Coastal Carolina University's Theater Department really packed a punch with high-strung vocals, incredible talent, and emotional turmoil in their 2015-2016 season opening production, Spring Awakening.

Spring Awakening is an extremely powerful current of pure innocence. This innocence transcends the show from being a hot, raunchy, hormone crazed mess to a beautiful, elegant, and completely honest telling of adolescent minds.

Spring Awakening is the perfect Chanticleer kicks off the season

ChantNation provides students with many benefits and opportunities to get involved with Coastal Carolina athletic teams.

ChantNation recently partnered with SCAF's Director of Development, Rhett Graham, to improve awareness of the organization to students on campus.

Membership fees range from $25 for a year or $90 for four years. Students are able to receive various incentives from becoming a member. For example, the can receive t-shirts, a parking decal, and invitations to events for SCAF members only. For example, meet and greets with the athletic players.

President of ChantNation, Karl Southall, said a SCAF member is able to receive priority points to help get them game tickets after they have graduated.

Shelby Dangerfield crowned Miss CCU 2016

Samantha Bergefield, Miss Coastal Carolina University 2015, is a senior musical theater major from Biltmore, Montana.

From Coastal Carolina having a seat in musical theater programs, Dangerfield decided to come to Coastal Carolina.

"Coastal Carolina has a special place in my heart," said Dangerfield. "Dangerfield said the feels elated after winning. "I really didn't know if I was going to win or not because every single girl in this pageant is absolutely amazing," said Dangerfield. "I have so much respect for all of them. Any one of them could easily get the crown and do a fantastic job."

Dangerfield said she is excited to be a leader for her peers and represent the university.

"Coastal Carolina University is a hidden gem," said Dangerfield. "We are slowly getting to know. People are finding out about us more and more."

Dangerfield said it is absolutely better ever to be a senior and be crowned Miss Coastal Carolina University makes it so much more exciting."

Respect your professors

Samantha Bergold
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

When I was a sophomore, I was in a journalism class one day and a girl started painting her nails. She was sitting in the third row with the professor right in front of her. I could not believe she had the audacity to paint her nails during the lecture. The smell of nail polish made paying attention to the lecture impossible. The professor never said anything.

I had another class where the student right in front of me would check the basketball scores during the whole class period. Every day in class, he would be watching the replays. One day he was complaining about failing the quizzes, saying that the professor did not like him.

I see students all the time on their laptops or phones during the entire lecture. I get it. I check my phone from time to time, but you should not completely ignore a professor. I did not realize this till I had to repeat myself every single week talking to my staff. It can be extremely frustrating and disappointing having a group of people completely ignore what you are saying.

A professor’s job is not easy. They are talking in front of a group of people everyday. They are working hard trying to inform you about valuable information. They have their Masters and PhDs specialized in these topics and they deserve to be respected.

Respect your professors. Listen and take notes during the lectures instead of checking the latest sports scores or texting your friends. Be engaged in the information they are trying to teach you. If you are not going to listen, then why go to class?
Coastal’s Got Talent

The homecoming talent show is one of the most looked forward to events of homecoming week. Angela Elmhorst, Coastal Activism Board President, shares behind the scene information on Coastal’s Got Talent.

Elmhorst said she does not want to give all the details of the talent show. “I will tell you that we are having a crowd favorite perform during the show naming,” said Elmhorst.

Elmhorst said she is looking forward to the whole show. “Watching the audience make me so excited,” said Elmhorst.

Elmhorst said she was even more ecstatic about the event after the auditions made her having to choose between all the acts. “It would just like to say that everyone should come out and support their fellow Chants,” said Elmhorst. “It is going to be an amazing show, so be sure to get your talent show tix!”

There will be many awards given out during the talent show, Creek, groups, and individuals all have first, second, and third place trophies. “Coastal’s Got Talent will take place in the HTC Center on October 1, 2015 at 7 p.m.”

Will Do What, I dare you

Falicia Cross
REPORTER

Will Do What is a website for people who get a dare and take it out.

Will Do What is a crowdsourcing site for funny, daring, stupid, and entertaining acts that people will do. Then, they name their price and share their idea to get funding. Will Do What is a website for people who love to act out and take on dares. . .

Matthew Foss is a founder of the Will Do What website. He currently created the website due to the idea that people want to see him complete the task. Foss said they chose the name Will Do What from it relating to their website tagline. The tagline is “What would you do for free, tell the world, and make it happen.”

“We did a lot of brainstorming with different ideas and brainstormed lots of ideas,“ said Foss. “There is not another website out there that has the entertainment motive or the potential clients that we believe will surface through this website. It’s all about fun and entertainment for the masses.”

Foss and his friends developed the idea for the website after watching a man dive through a trough of cactus. The man asked the guys how much they would compensate to see him complete the task. Foss said $500 and his friends tweeted Foss. This encounter allowed them to start imagining what people would donate to see the dive. Their imaginations sparked their idea for the website.

“We created the website due to it being specific to the current demand,” said Foss. “There is not another website out there that has the entertainment motive or the potential clients that we believe will surface through this website. It’s all about fun and entertainment for the masses.”

Will Do What separates itself away from other crowd-funding websites due to it’s quickness and creative nature. The website allows for members to come up with dare on their own and see who out there wants to be willing to choose to do their dare, said Foss.

“Will Do What hopes to attract large amounts of viewers which will stimulate involvement for people, organizations, and clubs,” said Foss. “We are similar to the concept of Kickstartor, but for dare. The dare makes cash. How often have you been out with friends and thought up a dare, put a dollar amount to it, and never followed through?”

The homepage of the site for Will Do What is Will Do What. It is not the type of website that you would donate to see the dive. It is more of a focus on the future when I have to establish it as a social media fan-base.

In the future, they see the interest of organizations using Will Do What for fundraising. They want to have campus challenges across the country that compete for the most money raised by an individual. The prizes for the winner will include winning trips or a trip for their school winning a support donated by Will Do What. “I cannot wait for Will Do What to expand,” said Foss. “It will change the completely of crowd-funding. We are incredibly excited digging our roots on Coastal’s campus.”

2016 election approaches

Many students on college campuses across America will be voting for the first time in November 2016.

According to a study done by the Center for Information and Research on Civic Learning and Engagement, “in the 2012 election, young people with college experience were almost twice as likely to vote as those without college experience.”

“Many students are not voting in this election because having turned 18, which is the national age limit to vote, is not necessarily a political process,” said Angela McDowell, a freshman.

It makes me feel like my thoughts matter and that I should definitely be a part of our democracy,” said McDowell.

A number of websites will be created the website due to its quickness and creative nature. The website allows for members to come up with dare on their own and see who out there wants to be willing to choose to do their dare, said Foss.

If you have noticed the pumpkins upon smallcoming from Kimbell Library, the crisp air as you walk out to the tennis courts or down any track, you might have guessed that fall has finally settled here at Coastal Carolina.

The leaves change from the luscious green to a multitude of reds, yellows, oranges, and brownes. As the season continues, the breeze. As the season continues, the leaves change and the weather includes scarves. Hot weather will kick into high gear and soon students will be rocking scarves. Hot chocolate and pumpkin flavored drinks will become a seasonal beverage in the hands of Coastal Carolina students.

Fall truly is the most beautiful time of year. The leaves change from the green to autumn colors. November. Generally hit their peak around mid-November.

The life of a communication major

Aaron Windham

What do you do? I'm a journalism student who is absolutely passionate about the field. I enjoy learning about all the different aspects of the field and am excited to see where my career may take me in the future.

According to University Administration, the communications department is one of the five most populated disciplines at Coastal Carolina. According to Dr. Steven Madden, a communications professor and veteran of the communications department, the field is divided into two equal parts: one that deals with digital media and the other with print media.

"Communications is a diverse discipline which includes not only traditional journalism, but also public relations, advertising, and digital media," said Madden. "A body of scholarship and research about all forms of human communication is presented and explained. Students report the results of studies that are the basis for an ever-expanding understanding of how we communicate."

"Communications is a discipline that allows students to study a wide range of topics within the field, from the history of communication to the latest trends in social media," said Madden. "Students have the opportunity to specialize in a particular area of interest, such as advertising or public relations, and pursue a career in that field.

"I really enjoy teaching and working with students," said Madden. "I see myself as a facilitator who helps students develop their skills and prepare for their future careers.

Students are encouraged to take advantage of the many opportunities available to them, such as internships, research projects, and community service projects. These experiences help students gain valuable skills and prepare them for a successful career in the field of communications.

The communications department is home to a wide range of courses, from introductory courses to advanced courses. Students have the opportunity to take courses in broadcast and print media, as well as courses in social media and digital media.

Students in the communications department have the opportunity to work with professionals in the field and gain valuable experience through internships and other opportunities. Many students also have the opportunity to work on campus, either as a reporter or a producer for the Coastal Carolina Daily, the university newspaper. This experience helps students gain valuable skills and prepare them for a successful career in the field of communications.

Students in the communications department also have the opportunity to participate in a variety of extracurricular activities, such as student radio shows, television productions, and journalism clubs. These experiences help students gain valuable skills and prepare them for a successful career in the field of communications.

The communications department is home to a wide range of talented students and is a great place to learn about the field of communications. Students have the opportunity to learn from experienced faculty members and gain valuable skills and prepare them for a successful career in the field of communications.
Chanticleers Survive Early Scare, Remain Unbeaten

Ian Brooking

REPORTER

Coastal Carolina University shut out Bryant University in the second half to lift the Chanticleers by a score of 31-17. It improved the Chanticleers to 4-0.

Coastal Carolina had to come back from a 10-0 Bryant lead in the first quarter. Coastal Carolina would only allow one more touchdown in the first half as the defense stood tall throughout the second half to help Coastal Carolina seal their fourth win in a row.

It was another sold out crowd on Saturday night in Brooks Stadium. This weekend being Family Weekend went as Coastal Carolina students and parents cheered their Chanticleers on, loud and proud.

With 20 plus fans in attendance, every time Bryant was close to the student section, the noise around those sections was deafening. It has been that way throughout the second half to help build the association.

Coastal Carolina made some quick adjustments at the half in order to pull out this weekends win.

"We had to have lower breakdowns in the second half if we were going to win this," said Coach Moglia. "We have to give credit to Matt Fine, Bryant's coach, first team and their entire staff. They had a good game plan against us. They were well prepared and they gave us everything we could handle tonight."

DeAngelo Henderson pulled through for Chanticleer Saturday night, rushing 195 yards and 2 touchdowns. Not only did the junior running back from Summerville, South Carolina have a career long run of 39 yards in the second quarter, but Henderson led the Big South record for scoring a touchdown in 11 consecutive games.

Henderson had no knowledge of the record and he praised his offensive line, saying, "I believe that [the record] is phenomenal. The offensive line has been protecting me."

Henderson tied the record in the second quarter, two plays after a 39 yard dash.

Henderson said football is not the only sport that SCAF is planning on focusing on. Their plan is to form orators by having hype teams within SCAF. Members of the SCAF organization will volunteer to represent a sport. The hype team leader will speak with the team and find out what each team would like from the SCAF organization.

SCAF's main goal is getting students to games and SCAF hopes to keep the student section filled with students every game. One of the members of SCAF stated, "I really love the tradition," said Southall. "I believe that we can come back next season and say this happened and we did that."

RATING
8

Villa Romana is an Italian restaurant filled with mozzarella and freshly made pasta. The restaurant focuses on creating not only Italian classics, but an experience you could not get anywhere else in the Myrtle Beach area. The ceiling is designed to give the appearance of traditional Roman architecture. During your meal, an accordion player walks around to each table taking requests on song choices. The dining experience is quite extraordinary. All dinner courses are served with homemade stracciatella soup, tomato bruschetta, fresh salad, and homemade bread. The menu offers appetizers, veal, seafood, chicken, and of course pasta.

To Pimp a Butterfly

Kendrick Lamar continues to climb up his ladder of success. Compton’s finest producer of music that appeals to both new and old school rap fans. Kendrick weaves a lyrical web with each bar that he emits with little effort. His struggles range from what it currently means to be black in America, dealing with record labels trying to extort his rhymes, and overcoming his hard internal and external. His struggles are both internal and external. His struggles range from what it currently means to be black in America, dealing with record labels trying to extort his rhymes, and overcoming his hard hitting battle against depression.

As you listen to To Pimp a Butterfly, one of the first things that will stand out is the dramatically different tone. Even though he has been putting out some of the most meaningful and content rich rap anthems for several years now, there is something special about this release. For example, on “Compton’s favorite,” Kendrick has created a more soulful mood with not only the funk influenced beat, but also with his wordplay. In the song, he calls for African Americans to love one another, despite the colors that may separate them or the differences in peoples. Georgia is present in Lamar’s native town Compton. Kendrick possesses a sensual rhythm and a message that has no place in this era filled with techno beats and codeine raps.

Sinister 2

GENRE
Horror

RELEASE DATE
21 August 2015

Sinister 2 had me screaming in my right from the start. Horror movies usually all start the same. They start off showing a happy family and then lead up to the scary parts later on in the film. This film was very different. The very first scene of the movie was scary and caught me off guard.

Sinister 2 is kind of like a spin off to the first movie. You need to watch Sinister to understand Sinister 2 because it starts off where Sinister ended. Courtney Collins is killing in a rural house with her nine year old twins, Tyler and Zach. The family is hiding from their abusive father. Twins start experiencing nightly visits from ghostly kids. They show him disturbing images of families being slaughtered. It is a very gory film. If you do not like gory films, then this is not the film for you. The problem is the plot. The plot of this film did not impress the critics at all. They only gave the film a rating of 2.5 out of 4. I am sure that because the plot was not all connected. Some parts of the film were confusing. Some of the scenes did not need to be there.

Overall, this film got a set of two from how frightening and scary the plot was. This film was not predictable at all. There was no warning of what was going to happen. I personally, I don’t recommend this film. It was one of the best horror movies I have seen in a long time.
