However, a strong defensive stance by the Chants forced the 49ers to settle for a field goal that cut the Chant’s lead to 7-3.

On the ensuing kickoff, CCU’s special teams playmaker, Devin Brown, gave the Chants’ offense excellent field position with his 50-yard return to the Charlotte 49-yard line. A face mask penalty on the return pushed the CCU offense all the way to the Charlotte 34-yard line to start their next drive. Brown set the CCU record for Longest Scoring Play last weekend against VMI with his 95-yard kickoff return for a touchdown.

Ross found senior wide-out, Matt Hazel, six plays later for a five-yard touchdown to give Coastal a 14-3 lead.

Charlotte’s offense made the score 14-11 after they opened the second quarter with a seven-play drive that ended in a nine-yard touchdown and a two point conversion.

Another long return by Brown on the ensuing kickoff and another personal foul on the 49ers kicking team once again allowed the CCU offense to start their next drive in 49er territory. This time at the Charlotte 39-yard line. On their first play of the drive, the Chants covered all of that ground with a 39-yard touchdown pass from Ross to DeMario Bennett.

The CCU defense forced the game’s first turnover on the 49ers following possession.

On their ensuing drive, Charlotte got all the way to the CCU one-yard line before Johnny Houston put the ball back into the hands of Ross and the CCU offense with his interception. Alex Catron’s 29-yard field goal gave the Chants a 24-11 lead with just minutes left in the first half.

The 49ers cut the Chants’ lead to six, but Coastal’s offense roared back with a scoring drive that was capped with another Taliaferro touchdown. The failed two-point conversion made the score 30-18 Coastal, heading into the locker room.

The Chants controlled the second half on both sides of the ball.

Coastal got the ball to start the second half and rode the back of Henderson on their way to another touchdown. Taliaferro accounted for the Chants final score of the game in the fourth quarter and the 49ers did not find the end-zone again until the closing minutes.

Coastal will hit the road next weekend to take on 9-1 Charleston Southern at 1p.m.
A whole lotta HOOPLA! about Coastal basketball

By: Laurel Nusbaumer
Staff Writer

The Coastal Carolina men’s and women’s basketball teams celebrated their upcoming season last Monday night with their own version of “Midnight Madness.”

HOOPLA! kicked off with a recognition of the CCU football team and their undefeated season record. Prizes of $100 and $250 to the Chanticleer Bookstore were given out to Simon Says winners. Steve Max, the nation’s leading Simon Says scholar (we can’t make this up, Google him) led the contest. CCU student Juni walked away with $100 to the Chanticleer Bookstore, along with JT receiving $250.

There was also a dance contest in which students could receive prizes. The songs played included popular dance moves such as the “YMCA,” and “Walk it Out.” CCU student Nicolette won the contest, along with her partner, Michel Enaga of the men’s basketball team.

Coastal Basketball at a glance

Coach Cliff Ellis announced the men’s upcoming season and their first game against Akron on November 8. Though the game is away, Ellis asked for fan support, because last year’s home opener against them was a tough battle, and the Chanticleers came out on top in overtime.

“Let’s get ready to rumble!” Ellis said as he closed his announce-ment to get the crowd pumped.

Coastal Carolina men’s basketball team was selected third in the South Division of the Big South Conference preseason poll. The conference’s head coaches and media members cast this vote.

Ellis’ team is currently in a “re-building” phase as he lost two of his scoring leaders, Anthony Raffa and Kiere Greenwood. The Chanticleers will rely greatly on transfer Eric Smith to lead the team.

Coach Jaida Williams is new this year to Chanticleer basketball and hopes to train the women’s basketball team to victory. It will be Williams’ first year as a head coach and she is lucky enough to have several returners who lead 80-percent of the scoring.

The women’s first game this season is against Virginia Intermont College on November 9; this game will be played at home in the HTC Center. Williams’ hopes to see a lot of fan support as the women kick off their season.

The women’s basketball team has been ranked ninth according to the preseason poll voted by the conference’s head coaches and media members.

“This team has heart,” Williams said. “They are committed to getting better every single day and that is what I’m most proud of.”

The women’s basketball team is already off to a steady start after a 94-53 victory over Clavin in the exhibition game that took place on October 27.

Men’s Soccer Week In Review

The fifth ranked Chants travelled to Elon to take on the 25th ranked Phoenix on Tuesday and to UNC Asheville on Saturday.

Tuesdays contest at Elon proved to be a penalty-filled, defensive struggle. Both teams combined for a total of 27 fouls, 3 yellow cards each, and red card.

Elon netted the first goal in the 70th minute of play, but Coastal’s Pedro Ribeiro was able to even the score at 1-1 in the 80th minute.

A red card issued to CCU defender, Justin White resulted in the Chants having to play with a man down for the rest of the game. Despite being a man short, the Chants were able to stay with Elon until a foul on Coastal in the defensive box with 5:03 left to play set up a penalty kick that gave the Phoenix the lead and eventually 2-1 win.

Saturdays contest at UNC Asheville turned out to be no better for the Chants and penalties once again turned out to be key.

A CCU foul in the 18-yard box in the 77th minute of play set up a UNCA penalty kick that resulted in a goal that put the Bulldogs up 1-0. Missed opportunities also plagued the Chants all game long.

With five minutes left, Coastal’s Frederick Frankman was alone with the ball in front of the UNCA goal but his shot from six yards out to potentially tie the game was too high. Shawn McCrae shot late in the game looked like it had a chance to go in the net but it was tipped away out of bounds. The tipped shot set up a CCU corner kick but the Chants failed to capitalize on their last opportunity and fell 1-0 to UNCA.

Coastal will be back in action Wednesday as they return home for Senior Day to host Campbell at 6pm.

Oreo Balls

By: Josh Fatzick
Editor in Chief

This recipe is super easy to make and looks fancy too!

What you’ll need:
• 1/2 Box of Oreo cookies
• 1 bag of baking chocolate
• 1/2 box of room temperature cream cheese
• Crushed up Heath bar or Butter finger

Directions:
First, divide your pack of Oreos in half. Throw them in a blender on the pulse setting. If you do not, the bottom cookies will become very small while the top cookies stay intact. I don’t have a blender so I just broke the cookies into fine chunks with my paws.

Now take your room temperature cream cheese and mix it all together. When it is finally done, it will be a large black mass of goodness, if you see white from the cream cheese mix a little bit more.

Now put the mixture into a zip lock bag and put it in the freezer for at least 10 minutes. When I first made this recipe, I did not freeze the mixture and they started falling apart. Try to avoid a cookie catastrophe! While your mixture sits in the freezer, set up a double broiler.

Get a pot about 1/4th or less full of water and throw in a dash of salt. Now you want it to get boiling. Not the sadistic hellish bubbles, but the very soft bubbles. Think of a happy lamb. Then get a glass bowl and set it on top of the boiling pot.

Pour about 1/8th of the milk chocolate in there and you will watch it slowly melt. Because the heat will become hotter when a bowl is on top of the pot, be careful that the chocolate doesn’t burn.

Now, make small balls with your hands and dip them in the chocolate with a toothpick or a fork. Set it on wax paper and repeat. Now, take your crushed candy bar and sprinkle it on your Oreo cookie balls!

Enjoy!
THE TOP 5
Famous Last Words

By: Samantha Riley
Features Editor

1. “It’s better to fade out than burn away.” – Kurt Cobain
   Best known as lead singer and guitarist of the band Nirvana, Kurt wrote these final words in a note addressed to an imaginary childhood friend before committing suicide in 1994. Cobain was only 27 years old.

2. “Either the wallpaper goes, or I do.” – Oscar Wilde
   Famous Irish writer and poet said this while lying on his deathbed in a cheap hotel in France.
   Although abandoned by all his friends for his controversial writing and homosexual relationship with Lord Alfred Douglass, Wilde was still able to get in one last zinger before dying of meningitis.

3. “Tomorrow, I shall no longer be here.” – Nostradamus
   Made famous for his predictions and prophecies, Nostradamus was reported to have said this to his secretary, Jean Chavigny. The French physician, astrologer, occultist and author of “Les Propheties” quite literally predicted his own death.

4. “Go away! Last words are for fools who haven’t said enough.” – Karl Marx
   While Marx was on his deathbed, his housekeeper asked if he had any profound or meaningful last thoughts. He screamed this ironic quote at her just before she ran from the room leaving him to die alone.

5. “Pardon me sir. I did not do it on purpose.” – Queen Marie Antoinette
   During the French Revolution, Queen Marie Antoinette and her husband King Louis XVI were sentenced to death. While she was on the scaffold seconds before her death, she unintentionally stepped on the foot of her executioner and apologized; right before he beheaded her.

NETFLIX PIX
The Internship

By: Josh Fatzick

Okay, so this one is not actually on Netflix, but it is hilarious.

The chemistry between Vince Vaughn and Owen Wilson was great in Wedding Crashers, and they are back together in this tale of two salesmen who lose their jobs unexpectedly and are left with nowhere to go.
Lacking any tangible skills in the new world of technology and smart phones, the two dinosaurs set out on a journey to find new jobs. But after a horrible stint working as a mattress salesman, Billy McMahon, played by Vaughn, rescues Nick Campbell and the two interview for an internship with Google.
After signing up for classes at the University of Phoenix Online, the two lie on their resumes and successfully baffle the online interviewers with their antics, all while bribing kids not to tell on them for using the library computers for too long.
Once they make it out to the Google campus in California, they make a not-so-great first impression and left to work in a group with the rest of the outcasts.
The rag-tag group, led by Nick and Billy, don’t really gel along at first, but with some encouragement from the duo they smooth things over throughout the movie.
As much as this movie will make you laugh, there is also a lesson to be learned.

MUSIC REVIEW
Arcade Fire
Reflektor

By: Josh Fatzick
Editor in Chief

One thing you can say about Arcade Fire is that they can bring emotions out of anybody. Whether you feel something.
Arcade Fire is one of those bands that doesn’t quite fit into a neat category. They’re somewhere in between the stadium rocking bands of years past and the obscure ‘I heard them first’ indie bands of the current hipster generation.
The double disc release, Reflektor, is separated not just by the physical discs, but also by the sound of the music on each of them. The two discs have very distinct moods.
The first is a mix of post-punk rock and 80’s dance music, with a charging sound that I’ve come to expect from Arcade Fire. The second disc is has a more laid back sound, and while there are still tunes for you to dance to, it is far slower in pace than the first disc, and even indulgent at times.
The title track of the album, Reflektor, is probably the best song on the album. It has everything you would expect from Arcade Fire, the caribbean-style rhythms, synth bass drops, and a thrilling breakdown to separate the madness.
There is no specific resolution on the album, and it feels like one of those classics that will mean completely things to everyone who listens to it. The only way to know will be to give it a listen for yourself.
HOROSCOPE

For November 4 - November 10, 2013

Strength comes from knowledge and belief in your ability to get things done in the coming month. Expressing what you want will initiate a positive flow of energy. Exploring different cultures and philosophies will hone your intuition.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
If you share your plans, you will attract interest in your ideas. Looking at old concepts from a modern point of view will renew your interest and refresh your energy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Think ahead today. Once you say something, you cannot take it back. Anger and aggressive behavior will cause uncertainty. Concentrate on making positive changes in your personal life.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Your dedication will not go unnoticed. Spend some time figuring out the best way to display your attributes in order to boost your confidence and help you win favors from the right people.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
Don’t share your secrets. If people question you, offer what is common knowledge and impress upon them your ability to be a team player. A romantic encounter will lift your spirits.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
You will have insight that will give you the upper hand when negotiating or discussing plans that can affect your position professionally or financially.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
Put your word on the line. Make promises and show everyone what you are capable of doing. Form a secret connection with someone who has something to offer in return.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
Stubbornness can hold you back. Open up and share your thoughts with someone who shows interest in helping you. Larger quarters or home improvements will add to your comfort.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
It’s time to take a risk with your heart. Ask direct questions and find out where you stand. A change of attitude may be unexpected but essential in order to take care of business.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
Your head will be swimming with all sorts of neat ideas. Don’t be afraid to step out on a limb and do something differently. Your imagination will capture someone’s attention.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
Don’t count on everyone agreeing with you. Persuasive tactics aren’t likely to work as well as expected. Set your sights on the things you can master, and travel to destinations that interest you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
You have a lot going for you, so don’t let negativity stand between you and success. Engage in talks and activities that lead to growth and happiness.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
How you handle your money will make a difference in the outcome of a relationship. Bringing in more than you spend or doing a little creative accounting will help alleviate stress.

WEEKEND BEST BETS

By: Demarcus McDowell

The school week brings its share of intensive assignments and Coastal students always anticipate fun weekend activities to end the inevitable stress of a grueling class schedule. This weekend offers a variety of events that can peak anyone’s interest.

The Coastal Women's Basketball team opens their 2013-2014 season competing against the Virginia Intermont Cobras on Saturday, November 9 beginning at 2 pm in the HTC Center Arena.

The ChantaTHON 2013 Fundraiser will begin on Friday, November 8 at 7 pm and end on Saturday, November 9 at 12 pm. The 17 hour event will be held in the Williams Brice Kimbel Arena and all proceeds go to the Children’s Miracle Network.

The Freeway Tour featuring dubstep masters Flux Pavilion, Skism, and Roksonix makes a stop at the House of Blues on Saturday, November 9 starting at 9:30 pm. This tour has been selling out venues across the US this year and has proven to be the largest electronic music show of 2013. Tickets are $25 in advance and $35 at the door. For more information about the show, contact the House of Blues at 843-272-3000.

Murphy’s Law Sports and Raw Bar will be hosting DJ Trivia on Thursday, November 7 beginning at 7:30 pm. A live DJ hosts a fun filled, interactive on screen trivia game. You and your team will play a live trivia game against other groups that have created teams to defeat you. Bring as many friends as you can to form the ultimate trivia team. It’s free to play and prizes are given to the winners.
