Cordaro Faux News: First-Year calls Professor ‘Mom’, college experience ruined

BY: DYLAN CORDARO
STAFF WRITER

Before October had the chance to season Coastal’s campus, one freshman now believes his life at CCU is out for the count. Thursday, after a stressful ENGL 101 exam, Coastal student Zack Magee called his Spanish professor ‘mom.’ It was hilarious but also very embarrassing for the first-year student hailing from Boston, Massachusetts. Magee swore to his peers that his brain had quitted in his previous class. Not really caring enough about the situation, his peers just kind of played into the idea that he meant it. Magee commented that his college career was over and that not even the Student Union’s grand opening could save it.

“I was too tired, ya know? That exam at 11:00am just fried my brain,” said Magee on Sunday while eating a hearty breakfast at Hicks Dining Hall. “You should try writing about Oedipus Rex for an exam and not calling anyone ‘mom’ for the rest of the day. Oh who am I kidding? After two months, my college career is over.” According to YouTube sensation and celebrity Apparently Kid, none of the other twenty students in Magee’s English class apparently called any of their professors ‘mom.’

As alone as Magee believes himself to be, Counseling Services at CCU noted that almost 45% of all students accidentally call their professors names like ‘mom,’ ‘Charles Xavier,’ and ‘Ned.’ In Clemson last year, an Art Major by the name of Bethany West called her professor ‘dad.’ Within a month of the incident, everyone forgot about it and West ended up finishing that year with high marks and a positive attitude. Just kidding, her life was ruined and she wasn’t able to get good grades never ever again.

Whoever said that life has no reason or rhyme is absolutely correct. To Zack Magee, we salute you. You’ll get over this mess (or you may not ever, ever, ever) because we at The Chanticleer Newspaper are sure that laughing at the small things in life is a sure way to keep stress from consuming your beautiful soul.

BREAKING NEWS: Leaked information from last weekend’s football game says that Magee was caught calling his roommate, a staff member, and even Chauncey ‘mom’ which brings up the theory that maybe he just thinks that everyone looks like his mother. This is Dylan for Faux News, keep it classy, Coastal.

Dear Chauncey

Need advice on how to handle your daily struggle? Ask Chauncey! You can submit questions anonymously on our ask.fm/TheChanticleer page and your questions could be answered in the next issue. Advice will be given by your fellow peers anonymously.

Dear Chauncy, my dorm room is cramped, and I feel like I'm suffocating. What can I do to make it feel more like home?

When living in a new place sometimes it can take a while for the space to feel like home. Bring items from your home, that will make the place feel more cozy. Instead of buying that new comforter, bring in the favorite one for your home. Get rid of items that make the space feel cramped. Do a little fall cleaning and get rid of all the extra items in your room. If you have not used it or worn it all semester, it’s time for it to go.

Get everything organized! If you have all your belongings scattered around, the room will never feel like home. Look up do it yourself projects on Pinterest. There are many ideas on there on how to make a small space feel cozy. This distraction will also help if you are feeling homesick.

Dear Chauncy, my boyfriend has been wearing a fanny pack around, and I can’t get him to take it off. He says “its cool” and his friends are supporting him. What can I do to get that horrible thing off his body?

Sometimes people we love will make choices that we do not agree with. Being open and honest with your boyfriend is the first step. Tell him how wearing this item makes you feel. If he still does not understand, try to get his friends on your side. They may be able to see why you disagree with him making this fashion choice.

If you still cannot convince him, tell him what you’re afraid of. If you’re afraid he will be bullied or look silly from this fashion choice, let him know. Paint a picture in his mind of what you think will be a reality from him wearing the fanny pack. Maybe you think this fashion choice ages him and you want him to go back to the person who you first met. Letting him know these things may make a difference.

If all else fails, wear something that he does not like and do not take it off until he takes the fanny pack off!

Dear Chauncy, I’m in a casual relationship with a great guy, but I know it’s not going anywhere. There is someone else (a friend of mine) I am also interested in, and we’ve flirted, but I’m not sure if we would make it as a couple. Should I cut my losses and try to be with my friend?

If you feel that a relationship is not going in the direction you want it to go, then you should end it. You should be honest and tell that person how you feel. You should not string some along just because it is convenient or because you are lonely. Ending one relationship before you start another will let you have a clean slate.

Moving a friendship to a romantic relationship can be difficult. You need to decide if it is more important to stay friends or try a relationship. If the relationship does not work out, you may never be able to have that friendship again. Your friend could be feeling the same way as you. He/she may be interested, but is worried about the outcome. Decide what feels right to you, then go for it.

Dear Chauncy, I’m stressed out and can’t seem to get ahead on my schoolwork. How do I keep myself ahead of the game in school?

Everyone gets stressed out in college, especially with midterms coming up and projects being due. Sometimes it seems that no matter what we do, we can never get ahead. Getting organized is the first step. If you are doing a bunch of things at once, nothing will get done. You need to organize when everything is due, manage your time, and complete the work according to the date its due.

You may have to much on your plate. You need to decide what is really important. School, work, and extra activities can make you overwhelmed. Sometimes we do things for other people, instead of doing what needs to be done for ourself. Cut out things you do not need in your life and your stress will decrease.

Make time for yourself. Constantly working and not getting rest will over work yourself. Make sure your are relaxing. Meditate, go the gym, or see a movie. This will help lower your stress level and everything will seem easier to complete.

Dear Chauncey, How do you tell someone that you’re in love with them even though they only consider you a friend?

Telling someone how you feel about them is very hard. You want to change a relationship from a friendship to a partnership, but there can be many repercussions from doing so.

One scenario is that they may be interested in you as more than a friend as well. This is great! Everyone’s happy in the end, and telling the truth was worth it. This is not always the case though. They may not be having those same romantic feelings that you have. After you tell them, the friendship could be uncomfortable and not the same as it used to be.

You have to make a decision and decide what matters to you more, telling your secret or keeping your friendship?

When trying to move a friendship to a romantic relationship, you may want to reconsider by starting off the conversation by telling them that you love them. This can be extremely uncomfortable and awkward for both parties involved.
Syd Mead’s Art Exhibit brings the future to Coastal

From now until October 18th the “Syd Mead: Progressions” art exhibit will be on display in the Rebecca Randall Bryan Art Gallery in the Edwards Building.

The showcased artist, Syd Mead’s uses a unique combination of the future, function and his artistic talent to create his pieces.

Using his love of transportation and combining it with his eye for the future, many of Mead’s designs include futuristic technology ranging from the Ford Motor Company and Bugattis all the way down to yachts. As he delved into his career as an artist he continued drawing things related to technology such as Sony Cameras and futuristic cartoons.

Some of these designs were used in current and prominent science fiction films seen today like TRON, Elysium, Blade Runner, Time Cop, Short Circuit, Aliens, Johnny Mnemonic and Star Trek. Mead’s art was appealing for the movie industry because of his exemplary talent to visualize the future.

Mead graduated from the Art Center College of Design in Pasadena, California in the 1950s. After that, he dedicated some time to illustrating books and catalogues as well as producing futuristic and innovative designs for several large corporations.

For many of these companies he focused on creating interior and exterior architectural designs for futuristic films as well as television...
Branching off from the film industry, Mead took his talent a step further and worked for major Japanese clients such as Minolta, and Honda. He also helped design the Japanese toy icons “The New Yamato” as well as many of the futuristic characters in the “Turn-A Gundam” series.

This exhibit has traveled across the United States from Glendale, California to New York City, New York. The unique collection of work showcases his most recent work as well as work that Mead had done during his time at the Art Center College of Design. The exhibit covers more than 50 years of his work.

Coastal Carolina University is just one stop on this grand tour’s list. The exhibit has future exhibitions planned for European venues including France, Germany and the U.K. This event is free and open to the public.

CCU hosts a day of action to raise emergency preparation awareness

BY: KYLE JORDAN
EDITOR IN CHIEF

With midterms in full swing, preparing for an emergency situation is probably not the first thing on students’ minds these days, but the harsh reality is that such situations can happen anywhere at any given time and it never hurts to be ready for them.

In order to raise the level of emergency preparation awareness on campus, Coastal Carolina University hosted its first ever PrepareAthon last Tuesday, September 30th. The PrepareAthon is a nationwide, federal event that was assembled by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) and it occurs in the month of September each year in honor of National Preparedness Month. The event serves to teach people how to survive in dangerous situations such as wildfires, hurricanes, earthquakes, and floods.

This year’s CCU PrepareAthon was coordinated by the University’s Management Director, Carissa Medeiros. The event was open to all CCU students and faculty, and it lasted from 10:00am until 2:00pm on Prince Lawn. The PrepareAthon featured various agencies from the Conway-Myrtle Beach area including the National Weather Service, CCU First-Response, Horry County Sheriff’s Office, and even a Bomb Squad. Anyone who attended was offered the opportunity to learn and apply emergency response actions, use emergency equipment, and pick up some free food and handouts along the way.

Medeiros said that her goals for the CCU PrepareAthon were to show students how to be prepared for emergency situations and to help students feel comfortable interacting with emergency response officials.

“I really wanted this event to be two-fold,” said Medeiros.

“I wanted students to learn how to be more prepared and know what all goes into an emergency kit, and I wanted them to be comfortable interacting with these agencies and first responders because many times people get overwhelmed when they see lights, hear sirens, and see people in uniforms. So, I thought it would be a great opportunity for students to interact with people who could be responding to something that happened on campus at any moment,” said Medeiros.

Those who attended the PrepareAthon also got the chance to participate in a Scavenger Hunt and while doing so, create their own emergency kit. Participants were given a list of items that one would need to survive such as food, water, and medicine. Each of the items were located at the various agency booths and participants had to find out which agencies had which items. As they interacted with the agency representatives and found out where the items were, the participants wrote down where they found the items on designated spots on their lists. Once all of the items were found, participants could exchange their lists for a free tee-shirt.

Medeiros says that she hopes to make the PrepareAthon an annual event at CCU because of the potential lessons people can learn from attending it.

More information about the PrepareAthon can be found at ready.gov/prepare.

Market of America offers beneficial and convenient opportunities

Market of America & SHOP.COM Overview

BY: KYLE JORDAN
EDITOR IN CHIEF

Any full-time student who also has a job will tell you that the struggle can get real.

You come home from a long day of classes after probably being up all night from working and studying, but you can’t stay home or go to sleep because guess what? Life is not free, bills don’t pay themselves, and most stay-at-home jobs still require a college degree.

Luckily for college students, there are companies such as Market of America that offer stay at home job opportunities that don’t require a degree to get started.

Market of America is an internet marketing company that specializes in one-to-one marketing and social shopping. Some of the products they sell are household cleaning supplies, jewelry, personal care products, auto care, and cosmetics. The company was founded in 1992 and has employed roughly 700 people from around the globe. The company also has partnerships with many big-name stores such as Macy’s, Walmart, and Home Depot.

Market of America calls itself an “Unfranchise,” meaning that they pay their entrepreneurs and owners rather than charging them a franchise fee. All Market of America Entrepreneurs and Unfranchise Owners operate their own shop.com website that they use to sell their products and manage their sales.

Two CCU students have found themselves opportunities with Market of America. Serena Solomon, an undeclared freshman from upstate New York, and Lexi Wheeler, a sophomore communication major from Long Island, N.Y., are business partners and Unfranchise Owners of Market America. Solomon and Wheeler both specialize in selling cosmetic products.

Solomon says that there are three primary ways that one can make money with Market of America.

“One way we get paid is by cashback. The second way, is by people buying products through either our stores or partner stores, or you also have two legs under you that you could use as additional distributors and whatever they sell will flow up to you,” said Solomon.

Both Solomon and Wheeler say that Market of America is a convenient way to make money because people can work from just about anywhere and they don’t suffer financially if they have a low sales period.

“When you are at a certain level in the company (Market of America), your income keeps growing. It doesn’t stop,” said Wheeler. “With a lot of other multi-level marketers such as Mary Kay and VEMMA, when you stop selling, your income stops completely.”

Organization of the Week – MOGA

If you haven’t heard of the MOGA club, don’t fret because we have you covered. This organization is dedicated to all things meditation and yoga. Not experienced in either? MOGA welcomes anyone and everyone to come out any morning Monday through Friday and select afternoons to relax and learn standard meditation and yoga. The club welcomes anyone to stop by whenever they can. To better suit everyone interested, the club holds several sessions per week and is open to having participants even lead sessions or request certain exercises/practices. There is no entrance fee and everything is voluntary.

MOGA was kicked back up this semester by Coastal seniors Anthony Carrone and David Terry after the club was inactive last year. Both students are passionate about meditation and mindfulness and so they took the opportunity to work with Dr. Ron Green to revive the MOGA club. Past and present members will meet out on Prince Lawn or in classrooms, and they are hoping to host meditation sessions at the beach on Friday nights.

“We know the beach idea will go over well, so we are excited to make that a reality very soon” says Carrone. Terry and Carrone have background knowledge in meditation and they hope to show other students that while it is fun and relaxing, there are also associated health benefits.

The club’s sessions are sure to relieve stress and encourage mindfulness. To encourage stronger ties between members, Terry believes future events like camping, cookouts, poetry readings, and beach days would be helpful. As well as connecting with campus, MOGA will be working with outside organizations including TAWC (To A Worthy Cause) to set up clothes drives. Carrone also would like to reach out to the Meher Baba Spiritual Center in North Myrtle Beach for the occasional field trip and other projects.

Anthony Carrone expects to graduate this December and is also working on research involving meditation techniques. He is very passionate about the subject and will be using this ongoing research project as his capstone.

“A lot of people don’t realize the benefits of meditation,” said Carrone. “I can’t say much, but my project hopefully helps students see how it affects thinking in general. I know it has definitely benefitted me.”

To contact Carrone or Terry, you can visit MOGA’s Coastal Connections page and their Facebook page. Go get your meditation on!
Coastal escapes the wrath of Furman for a 20T win

BY: MADISON WARREN
STAFF WRITER

De‘Angelo Henderson scored three times throughout the game, including the 17-yard touchdown reception to the #3 Chanticleers a 37-31 double-overtime victory at Furman. This marks the second time that Coastal has needed an overtime to win at Paladin Stadium against Furman. Henderson finished with 161 yards, rushing 20 times for 134 yards and two scores and hauling two passes for 27 yards, including the game winner. Alex Ross also had a shining night, completing 15-of-24 passes for 205 yards and three touchdowns while he rushed for 85 yards, giving him total 1,000 yards in his collegiate football career.

The game was back and forth from the very beginning, however, Coastal Carolina’s offense clicked from the start as we only needed nine plays to cover 80 yards and take an early 7-0 lead. Furman answered back quickly with an impressive 19-play, 81-yard drive that took nine minutes off the clock; however, the drive ended in no points.

However, Furman did not go scoreless for long as they scored with five minutes left in the second quarter. The Chants fired back with Henderson scoring a touchdown with only two minutes left in the half, making the final score at the half 14-7.

Henderson did not disappoint in the third quarter as he scored a touchdown on the opening kick off giving the Chants a two-touchdown lead.

Furman scored two more touchdowns in reply thanks to a bad snap on fourth down by Coastal for a loss of 27 yards.

The Chanticleers regained the lead when Ross made an impressive scramble and run on third and eight for a gain of 16 yards. Henderson followed with another 35-yard gain, answered by an added third down conversion. Then on third and goal from the two yard line, Ross found Thomas Pauciello for a touchdown making the score 28-21.

Again Furman answered back evening the playing field 28-28 going into overtime.

In the first overtime Alex Catron made a 40-yard field goal. Furman came close to scoring a game winning touchdown, but was held back and forced to make a field goal, tying the game up once again 31-31. Furman had the ball first in the second overtime, but Calvin Hollenhorst made a key tackle forcing the ball over to the Chants, eventually leading Henderson to the game-winning touchdown.

This win improved Coast to 6-0 for the season. The Chants hit the road again to face Presbyterian at 2 P.M. Saturday, October 11.

Women's soccer clenches another 2OT win

BY: MADISON WARREN
STAFF WRITER

The Coastal Carolina women's soccer team caused another dramatic ending as freshman Brenna Leftwich scored the only goal of the game in the second overtime to lead to a Chant win over High Point, 1-0.

After winning the ball off a throw-in, Damiella Famili kicked a ball up the right side for Kacey Kelley to chase down deep into the Panther's defense. Kelly then delivered a perfect cross into the six-yard box and Leftwich finished the run off with a goal in the top left of the net.

Kelley, who entered the game leading the Big South in goals, came close to scoring three times in the first 32 minutes of the game, but the High Point defense did not let her through.

High Point's best chance of the first half came with just over a minute and half left of play on a free kick that went straight over the goal.

Both teams were unable to generate consistent offensive power during the foul-filled game. Coastal had the greatest chances in the first half while the Panthers had the greatest chances in the second.

High Point finished with a 19-12 shot advantage, but the Panther's couldn't find the net. Both teams totaled 37 fouls and three corner kicks.

The drama filled win improved Coastal to a perfect 3-0 record in the Big South Conference for the first time since 2008.

The Lady Chants remain at home to face Presbyterian College on Wednesday starting at 6 p.m.
Chants breeze past NCSU 3-1

BY: LAUREL NUSBAUMER
SPORTS EDITOR

The Chanticleers finished at North Carolina State University with a 3-1 victory thanks to a goal in the first half by Tommy Gudmundsson and two by Sergio Camargo around the 3 minute mark of the second. This was the first time Camargo saw a multi-scoring game since last season’s quarterfinals of the Big South Tournament against Winthrop.

The Wolfpack started the game strong with a heavy attack on the offensive, but Coastal withstood and maintained composure as CCU took control of the possession and added great pressure against NCSU’s backline and goalkeeper. Gudmundsson was finally able to score at the 15:58 mark with a header finding its way to the back of the net. Teammate Ricky Garbanzo set him up for this with a corner kick serving the ball into the six-yard box.

CCU maintained the better part of the offensive possession for the rest of half with five corner kicks and six shot attempts.

Camargo was able to steady the lead for the Chants within the first 22 seconds of play into the second half. Teammate Bryce Follensbee assisted Camargo with a pass toward the left side of the box. Camargo set himself up for the goal by taking a touch then launching the ball into the right corner of the net off of a left-footed kick.

During the 49th minute of play, the Camargo and Follensbee duo proved to be harmonious for the second time. After beating his defender to the right corner, Follensbee delivered a cross to Camargo on the right side of the box. Camargo took a quick touch to score an easy goal on the far side.

The first time the Wolfpack created a real shot attempt in the 52nd minute served as no threat to the Chants as Travis Wannemuehler’s attempt ricocheted across the goal mouth after hitting the left post.

NCSU was able to earn a goal back seven minutes later. In the 59th minute, Wannemuehler redeemed himself with a quick tap in off of teammate Nick Surkamp’s assist.

Since the all-time series started in 1981, this win served as Coastal’s first against NCSU in four attempts. This victory placed the Chanticleers to 2-1 against Atlantic Coast Conference opponents since the 2013 season.

The Chants will take on Presbyterian at home as a Big South Conference match at 6:00 P.M. on October 7th.

BLACK THAI

BY: LAUREL NUSBAUMER
SPORTS EDITOR

Black Thai, a small restaurant and bar located at 710 Main St., Myrtle Beach, provides a taste of Thailand for everyone. Their appetizers and entrees range from sweet and sour to spicy, allowing people of all taste buds the chance to fall in love with at least one menu item.

Open for both lunch and dinner, BlackThai's menu will satisfy any sort of appetite. Some of the restaurant's specialties include Crispy Chicken with Ginger, Steamed Grouper in Seafood Soy Sauce, Black Thai Angels (steamed chicken and shrimp with peanut sauce), and Black Thai Imperial Duck.

Though Black Thai's specialties are a little eccentric, there are plenty of traditional items on the menu as well, including general hibachi options, spring rolls, pad thai (fried rice noodles with eggs, bean sprouts, scallions and crushed peanuts), pad see ewe (fried rice noodles with eggs, Asian broccoli, carrots in Thai soy sauce), and drunken noodle (stir fried rice noodles with eggs, chili, bell peppers, Bamboo shoots, tomatoes and basil leaves). All entrees may be made with your choice of vegetables, chicken, fried tofu, beef, pork or shrimp.

For our Chanticleers who are 21 and older, Black Thai offers an immense variety of specialty mixed drinks as well as a wide range of wines and cocktails.

Black Thai is just as aesthetically pleasing as the name sounds. Not only does the name fit the chalky black color of the building, but the inside is gorgeous as well. The bar and restaurant are decorated with eloquent light fixtures, traditional Thai ornaments, and is completely decked out with miniature elephants. The atmosphere is casual enough for a relaxing night of appetizers with the gang, yet eloquent enough to bring a date to.

The service at Black Thai comes second to none. Not only do the kind servers engage with diners on a personal level, but they make it a point to visit the table frequently enough to ensure your drink never runs dry. The wait time for your order is held at a minimum as well, yet the dishes are always cooked to perfection.

Black Thai's entrees tend to sit between the $10-$15 price-range. Their appetizers are very affordable, averaging around the $6.00 to tame a two-person appetite before the meal.

Black Thai is certainly worth the visit. Just ask CUC Senior Brian Goff.

"I have always had an enjoyable experience at Black Thai," said Goff. "The summer rolls are always on point."

Black Thai also sits in walking distance to the beach. "It's always nice being able to walk off my meal on the beach," says Goff. "I tend to leave the restaurant spending no more than $15 and I never find myself hungry afterward."

1. Farmers Box

This company is supported by Strickland Farms in Longs, S.C. The local family and friends that run Farmers Box ensure local and fresh produce. What is unique about their service is that they deliver your goods to you. For a small fee, you can have a crate of pumpkins or other produce delivered to campus. Check out their website at farmers-box.com and request your pumpkins there!

2. "That Church on 544"

Also known as the Centenary United Methodist Church, this community is situated right across from McDonalds on the corner of Singleton Ridge Road and Highway 544. On their Facebook page, they are offering free pumpkins to Coastal students who are willing to start worshiping there. If you do not wish to attend the church, they will still let you purchase from their pumpkin patch.

3. Thompson Farm & Nursery

Across the Waccamaw River off of Highway 701, this farm celebrates the fall season with hayrides, a corn maze, pumpkin picking, and more. They offer party planning and group tour services and they promise that you will feel at home in their environment. They are only open on Saturdays, Sundays, and certain Friday nights for evening maze exploring.

4. Your local supermarket

If all else fails, students can visit one of the local supermarkets in the area. We have Food Lion on both Highway 544 and Highway 501, just southeast of campus. Walmart is located a little farther down on Highway 501 and then Kroger is just a little ways away from that. These vendors may not be the farmers in overalls that you imagined, but it will do the job if you are looking to decorate your residence hall bedrooms and carve your jack-o-lanterns with your new Coastal friends.
We’ve all heard the story of the young men that were involved in a plane crash and stranded on a deserted island. But what if the men became women? What if those women were all beauty queens on their way to the biggest pageant of their careers thus far? These women all have secrets and living in such close quarters will make it all the harder to keep their secrets secret.

Beauty Queens was written by the New York Times’ best-selling author, Libba Bray. She uses comedy and tragedy to open the reader’s eyes to issues such as homosexuality, racial inequality, and gender roles in society. The novel is set in the modern day (written in 2011) and has a setting of utopian America. In this America, the media and government control every aspect of people’s lives. The girls are trained to look, act, speak, and think a certain way. But many of the girls challenge the social norm and you are introduced to every character and their stories throughout the chapters of this hilarious satire.

The cover of this book may deceive you into thinking it is just another rom-com novel written for the average 14-18 year old girl, but it is much, much more than that. People of all ages, races, religions and genders should read this novel. It will help people gain empathy and understanding for others who are nothing like them. It is also extremely funny and a good pick me up if you are having a bad day, it will show you the important message that no matter where you come from or how you see the world there will always be people who will love and understand you. Bray will have you laughing, crying and cheering on these amazing young characters.

You’ll be hearing more about Singer-Songwriter Jonathan Bellion in the coming years. Why? His music is incredible, his lyrics are genuine, and his potential is off the charts. Bellion was born and raised in Long Island, N.Y., and he attended Five Towns College before heading into his career. He also released four free mixtapes online within the last three years, he continues to produce and write his own music, and he has established a large enough fan base to tour across the nation this fall.

Jon Bellion is new to the mainstream music scene, but he has been gaining ground since writing Eminem’s The Monster and Jason Derulo’s Trumpets. His latest album/mixtape, The Definition, has already had thousands of downloads and every track is a work of art. In an interview with him back in 2012, Jon Bellion informed me that he wants to make sure every song he produces is well thought out, deep, and most importantly, timeless. You could possibly classify his style of music as Hip-Hop, but Bellion is careful to avoid having his music fall into any one genre. He experiments with all types of instruments and alterations to ensure a unique sound. My personal favorites by Jon Bellion are The Wonder Years, Ungrateful Eyes, Smooth Movin’, and Pre-Ocuppied. The last two songs listed feature his good friend Blaque Keys and whenever they collaborate you can ensure that their music will be fun, creative, and mind-blowing.

Billy Madison is about a boy named Billy who’s lost his way. He was raised in a life of luxury, where his father fixed his every mistake. His adult life revolves around laying at the pool, hitting on girls, and drinking his wake into an oblivion. He was fine with this life, in till his father decided to give up the company to Erik. Billy believes Erik would destroy the company.

Billy hatches a plan. If he can redo every grade (elementary to high school) in two weeks he can take over the company. He then goes back to school, to prove to his dad that he’s not a fool. He finds romance and new friends.

Billy Madison is a classic Adam Sandler movie. You will laugh until you cry.
