wait what?

Go ahead, take my money...

After requesting just $140 from an ATM at a bank in Maine last week, a man walked away with more than he bargained for when the machine spit out over $37,000 in cash.

Police in Maine said they responded to the malfunctioning ATM early Thursday morning after a woman called saying a man was spending an unusual amount of time waiting at the machine and stuffing cash into a shopping bag.

Officers found the man and all the money was returned to the bank. Bank officials aren’t going to press charges, but police are investigating the incident.

Don’t tread on me, man

A Colorado man is waging a war against police in Idaho after he says the police unfairly profiled him and searched his car for weed because of his license plate was from Colorado.

A lawsuit filed last week by the man, Darien Roseen in the District of Idaho, claims that while he was traveling through Idaho a state trooper used “license-plate profiling” to unlawfully detain him and search his truck.

After refusing the trooper’s request to search his car three times, the man finally had to let him search the car after the police officer said he smelled pot inside. He found nothing and the case will be going to court later this month.

It’s not Coastal, it’s another college

A professor at Lonestar College in Texas was supposed to teach an introductory-level chemistry class to a bunch of undergrads this semester. He didn’t quite do that.

Students quickly realized they were not doing so well in the class when they started getting 40’s on the tests and blanking on the quizzes.

Near the end of the class the professor, Shirley Nguyen, made a confession. She had been teaching the wrong class all semester. Instead of teaching the intro class, she was teaching an upper level class called General Chemistry. While they sound similar, they are very different classes.

LOL lottery

After winning the biggest-ever jackpot in California history, one man showed he had a sense of humor when he turned up to claim his $425 million prize on April Fool’s Day weeks later. He wore a Yoda t-shirt with the words “Luck of the Jedi I have” written on the front. He said he plans to set up a charity to help hungry and sick children with the winnings.
Tysons’ A Spacetime Odyssey

Guest Column By: Dylan Cordaro

On September 28th, 1980, astrophysicist Carl Sagan introduced the world to the wonders of science through a thirteen-part television series entitled Cosmos: A Personal Voyage. Carl Sagan and his series influenced countless viewers to pursue science for its mystery, its beauty, and its legacy. In 1996, Carl Sagan died at the age of 62. He has become a prominent name in science and inspired many scientists and freethinkers that you know of today.

On March 9th, 2014, astrophysicist Neil Tyson deGrasse invited us all back into the cosmos in a new series imagined by deGrasse, Seth MacFarlane, and Sagan’s widow Ann Druyan entitled Cosmos: A Spacetime Odyssey. It is essential to make everyone aware of science, says deGrasse because “[science] transforms who we are, how we live, and it gives us an understanding of our place in the universe.” Ann Druyan is excited to see this sequel-series kick off because she reflects that people in the 1980s were so excited to embrace science. Druyan admits that we’ve come through an “intense hostility to science, which we’re just coming out of.” Both deGrasse and Druyan agree that this resurgence of scientific investment will satisfy the “hunger for that feeling of being part of something greater than yourself and having a soaring spiritual experience without having to lie to yourself.” Every Sunday night, FOX invites you to explore the spectacular essence of science across the universe and time itself.

Though the series has received mostly positive feedback, the religious sector in the United States is not satisfied. Neil Tyson deGrasse, though claimed by irreligious people, does not want to pick fights with believers or nonbelievers. DeGrasse’s only goal in teaching science is to educate and amaze students. This honest man has found awe-inspiring beauty in the stars. He tells us in the very first episode that we are made from the stuff are stars. If that isn’t at least partially inspiring, I don’t know what is. The motives of the viewers vary, but Tyson just wants people to look up at the sky again with genuine curiosity.

Though it shouldn’t be a surprising lecture anymore, many were shocked and offended by Tyson describing how the Earth was formed over billions of years with the coming of humans through evolution and natural selection. Tyson tells the audience that evolution and other scientific theories that contradict religious dogma is nothing to fear. There is something magical and spiritual among the cosmos alone. Tyson also lets us know that evolution is as much a theory as gravity and although some answers in science may be uncomfortable to comprehend, they are nonetheless here to stay.

Check out Cosmos: A Spacetime Odyssey on FOX every Sunday at 9pm. Go online or to the National Geographic Channel to watch already-aired episodes. Be curious again. After all, most of what you are able to do every day of you life is because of science and inquiry.
Celebration of Inquiry kicks off

By: Samantha Riley
Features Editor

During the span of March 31st through April 3rd all classes at Coastal Carolina University were redirected to the 2014 Celebration of Inquiry. The Celebration of Inquiry is a four-day celebration that was founded by Coastal Carolina University professors Dr. Sara Sanders and Dr. Joan Piroch. The two wanted a way to showcase the interests and passions of the community while also commending them for their dedication to it. The first Celebration of Inquiry took place in 1999 with the purpose of praising the Coastal Carolina University community for their creative inquiry and creative expression. Each year there is a different theme that can pertain to everyone. This year’s theme stems from the quote by the actor, director and producer, George C. Scott. Scott said, “The human spirit is stronger than anything that can happen to it.” The celebration allows students, faculty, staff and community members the opportunity to present current research that they are working on. Everyone is encouraged to submit presentations or panel discussions to present them to their peers. This year’s celebration included a presentation by the 2014 HTC Distinguished Teacher-Scholar Lecturer, Terry F. Pettijohn II, as well as three plenary speaker presentations by Eric Brown, Winona LaDuke and Nikky Finney. Some of the past speakers the Celebration of Inquiry has been able to bring to Coastal includes Archbishop Desmond Tutu, Jean-Michel Cousteau, and Ray Kurzweil. The 2014 keynote address was given by none other than Joe Moglia, the head coach of Coastal Carolina University’s football team. Overcoming adversity to accomplish greatness is something he and the Chants are quite familiar with. As a coach, Moglia helped lead the Chanticleers to win the Big South Conference and advance to the third round of the playoffs. All of the presentations were organized along six different content areas including Arts and Humanities, Business and the Economy, Education and Human Development, Science & Technology, Ethics and the Environment and Society and Gender. The extensive content areas allotted room for everyone in the community to present something they are passionate about. The celebration was divided into different events including speakers, an open panel, a research competition and presentations. For the undergrad research competition, there were presentations from every department at Coastal. While Jacob Wade, a Marine Science major gave an oral presentation about the sex determination of bottlenose dolphins from dorsal fin photogrammetry, English major Jennifer Butler presented on Renaissance literature. Butler stressed the importance of the Celebration of Inquiry and said “I wanted to not only share my research, but I wanted to show that literary research is just as engaging and valuable as any other field. Who knows what this type of research might inspire in the future and what might be discovered?” While students are able to see different research going on within our institution, it is also beneficial to our community because it has given Coastal the opportunity to host hundreds of presentations by faculty, staff, students, and community members. Junior Courtney Mullis presented on Tuesday April 1st during an open panel alongside her partners Dexter Gore, Owen MacLeod and Patrick Siebel on Existentialist Literary Theory. “I liked being able to apply some of the research I was already doing for my honors capstone class to a paper,” said Mullis. “I was glad to get experience presenting at a conference.” Many of Coastal Carolina’s own faculty and staff presented in the inquiry as well. Scott Pleasant who is the Writing Center Coordinator and Joe Oestreich who teaches creative writing are collaborating on a book about the 1989 Football boycott that took place right here in Conway. The book entitled “Lines of Scrimmage: A Story of Football, Race and Redemption” was picked up by the University press of Mississippi and the tentative projected publishing date is June 1st of this year, marking the 25th anniversary of the boycott. Their presentation covered the process of researching information for the book and the things they discovered along the way. The Celebration of Inquiry was not limited to showcasing just academic research it also featured the musical talents of, The Songwriters of the Strand Festival; which celebrated local songwriters and singers, and the David Bankston and Friends concert, which included music by Professor Bankston as well as other musicians.

Coastal SGA looks to ban Vemma sales on campus

By: Samantha Bergold
Staff Writer

A proposed bill is being created to ban multi-level marketing companies from contacting, holding events, and advertising on Coastal’s campus.

Multi-level marketing is a business strategy used where the participants get compensation not only for products they sell, but from what participants below them sell. The bill proposes that many companies are misleading students into paying for their products or services. According to the bill, statistics show that more than 99% of people participating in multi-level marketing lose money. “I’m not saying our students won’t be allowed to join them, the companies just won’t be able to advertise and hold events on our campus,” said Alessandro Mannino. He is sponsoring the proposed bill and the current President Pro Tempore in the SGA.

Vemma is a company on Coastal’s campus that uses multilevel marketing. You may have seen them recruiting on Prince Lawn or in the laundry rooms of Ingle and Eaglin Halls.

Vemma’s mission statement is “to help others by enhancing their well-being and offering an income stream to people who introduce others to a product line they believe in.”

The founder and CEO of Vemma is BK Boreyko. Boreyko believes Vemma can enhance peoples live by fixing their financial and health problems. He says the product will help you become healthier and happier.

“I was a normal kid going to Coastal and skeptical when I heard about the product because I thought it was to good to be true. I got involved and realized the company is doing what people in our generation already do, promoting products by word of mouth,” said Jeremy Hucks, a former Coastal student who currently sells Vemma.

He started his Vemma team with six of his closest friends and it has now grown to more than 350 people. They make their money from sales volume and only promote Vemma to friends, not strangers.

“Vemma is what you put into the company. You don’t buy a gym membership and get mad when you don’t have abs, but you never go to the gym.”

The bill will be presented at the meeting tonight. If the bill is passed, Coastal will inform students about multi-level marketing companies and impose laws banning companies who use multi-leveling to contact students.

Rap battle shines spotlight on artists at Coastal

Last Thursday WCCU radio presented “Who Got Next?” A freestyle battle for aspiring rap artists.

The event was put together by Efi Graham, a senior graduating in December with a bachelor’s degree in Mass Communications and minor in Journalism. She organized this event to go towards her senior project.

Efi is the business manager for WCCU radio and wanted to create this event to correlate her love and ear for the art of rap music with the student body. Each individual that participated in the event had to do a preliminary audition to secure their spot.

The winner for the freestyle event competed against 4 other freestyler’s in order to claim the title. The winner of the rap battle event competed against 4 other artists to secure this title.

Both of these winners will have their song played on the WCCU radio and have a sit down interview on the popular radio show ‘Keeping Up’ which can be heard Monday, Wednesdays, and Fridays from 1-2pm and Real Teal Radio which airs Wednesdays from 7-8pm.

Efi’s hope for the event was to shed some light on the music scene at CCU.

“I wanted the audience to enjoy the hidden talents at Coastal Carolina. The purpose of this event was to put WCCU radio on the map and promote independent artists, to give something different to CCU,” she said.

Greek community to expand

By: Kelley McDonnell
Asst Editor

Coming Fall 2014, Coastal Carolina will see one new sorority and one new fraternity on campus.

As far as the new sorority goes, Panhellenic is still going through the process of choosing the newest organization to join our campus. They have it narrowed down to three and the chosen one should be announced before this semester is over. This is, however, the first time they have opened for expansion in four years.

As for the fraternity, Pi Kappa Alpha, also known as “Pike” will be rejoining Coastal’s Greek Community after being off for about seven years.

“There are no brothers left on campus, so a nationals advisor of expansion comes down to locate local alumni and forms an advisor committee to help recruit on campus,” said Tyler Van Moppes, FSL Student Coordinator.

These new organizations will be completely ready to go come the fall semester and will be able to participate in the recruitment process.

“I think it’s a great idea to add to the community because it allows more people to get connected and involved around campus,” said Ansley Sutton, member of Alpha Delta Pi.

With these new organizations joining Coastal’s campus, the current organizations now have more of a variety to chose from when planning fundraisers or attending philanthropy events.

Keep an eye out for these new organizations set to join us in the fall semester.

Chants end week with win over Asheville

By: Sierra Doherty

The Chants got the game started Tuesday night against the Citadel with two runs in the second inning when Connor Owings and Kyle Jackson were batted home by Riley Norton and Nick Oberg. The Chants kept their lead over the Bulldogs until the sixth and seventh innings, where the Citadel was able to tie the game. An extra inning was played, where the Bulldogs scored one more run, ending the game with a final score of 3-2, the Citadel.

Wednesday’s game against UNC Wilmington started off well with two runs in the first inning, scored by Owings (RBI G.K. Young) and Michael Paez (RBI Zach Remillard), and another run in the second inning scored by John McNulty. Wilmington matched Coastal’s score with two runs in the fifth and one in the sixth. The Chants pulled ahead with one run, scored by Oberg (RBI Owings), in the ninth inning, but, unfortunately, the Seahawks scored two runs, making the final score 5-4, UNCW.

Tyler Herb earned his fifth straight win against UNC Asheville on Friday night. Steven Whitaker started the game with a run in the first inning, batted in by Remillard. The Chants’ lead was short lived when the Bulldogs scored four runs on a grand slam by Pete Guy. The Chants made an effort to catch up in the second inning with two runs, scored by Colin Hering (RBI Oberg) and Paez (RBI Reid Moman), but Asheville increased their lead with three runs in the bottom of the second. Coastal tied the game in the fourth inning with one run scored by Paez (RBI Moman) and a three run double, hit by Owings, that batted home Moman, Oberg, and Young. The Chants extended their lead with one run in the fifth, scored by Tyler Chadwick (RBI Paez), and one run in the ninth, scored by Owings (RBI Hering), ending the game with a score of 9-7.

The Chants return to TicketReturn.com field to face Presbyterian on April 17.

The Chanticleers traveled to Wilmington, N.C., on Wednesday for a double-header against UNC Wilmington, and returned to Conway on Saturday for a double-header against their arch-rivals, Liberty.

The Chanticleers started Wednesday off with a 2-1 victory in game one before they fell in game two by the same score.

UNCW struck first in game one in the bottom of the first inning and kept the usually score-happy Chanticleers in check until the sixth inning.

Kasey Oliver’s lead-off single to right-centerfield in the top of the sixth put the tying run on base for Coastal and Bri Chiusano’s bunt on the Chanticleer’s next at-bat went for an infield single that allowed Oliver to take second base. Kiana Quolas’ sacrifice fly-ball put Oliver in scoring position at third and Chiusano at second. Kory Hayden was able to drive Oliver and Chiusano home one batter later after her short pop-up to centerfield bounced off the glove of the UNCW second baseman.

Quolas was the game’s winning pitcher and finished the game with five strikeouts, one run - allowed on three hits, and one walk.

In game two, Wilmington once again put the first run on the board in the bottom of the first inning and kept Coastal scoreless until the top of the sixth.

Pinch-runner, Courtney Howell, scored the Chanticleers’ only run of the game when she crossed home plate on a wild pitch. Wilmington broke the 1-1 tie in the bottom of the ninth with an RBI single that gave them their first victory over CCU in 11 games.

The Chanticleers were able to bounce back from the Wilmington loss and return to their high-scoring ways in Saturday’s double-header sweep of Liberty.

After taking game one 5-1, the Chanticleers carried their momentum into game two and stomped the Flames 10-2.

Morgan Noad’s RBI single and Amanda Daneker’s two-run homerun in the bottom of the first gave the Chanticleers an early 3-0 lead. Liberty put two runs on the board in the top of the third to get within one run, but Kory Hayden’s solo-shot out of the park in the bottom of the inning gave the Chants a 4-2 advantage. The Chanticleers racked up four more runs in the fourth inning and added two more in the sixth inning to seal the deal.

Hayden’s homerun in game two of Saturday’s double-header makes her season total 14 and gives her 44 for her career. She needs one more to become Coastal’s all-time homerun leader.

The Chanticleers will be back in action at home this Tuesday when they face off against Charleston Southern in a double-header. The Chanticleers will also travel to Clinton, S.C., for a series against Presbyterian.

Women’s Cross-Country Team sets record in Big South Championship

By: Laurel Nusbaumer
Staff Writer

The Women’s Cross Country Team were led to a conference-record 13th Big South Championship win two weeks ago thanks to sophomore Letitia Saayman, the individual champion at the Vista Links Golf Course.

Saayman recorded her third first-place victory of the season in the Women’s 5k race with a course record time of 17:46:86; Saayman set the penultimate course record time at 18:18:00 at the Big South Preview.

This first-place finish earned Saayman the title of the 2013 Big South Runner of the Year as well as all-conference honors.

Kyla van Graan, Saayman’s teammate and fellow South African native, placed second overall of the 94 runners with a personal-record time of 17:53:40, annihilating her previous time of 19:02:00 on the course. Van Graan was named the 2013 Freshman of the Year and earned herself a spot on the all-conference team with her second-place finish.

Coastal’s seniors rounded up the remainder of the top five Chanticleers to come in, reinforcing the first-place victory as well as providing great individual efforts in the last conference championship of their collegiate careers.

Emily Marchini placed 10th overall with a time of 18:56:40, followed by Shelby Nicosia who took the 11th place spot at 18:57:31. Janel Reeves crossed over less than a minute later with an overall time of 19:48:24 and a 32nd place finish.

Coastal’s win marks the first Big South Championship victory for the Chanticleer women since 2008. In addition to Coastal’s victories, Coach Alan Connie was named the Big South Conference’s 2013 Coach of the Year amongst women’s teams and it is the 13th such honor for the 27-year head coach.

Women’s Lacrosse team falls to Longwood

By: Laurel Nusbaumer
Staff Writer

The Chanticleers (3-8, 1-1) sacrificed seven first-half goals to the Longwood Lancers (4-7, 1-0) in Friday’s 13-9 conference loss.

Coastal started with an early advantage over the Lancers, but a four-goal streak by Longwood halfway through the first half gave the Lancers a strong lead that they protected for the rest of the game.

The Lancers held a 6-4 lead at halftime after outshooting Coastal in the first half, 10-9.

During the second half, the Lancer’s offense continued to weigh heavily on Coastal’s defense by scoring the first two goals of the half and by pressuring Coastal goalie Jenna Stover from the keeper’s goal in favor of Trista Kuehn.

For the remainder of the game, the two teams traded goals, which allowed the Lancer’s to keep pace of their slight lead.

Kacey Norwood pushed Longwood’s offense with her five goals. Norwood leads the Lancers with 26 goals this season. Six saves were made by Longwood’s Christian Acker.

Freshman, Alicia Geiter, paced the Chants offensively with her three goals, while sophomores Keri White and Rachel Waldron scored two goals each for the second consecutive game.

Coastal and Longwood finished the game with 21 shots on each side. The Lancers held a 28-22 advantage in ground balls while Coastal ruled in the center circle by winning 17 of the 24 draw controls.

The Chants will host High Point, the defending Big South champions, on Sunday. The opening draw is scheduled for 2:00 PM at Brooks Stadium.

Most visited food places to CCU Students

By: Kelley Grace McDonnell

1. Cookout
   - We’ve all been there, whether it was because you only had a few more quarters you could scrape up to get a famous Cookout tray, or go there with everyone else at 1 am in the morning after you “finish your work at the library,” everyone who goes inside Cookout ends up staying for at least an hour or it doesn’t count.

2. Tropical Smoothie Cafe
   - The greatest place to go during your one-hour class break to pick up a quick smoothie or salad to keep you going for the rest of the day. Also a great place to go to have a quick meeting or catch up with someone in the light and comfortable vibe.

3. Moe’s Southwest Grill
   - “Welcome to Moe’s,” music to everyone’s ears. Although you may be one of those people who need to be in the mood for Mexican food, when you are Moe’s definitely hits the spot. With the fun and laid back atmosphere, it’s a great place to go with friends and grab some cheap dinner without stooping to Cookout’s level and without rising to Olive Garden’s.

4. Jade Hibachi
   - Everyone knows the best part about Jade is not necessarily the quality of the food, but the fact that they deliver. Although you may have to purchase a certain amount and wait for what seems like forever, if that means not getting out of my bed, count me in.

5. Sonic
   - Because Chick Fil A is too far away, Sonic serves as a great alternative mostly because of their half priced 2-4pm happy hour (my favorite being a Cherry Limeade,) and their location on 544 and 501.

Shakira - Self Titled

By: Hallie Bonds
Staff writer

The Colombian sultry sensation Shakira released her tenth studio album recently entitled Shakira. Shakira’s last English-language album was She Wolf which released in 2009. Shakira was originally set to release Shakira on an earlier date but was set back due to her pregnancy.

“Can’t Remember to Forget You” is the second track on the album which features the world renowned pop artist Rihanna. Sitting at 28 on Billboard’s Top 100, this track is infused with the feeling of a rock band and a reggae group all in one. Shakira and Rihanna’s vocals impress any listeners and might just have you playing the air guitar.

The eighth track on the album entitled “Medicine” features the successful country music star Blake Shelton. "Medicine" gives you a completely different taste with the feeling of a country song. Blake and Shakira’s voices complement each other very well in this duo. This track shows a completely different side to the Latin singer Shakira.

Ending the album, the 11th track “Nunca Me Acudero de Olvidarte” is a Spanish-language version of “Can’t Remember to Forget You” without Rihanna and the 12th track “Loca por Ti” has a country-rock feel, for all of her Latin fans around the world.

Shakira shows her love for multiple genres in this album, and how her voice can work with any type of instrument and still sound beautiful.
