Cordaro Faux News: Student Actually Thought This Was Fox News

BY: DYLAN CORDARO
STAFF WRITER

In an embarrassing moment for all of her friends, sophomore and English major Jenga Scattergories realized twenty-four hours ago that Cordaro Faux News wasn’t actually Fox News. While she stopped caring about the incident within one half-hour, I on the other hand have to publish this in the newspaper.

According to a 2014 Gallup Poll, Scattergories was actually the only student on campus left to realize that the Cordaro Faux News column every week was satire. Of course, Gallup Poll has its own bias and sometimes words questions strategically. With this in mind, Scattergories may not be alone. Who knows.

“When I first read that article on the Student Onion, I honestly got excited because I just stopped eating meat last week and I wanted to attend the festival,” admits Scattergories. “I even created a plan to restore cats on campus to resist the alligators!” Scattergories informed us.

That the Faux News stories seemed so monumental. When she went back home to read them as purely satirical articles, Scattergories said she laughed really really hard because I am “just so funny.” Take that Grandpa!

Local campus drifter Jonny Pumpkinseed is one of the newspaper’s biggest fans.

Pumpkinseed spoke to us about how easily Faux News can be confused with Fox News. “If students are taking these ridiculous Faux News stories seriously, then you have that in common with Fox News. While both news outlets are obscure and should be taken with a grain of salt, they are here for comic relief.”

Pumpkinseed also admits that both outlets need to advertise that they are purely for poots and hoots.

Scattergories agrees and says she will continue to read Faux News every week for the jokes. “You never know what people would do if they actually took Fox News or Faux News seriously,” laughs Scattergories. <cue sitcom audience laughter>

This is Dylan for Faux News, keep it classy, Coastal.
Dear Chauncy

Need advice on how to handle your daily struggle? Ask Chauncy! You can submit questions anonymously on our ask.fm/TheChanticleer page and your questions could be answered in the next issue. Advice will be given by your fellow peers anonymously.

Dear Chauncy, I’m a freshmen and I am having a lot of trouble making friends on campus. I’ve been here for eight weeks and still can’t meet new people who I connect with. How can I make the college friendships that will last forever?

Everyone during their freshman year struggles with meeting people who they connect with. A lot of times during your freshmen year, you will make quick friends out of necessity to not be alone. Do not be afraid to be by yourself. Freshmen year can be overwhelming when you are constantly around people you kind of like. Do not be quick to just hang out with people just because you do not have anything else to do.

Discover what you like to do. Join clubs or organizations that go with your interests. Discover your interests on your own, to make sure your opinion will not change passed on what your friends want to do. It takes time to find the people who will be your true friends. Do not rush to be somebody you are not. You will find the right friendships in time.

Dear Chauncy, I am hitting the junior year slump. It seems that nothing is going my way. What do I do?

It happens to the best of us. You feel overwhelmed by your classes and are possibly doubting your major. Maybe your not getting as quality time with your friends as you used to. Maybe you are even feeling homesick and are tired of your job. When all of these things are piling on, it is very easy to hit a slump.

The best thing to do is to stay positive. The slump will not last forever. Midterms will come to an end soon. It can seem that everything is not going your way now, but soon you will be able to relax. In the meantime, study hard and get organized. Try to reunite with your friends and hang out. It’s good to have a balance in life between school and social life. This will help you feel more relaxed and less slumped.

Dear Chauncy, my dorm room is cramped, and I feel like I’m suffocating. What can I do to make it feel more like home?

When living in a new place sometimes it can take a while for the space to feel like home. Bring items from your home, that will make the place feel more cozy. Instead of buying that new comforter, bring in the favorite one for your home. Get rid of items that make the space feel cramped. Do a little fall cleaning and get rid of all the extra items in your room. If you have not used it or worn it all semester, it’s time for it to go.

Get everything organized! If you have all your belongings scattered around, the room will never feel like home. Look up do it yourself projects on Pinterest. There are many ideas on there on how to make a small space feel cozy. This distraction will also help if you are feeling homesick.

Dear Chauncy, my boyfriend has been wearing a fanny pack around, and I can’t get him to take it off. He says “it’s cool” and his friends are supporting him. What can I do to get that horrible thing off his body?

Sometimes people we love will make choices that we do not agree with. Being open and honest with your boyfriend is the first step. Tell him how wearing this item makes you feel. If he still does not understand, try to get his friends on your side. They may be able to see why you disagree with him making this fashion choice.

If you still cannot convince him, tell him what you’re afraid of. If you’re afraid he will be bullied or look silly from this fashion choice, let him know. Paint a picture in his mind of what you think will be a reality from him wearing the fanny pack. Maybe you think this fashion choice ages him and you want him to go back to the person who you first met. Letting him know these things may make a difference.

If all else fails, wear something that he does not like and do not take it off until he takes the fanny pack off!

Dear Chauncy, I’m in a casual relationship with a great guy, but
Skipping class will cost you more than your grade

BY: SAMANTHA RILEY
FEATURES EDITOR

More than halfway through the month of October and the beautiful city of Conway, South Carolina is still experiencing temperatures in the mid eighties. For many students, the beach and sun is a justifiable excuse for skipping class.

Especially for those who are experiencing a South Carolina fall for the first time. Most students would be bundled up in sweaters, preparing for the impending hot chocolate drinking weather, but here at Coastal, students are soaking up the last rays of sun.

Who wouldn’t want to spend these sunny fall days at the beach instead of in the classroom? You live near a 60-mile stretch of beautiful coastline. But did you ever wonder how much that trip to the beach will actually cost you?

I’m not talking about the gas money spent going to Myrtle Beach, or the pass to park your car on the boardwalk, or even the money spent on frozen lemonade from the vendor at the beach. I am talking about the money you have sported on tuition.

Besides the fact that your overall grade will suffer, your wallet has given up on a good amount of money by missing just one day of class.

According to CCU’s tuition and cost of attendance webpage, for a full time Coastal Carolina University undergard, tuition can cost anywhere from $5,070 to $11,740.

Depending on the day of the week students choose to skip class, they could be losing out on upwards of $80.00. Skipping a single class here and there quickly adds up.

According to StudentScholarship.com the average college student skips 104 classes during their college career, wasting several thousand dollars. With student loans being one of the largest sources of debt in our country right now, as a student taking advantage of all that you pay for would be the smart thing to do.

In a survey conducted by StudentScholarship.com it states that 55% of students say they skip class because they “just couldn’t get out of bed.”

Another 20% of students say they skipped class because they “wanted to enjoy the beautiful weather.” While Coastal students may fall equally into each of these categories, it is imperative that you consider your bank account.

Think twice before hitting the snooze button, and soak up the last few rays of sun after attending classes. To put it in perspective, skipping just one class here and there over the course of the semester could actually pay for a weeklong tropical vacation.
No homecoming concert in 2014
Annual fall concert expected to replace the tradition of homecoming concerts

BY: KYLE JORDAN
EDITOR IN CHIEF

If you are waiting for the announcement of who will be performing at this year’s homecoming concert, you might be waiting a little longer than usual.

Prior to the 2014 fall semester, the decision was made by the Coastal Carolina Office of Student Activitites and Leadership (OSAL) to remove the concert from this year’s list of Homecoming events. Coastal Carolina University’s Executive Director of Student Life, Whitney Comer, says that the limited selection of artists for OSAL and Coastal’s Activities Board (CAB) to choose from was one of the main reasons for this decision.

“When you have a specific date that you need to find an artist for which was the case for the Homecoming Concert, you are very limited on the artists you can bring,” said Comer. “In the spring, I can tell an agent that we want to bring in an artist sometime between the end of spring break and the end of April. So that gives us about a month and a half of dates to choose from.”

Comer also said that the time of the Homecoming Concert conflicted with the schedules of intramural and club sports teams, as well as the schedules of Coastal’s NCAA sports teams such as women’s and men’s basketball, and volleyball.

“Essentially when we have a concert in the HTC Center, there are three days where the gym can’t be used for practices,” said Comer. “So what happens is, athletics has to move to the intramural gym, which means that the intramural teams get kicked out.”

Until last fall, CCU concerts used to be held on Prince Lawn, they were free of charge, and have historically featured artists who have fallen off the map such as Jeremih and Hello Goodbye in 2011, and Travis Porter in 2012. However, since the decision was made to move concerts into the HTC Center at the beginning of 2013, CCU has seen many rising stars and iconic figures come to campus such as Gloriana, American Idol Winner Phillip Phillips, and most recently, Country Music Star Darius Rucker, who ended up shooting the music video for his hit single, Homegrown Honey, at the HTC Center.

Comer says that attracting “bigger names” is exactly what she and her colleagues had hoped to accomplish by moving concerts into the HTC Center gym. Also, Comer says that by having an annual concert at the beginning of the fall semester instead of a Homecoming Concert, less teams and organizations will be displaced, and those who will have to get displaced such as the CCU volleyball team, will be moved for only a short at a time that is well before the start of NCAA Regular Season Athletic Events.

“When we sat down and looked at everything, we knew that people were unhappy with the artists we were able to choose,” said Comer. “So we figured, why not have a bigger concert, earlier in the year, when we are only misplacing one team, and when we have more dates to consider?” said Comer.

Comer also said that because the recent concerts at CCU have featured bigger names and cost more money, they have not been free of charge.

While homecoming concerts are now a thing of the past for Coastal Carolina University, Comer says CCU will continue to have an annual fall and spring concert, and that musical acts are still going remain a part of the extensive homecoming schedule.

“We actually have a local band from Charleston called Ben Fagan and the Holy City Hooligans coming to perform at the Bonfire on Monday,” said Comer. “And of course we are going to have the talent show in the HTC Center.”

CCU professor rocks the House of Blues

BY: LAUREL NUSBAUMER
SPORTS EDITOR

Last Saturday, famous American rock band Cheap Trick performed at the House of Blues. However, CCU students and faculty were more concerned with the opening act.

Coastal Carolina Creative Writing Instructor, Joe Oestreich and his band, Watershed, had the opportunity to open for Cheap Trick. It was the first time that the bands played together since 1994.

“I can’t believe it’s been 20 years,” said Oestreich. “I don’t know where time went.”

The House of Blues, hosted a huge crowd that Saturday night. Oestreich said large crowds and Cheap Trick go hand-in-hand.

“The thing about Cheap Trick is that the people who love them love them for what they have already created,” said Oestreich. “It doesn’t matter that they aren’t producing new records every year. The band is classic and that’s something its fans easily appreciate.”

But Cheap Trick wasn’t the only band who turned heads that night. “It was great for both bands,” said Oestreich. “[Watershed] got a great response from both the audience and [Cheap Trick]. It was really cool just being able to interact with them on a performance level after 20 years.”

Watershed took the stage for about a half hour that night, and primarily played songs from their latest records, Brick and Mortar and Three Chords and a Cloud of Dust II. The band opened with a break up song called, Sucker Punch. Oestreich says the song speaks generally on a male subject who doesn’t realize he and a female subject are in a fight.

The idea to form Watershed originated between Oestreich and Watershed Guitarist and Vocalist, Colin Gawel. Ironically, Oestreich said that they came up with the name on their way back from a Cheap Trick concert years ago. Other current members of Watershed include pianist and guitarist Joe Peppercorn, as well as drummer Dave Masica.

Watershed is an American rock band based out of Columbus, OH. Professor Oestreich is the only member to have moved away from the area, but the band still performs today. The band started in 1985 while its members were still in high school. In the 1990s, Watershed signed with Epic Records, the same record company Cheap Trick, Pearl Jam, and Michael Jackson were signed with. Later, the band was dropped by Epic Records.

“When a band is dropped by its label, that’s usually when they break up,” said Oestreich, “But Watershed didn’t. And we’re still together.”

Oestreich also said that Watershed plans on working on a new album later this year.

Professor Oestreich wrote about his band experiences in his published novel “Hitless Wonder: A Life in Minor League Rock and Roll” (2012). The novel depicts Oestreich looking back on his life as an aspiring rock star 20 years ago.

Oestreich is currently on sabbatical finishing up his latest creative non-fiction piece, “Lines of Scrimage: A Story of Football, Race, and Redemption,” with fellow CCU faculty member Scott Pleasant. Many of Watershed’s songs may be found on YouTube including the full length music video to The Fifth of July.

Nature Geoscience magazine features Coastal Professor

BY: SAMANTHA BERGOLD
ASSISTANT EDITOR

According to Coastal News, Jenna Hill conducted research on iceberg activity along the Atlantic Coast. Her research is creating a lot of attention. Her research discusses new information on ocean circulation patterns and climate.

Hill is an assistant professor for marine science. She received her B.A. in geology/environmental studies from Oberlin College. She received her Ph. D. in earth science from Scripps Institution of Oceanography.

According to Coastal News, Hill wrote the article with Alan Condron. Condron is with the Climate System Research Center of the University of Massachusetts. During the last ice age, they used a high-resolution numerical model to describe the ocean circulation.

According to Coastal News, the device showed that the melted water from ice sheets in North America would have reached the latitude of South Carolina in the winter. The icebergs would have been a regular happening along the South Carolina coast. The device also shown that huge volumes of melted water flooding would have had to happen to move the icebergs to south Florida. From this, colder and fresher ocean currents are produced. This would cause a 180-degree shift in the north flowing Gulf Stream.

“The mechanisms of climate change and ocean currents are more complex than we previously thought,” said Hill. “It helps us understand how future ice sheets melt from Greenland may affect the global climate.”

To further learn about Hills and Condron's research, the article can be read at nature.com.

Organization of the Week – Sea Turtle Club

BY: MARIO COSTELLO
STAFF WRITER

The Sea Turtle Club was created two years ago by founder Alyssa Scarfo. Ms. Scarfo decided to create the club after doing a maymester in Costa Rica in 2012. In Costa Rica she was working on a research project to see how artificial light and light pollution affect baby sea turtles. When Ms. Scarfo returned from her maymester in Costa Rica she wanted to start the club to bring awareness of sea turtles to Coastal Carolina. It was also so that Coastal students would become more aware of the impact they have on the oceans. For this to be done the club does several things throughout the year to get students to learn about sea turtles. Some of the ways in which they do this is by taking club members to excavations of sea turtle nests on Waties Island. These excavations are some of the very few times that the club members get hands-on experience. As Ms. Scarfo stats, “I think it allows everyone to get the perspective of how little they are and how important the first steps of their life are, and how anything from ants to roots to crabs can affect their development and can be the difference between life and death.” This can be better seen when the members that go to the excavations get to dig up the nest after it hatches. One of the other ways that the club tries to get the members more informed is by taking trips. Some of these trips are to aquariums or marine hospitals. Whichever one they chose to go to they try to make sure that the members that go get the experience and information they want.

The bicycle was returned to the owner.
Coastal Carolina's cross country teams ran in the Blue Ridge Cross Country Invitational on Friday hosted by Appalachian State University.

Letitia Saayman won her third race of the season clocking in at 18:03.41, coming in with a score eleven seconds better than Appalachian State's Tristin Van Ord. This marked Saayman’s sixth individual victory of her collegiate career and the third of four meets this season.

Saayman was closely followed by teammates Kyla and Aynslee van Graan. The three teammates claimed position in the top-10 finishers of 98 runners. Kyla snagged eighth place coming in at 18:49.77 with sister Aynslee right behind her at 18:50.61.

The Chanticleers were able to obtain a third-place finish thanks to the leading trios top-10 scores. The team totaled 88 points for the 5K run, trailing host team Appalachian State who finished at 34 points and Wake Forest finishing at 44 points.

The men’s team competed in a 6400-meter race led by Evan Niciphor who clocked in at 21:15.93 finishing 33rd overall. Niciphor was followed by teammates Joseph Keitt who came in 42nd overall, Daniel Riff who placed 59th, and Zach Hensel who took 71st.

The next meet Coastal will run is the Big South Championships on Saturday, November 1 at Gardner-Webb’s campus.

UNC Ashville dished Coastal its first Big South Conference defeat of the season on Saturday afternoon on a single late goal with only three minutes remaining in the game. This also marked Coastal’s first loss in seven matches.

Coastal outshot Ashville by double, 20-10 throughout the match. Faith Farley projected a low goal kick that was intercepted by Bulldog’s Carolina Houser, forward, resulting in a breakaway goal she chipped in from 20 yards out.

The Chanticleers led on the offensive during the first half holding down an 11-2 shot lead, including 5-1 on goal. Ashville’s goal keeper, Heather Muller, was able to stop every attempt on goal.

During the second half, Coastal continued to take control of the ball early in the session. The Chants were able to put up four more shots on goal, but were unable to plant one past Muller. Muller totaled 11 saves against the Chants.

Kacey Kelley served as an asset to the Chants offense finishing with a game-high of seven shot attempts, but unfortunately was not able to sink one in for Coastal.

Coastal will take on Radford on Wednesday, October 22 at 4:00 P.M. for another road game. The Chants then return home to face Liberty on Friday, October 24 to host Senior Night.

Should have got involved earlier
Struggling to find something to add to your resume your last semester isn’t always the easiest or smartest thing to do. Even if it’s not the “cool” thing to do at the time, you will wish you got involved later. Although be sure not be that person who joins every club freshman year for the free T-shirts and cozies but never attends one meeting.

CINO is your best friend
Start saving freshman year because the number of long days and subway foot longs you will eat will drain your pockets. This is where that freshman meal plan would come in handy again. Eventually you will get to the point where you’re mad when someone else grabs your usual table.

Campus isn’t that big
Although you may have thought our campus was huge freshman year and impossible to find your class, you will eventually realize we actually have a small campus compared to most schools. It’s okay to admit that it took you four years to realize that the Edwards building is just a giant square.

Not enough hours in the day
You know you’re a senior when the term “all-nighter” is nothing new to you. As a freshman, staying up all night was just another way to get the most of the weekend, now it’s a way to make sure you finish all those discussion posts on moodle.

Drinking isn’t everything
Those “3 day weekends” full of partying seemed fun at the time … when you could handle it. But now that you’re older and passing 300 and 400 level classes are more important, a night of heavy drinking becomes more of a task than something you look forward to every weekend.

KC’S DELI
BY: DYLAN CORDARO
STAFF WRITER

A favorite destination for Coastal students is Downtown Conway, just north of the university. The town of Conway is more than CCU, Hackler Golf Course, and Jade Hibachi. If you travel north via Highway 501 Business, you will find this local treasure. Apart from the Farmers Markets, the Riverwalk, and the beautiful old-town scenery, Downtown Conway has several fine eateries including KC’s Deli.

This Deli/Diner is located on the corner of 3rd and Elm Street and is situated around several small-named businesses. The Deli is especially booming during the town festivals and they offer fast service to those who just want to run in and out. KC’s Deli serves homemade sandwiches, burgers, and salads. My girlfriend and I visited the deli on a date and we were not disappointed. The staff was incredibly friendly and our server was not judgmental towards my vegetarian request which was different from how other eateries react.

My girlfriend Sara ordered the Reuben sandwich and I ordered their Veggie Burger. The food was awesome! I’m a vegetarian, and I have to admit that the Reuben looked really good. Reuben sandwiches were my guilty pleasure back in the day when I ate meat! The service was quick and there are many tables that grant you a great view of the downtown area. The prices for all of the sandwiches were also reasonable and really worth it.

KC’s Deli also bakes their own deserts and I could not resist trying their Jalapeño Brownie. The desert was fudgy, spicy, and like nothing I’ve tasted before. This local business offers name brand meats and other deli foods and the staff ensured that we enjoyed our visit and lunch. If you have a car or if your friend has a car, be sure to head down to (or up to) Downtown Conway and grab a bite to eat at KC’s Deli!
We've all heard the story of the young men that were involved in a plane crash and stranded on a deserted island. But what if the men became women? What if those women were all beauty queens on their way to the biggest pageant of their careers thus far? These women all have secrets and living in such close quarters will make it all the harder to keep their secrets secret.

Beauty Queens was written by the New York Times’ best-selling author, Libba Bray. She uses comedy and tragedy to open the reader’s eyes to issues such as homosexuality, racial inequality, and gender roles in society. The novel is set in the modern day (written in 2011) and has a setting of utopian America. In this America, the media, and government control every aspect of people’s lives. The girls are trained to look, act, speak, and think a certain way. But many of the girls challenge the social norm and you are introduced to every character and their stories throughout the chapters of this hilarious satire.

The cover of this book may deceive you into thinking it is just another rom-com novel written for the average 14-18 year old girl, but it is much, much more than that. People of all ages, races, religions and genders should read this novel. It will help people gain empathy and understanding for others who are nothing like them. It is also extremely funny and a good pick me up if you are having a bad day, it will show you the important message that no matter where you come from or how you see the world there will always be people who will love and understand you. Bray will have you laughing, crying and cheering on these amazing young characters.

If you like funny and you like football, then you will love Blue Mountain State. The show highlights the misadventures of three freshmen: quarterback Alex Moran, running back Craig Shilo, and mascot Sammy Cacciatore. All three characters attend Blue Mountain State, a fictional University located somewhere out west and a powerhouse in the world of college football. Together, the trio battles humiliating initiation rituals put in place by Senior Linebacker and Team Captain, Thad Castle, consecutive nights of partying, pay for play scandals, and other NCAA violations, in order to uphold the winning tradition that Head Football Coach Marty Daniels, has created during his illustrious career at Blue Mountain State.

The first Episode of Blue Mountain State aired back in 2010 and the series lasted for three seasons until it was abruptly cancelled in February 2012. The show features Darin Brooks as Alex Moran, The Hunger Games’ Alan Ritchson as Thad Castle, Sam Jones III as Craig Shilo, Ed Marinaro as Coach Marty Daniels, and Chris Romano as Sammy Cacciatore.

The series features a raunchy and gut-busting “American Pie” style of comedy that is sure to have you rolling for hours. PARTY AT THE GOATHOUSE!

New and upcoming duo Dan + Shay are two young men from Nashville TN, where they meet in 2012. The duo started out as song writers in Nashville, but within only a few months signed with Warner Bros. Nashville. Begging their careers as musicians released their debut single “19 You and Me” in 2013. It was able to claim to the seventh spot on the country music charts and sold over six hundred thousand tracks. This young duos career has shot off in the greatest way possible, and with their new album “Where it all began” now released their future is definitely going in the right direction.
It’s an exciting week at Coastal as we celebrate Homecoming 2014. The theme for this year is “Shipwrecked in Teal Nation” and the homecoming committee has created a great schedule of events that offer a variety of ways for students, faculty, staff and the community to be involved.

Monday, October 20th
ChantFest will be held on Prince Lawn from 11 am to 2pm. It is one of the biggest events of the year organized by the Coastal Activities Board. It’s considered a mini CINO Day with inflatables, free food, activities, and games to kick Homecoming Week into high gear.

Tuesday, October 21st
Paint the Town Teal will be held in Conway beginning at 5pm. Each team will partner with a Conway business to decorate their storefront and paint the town teal. The business will also receive a certificate for participating and a plaque for placing.
Coastal Can-Struct will take place in the HTC Center beginning at 6pm. This is a competition to build the best canned food structure featuring the overall homecoming theme.

Wednesday, October 22nd
There will be a Treasure Hunt Concourse out on Prince Lawn starting at noon. Teams will pick up their treasure list and they will have until 6pm to complete as many items as possible.

Thursday, October 23rd
Is CCU a Business? will be held in Wheelwright Auditorium starting at 3:30pm. A panel of faculty and staff will discuss the pros and cons of running a university like a business.

Friday, October 24th
Coastal’s Got Talent will be held in the HTC Arena beginning at 7pm. For ticket information, contact the Wheelwright Box Office at 843-349-2787.

Saturday, October 25th
There will be a Most Spirited Tailgate Competition beginning at 11am in Chantourage Alley. Register your tailgate to be judged in this competition. Entrants are encouraged to incorporate the “Shipwrecked in Teal Nation” theme.
There will be a Golf Cart Parade starting at 12 pm on Chanticleer Drive. The golf carts will be provided by the university and you provide the decorations. Show your Chanticleer spirit by decorating your golf cart with Coastal colors and the homecoming theme.
The homecoming game against Charleston Southern will kickoff at 3:30 pm at Brooks Stadium. King and queen winners will be announced during halftime. Overall winners will be announced after the 3rd quarter.

horoscopes
