How Tyler Wyeth is making the jump from Executive VP to President

Samantha Bergald
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

FOLLOWING THE RESIGNATION of SGA President Dylan Fender, the Executive Vice President Tyler Wyeth is now the SGA president. Executive Vice President is now Lindsay Hickman.

Wyeth had to learn the president's position while training Hickman to be vice president.

"I was definitely, at the start, when I heard the news, a little bit worried just because I wasn't totally prepared," said Wyeth.

The finance minister and the chief of staff have helped Wyeth get set up with the new position.

"Lindsay is definitely good," said Wyeth. "The reason we were thinking about doing that though is just because Lindsay was such a good senator. When she makes the jump from pro-tempore to VP, she is not allowed to write legislation anymore. She was one of our main legislation writers." Wyoming has been elected as the new president pro-tempore.

Courtney Hammett has been elected as the new president pro-tempore. "She is extremely involved in the school and she is definitely a good person for it," said Wyeth.

Wyeth has been absolutely amazed by the new senators that were elected in the fall.

"They have been amazing," said Wyeth. "They're always writing bills," aid Wyeth.

OSAL taking initiative helping transfer students

Katie Batebrook

The Office of Student Life is offering new programs for current and incoming transfers students at Coastal Carolina University.

These programs are designed to help transfer students meet students and faculty, as well as become familiar with Coastal and all it has to offer.

Transferring to a new school can be just as terrifying as starting as a freshman, if not more.

Sustenr Marshman, Assistant Director of New Student and Family Programs, said that transfers face a number of things freshmen or traditional students do not have to face.

"Transfer students, as a whole, face a variety of issues, and I think this is why they are one of the more difficult populations to reach because everyone comes in with an unique experiences," said Marshman. "One thing transfers face is transfer articulation, which is figuring out what their credits transfer from one institution to another. They could also possibly have a lower GPA than at their previous institution."

On November 5, a new program called The Tea Sigma National Honor Society for transfers opened its doors for members.

Marshman said this is the first move to increase the university's interest and involvement in transfer students.

"The first program we have been working with is Tea Sigma, the National Honor Society for transfers," said Marshman. "We just inducted 20 new members into that organization. This is the first initiative that we, as an office, have taken." Transfer students who are attending Coastal for a semester with high academic merit will receive an invite to join next semester.

#ALLMYMOVIES

Samantha Reynold
Editor-in-Chief

From November 10 to 12, Shia LaBeouf watched all twenty-nine films he acted in. He watched them in reverse chronological order from most recent to oldest. The event took place in New York City. People were able to go in and watch the films with him free of charge at the Angelika Film Center.

The event started at noon with his most recent film, Man Down and ended around 8:30 p.m. with his oldest film, Freaks and Geeks. Between each film, there was a five minute break. A month prior to the event, LaBeouf tweeted out the first word he spoke in each film for twenty-nine days straight.

The event was filmed ALLMYMOVIES and part of LaBeouf's website The Campaign Book. Follow artists Luke Turner and Nana Risikado helped put on the event. The Campaign Book focuses on creating art in a digital culture.

The website NewFlix live streamed the event. Viewers were able to watch Shia watch his own films. The video was aired without sound. During the three day film marathon, LaBeouf never looked at the camera. Many fellow movie goers went up to him to take a picture or to give him a high five.

He fell asleep during the Transformers: Revenge of the Fallen. He started crying during, A Guide to Recognizing Your Saints. He was smiling and laughing during The Green Mile Movie.

Twitter was going insane during the whole event. Many people were watching Shia during their work day. Others would play the film he was on and watch it with him. Some people even created videos of them watching Shia. Once viewers started watching the project, they were addicted and unable to stop. Many people were intrigued by the project from them being able to see an actor react to their own film.

When the last film ended, LaBeouf walked out while the crowd applauded and gave him big cheers. NewFlix has the video of the event up for those who want to stream it again.

Coastal students' beef with Hicks

Kaley Lavine

A FOOD SAFETY STUDY RECENTLY conducted due to various student reports of digestive problems after eating food from the Hick’s Dining Hall. A diagnosticians report revealed that no students who have visited the school’s direct service center to date have any evidence of harmful consumption.

According to RL. Laboratory, the students have reported negative for serotypes, mold, E.coli, and salmonella. The company that supplies the food to Hick’s Dining Hall, Aramark, also performed an independent investigation, and K-12 school districts.

In December 2015, the Department of Health and Environmental Control gave Coastal’s dining hall a 94 out of 100. Food was taken off for pork chops placed on trays in the walk-in refrigerator measuring at sixty degrees Fahrenheit.

According to the report, the manager told the inspector they were actually pulled out during breakfast and were thrown away. Hick’s Dining Hall kept points because of a bag light mounted above the silverware and food prep at the sink area.

According to DHEC, bag lights are not supposed to be installed anywhere above food or food prep areas.

Resident Director Jame Stone said the dining hall was under construction, and a contractor moved the bag lights. According to the report, the food safety, our employees, and managers are trained to actively monitor food safety. All foods are located and comply with all federal, state, and local food codes.

Coastal Carolina student Evan Borden said the dining hall at Hick’s for breakfast and tries to avoid eating their cafeteria.

Borden said immediately after he consumes the food, he does not feel good. "You just don’t feel good," said Borden. "It’s off the sort of because of the digestion."

always asking all their things, they are the only ones showing up at all the events. Food stuff. They are doing really good. I think we can learn them a lot to help.”

The biggest problem SGA has faced is following up with people Fender has complained. "The biggest problem is a lot of stuff that was in place by 12pm and was like even before by 6pm contact with us. We just don’t know anything that’s done," said Wyeth.

Want says he continues to monitor that Fender started when he was president. "I know what I can do moving forward and what I can do for them and I do that. I try to drop off on what he’s started because I don’t want to get that reputation," said Wyeth.

"I really feel like, do not get me wrong, I am an intern. I am an intern, running the office, but it is much as far as SGA, our role is in other countries. We should be our community and Coastal. I want to focus on that."

Want says he continues to focus on working with other organizations and getting students involved in other organizations. Wyeth is in contact with the smaller organizations that only have 20 members or less.

"My big thing was, especially when I became SGA president for the first time, position, was I really want SGA to be connected to the student body. Wyeth, "I want them to be involved."

SGA has started totaling SGA all out on campus and ask students what their think. They have taken different things that they are not, but we don’t care what they care, but we don’t do what they want. They don’t want to do what they want, and if we don’t get the ideas from the students," said Wyeth.

The program will provide incoming transfer students with a voice within the student community. This current transfer students will serve as mentors to incoming transfer students, as they will be projected during Orientation, as well as continue contact with them throughout the school year as they continue to transition to Coastal. The program should be completed out in the next month beginning of next semester.

Transfer students will have to apply to be an ambassador, so look out for the email this week.

The Student Government Association will also be adding senate seats for transfer students. The SGA has emphasized the importance of transfer students being able to be a part of the student government. "The Student Government Association will be holding senate seats for transfer students, so look out for that," said Marshman. "This is important because Coastal and Hick’s Dining Hall regularly are really busy with things they have to worry within the SGA."

On August 23, Coastal student Hans Garmon woke up in the middle of the night to find the back window of her car shattered.

"I thought they would at least have covered this by putting a piece of tape over to cover the window," said Garmon. "I thought they would at least have covered the window, put something on the cameras, so there was nothing they could do, but they would let me know."

"I wanted to be involved."

For any student, joining an organization can be intimidating. Marshman said that it is vital to get out and get involved with any kind of student involvement. "For freshman and transfers, it can be really scary to put yourself out there," said Marshman. "You have to force your self out of that shell and not be afraid of that, you'll be in it with an extra ten students. Many times transfers think that the CGS fee and welcome weekend events are just for first year students, but that is not the case. We want transfers to come out and get involved in any way they can."

Passionate about service

The Rotaract club on campus has packed over 500,000 meals in the past seven years. These meals were delivered locally and internationally through their passion of service.

Vice President of the Rotaract Club, Theresa Calabrese, said they have done a vast amount of service for the local, national, and international community.

Last year, Calabrese began as secretary for the club and has since moved up to vice president this year. She has a huge passion for service.

"Being a part of Rotaract is a humbling experience," said Calabrese. "It's very inspiring to be a part of something that builds a great attitude of service in the future generations and has such an impact on the local community where you can see the positive impact that you're making.

Rotaract was first established in 1969 in Charlotte, North Carolina as a youth program. In 2003, the youth program came to Coastal.

"Our organization has been the longest active Rotaract Club in the state of South Carolina with 15 members strong this semester," said Calabrese.

On November 6, the club members were in attendance for the Mod Mafia, a Feed the Hunger event. The club helped package 10,200 meals. These meals were then sent to Shepard's Table and Northern Iraq.

The club has been participating for the last five years and has assisted in packaging over a half million meals to be distributed locally, nationally, and internationally.

They participate in a long-standing project called Smart Snacks. It is modeled after the nationally known Backpack Buddy program. For the past seven years, they have worked with Waccamaw Elementary on the program.

The club breaks down bulk foods on Thursday nights and then prepare for delivery. The delivery takes place on Friday mornings.

"When we deliver, you can see the excitement on student's faces as we walk down the halls with bags of weekend meals," said Calabrese.

A few elementary school students often help deliver.

"I asked a student why she enjoyed volunteering with us and she explained that she knows other students look up to her and she wanted to set an example," said Calabrese. "She also said that she hoped to continue volunteering and helping in her community as she gets older. It was a heartwarming moment to realize that young children are looking up to the members of the Rotaract Club and aspiring to serve the community as we do.

It's very inspiring to be a part of something that builds a great attitude of service in the future generations."

Marty Daniels visits the Surf Turf

When many Coastal students here the key phrase 'Go Goats,' they automatically think of Blue Mountain State.

Blue Mountain State, also known as BMS, was a television show about the life of college football players. BMS depicted the crazy antics the Blue Mountain State football team would get into every week. Typically involving sex, drugs, and alcohol.

Ed Marinaro starred as head coach Marty Daniels on BMS. Marinaro played football for the Minnesota Vikings, New York Jets, and the Seattle Seahawks. In 1971, he was runner up to Pat Sullivan for the Heisman Trophy. His character is a favorite among many viewers from his comedic one-liners.

On November 7, Marinaro attended the Coastal football game to cheer on the Chanticleers. After the game, Marinaro gave a speech to the players. Coastal football players Hunter Floyd and Dallen Jones had the opportunity to meet Marinaro.

"It was just him being funny, talking like he would on the show," said Floyd. Floyd said everyone was going crazy when he was speaking to them.

"Some people didn't believe it was really him until he opened his mouth and started speaking," said Jones.

Jones said it was really cool to meet him, he's never met anybody famous before in person," said Jones. Jones said his friends back home who play football were jealous that he came to Coastal.

"That's very cool that we go somewhere that has a head coach with those connections," said Jones.

Floyd discussed the similarity Coastal football has to BMS.

"We do win a lot like they do on like Blue Mountain State, so it's kinda like a parallel to that," said Floyd.

BMS was cancelled after three seasons. From the success of a Kickstarter campaign, a film will be released entitled Blue Mountain State: The Rise of Thadland. A release date for the film has not been disclosed.

Floyd and Marinaro even told them to go out and see the film when it is released.

"He said he had a great time and he loved watching us play, he said he will definitely be back," said Floyd.
Victory for Coastal Carolina football

Coastal Carolina defeated Kennesaw State, 84 to 75 on November 18, marking Coastal's running advance from 8 to 4 in the Big South Conference. This was the first and last time Coastal would play Kennesaw State as Big South Conference members and once again showed that the team could handle any obstacle.

From the beginning of the first quarter, touchdowns were made by Blank and Mapp. Both running passers were made by Alex Ross. Coastal made its first touchdown, but failed to gain the field goal point making the score 13 to 6.

The second quarter was filled with another touchdown made by Blank. Chris Jones and Granger completed the field goal kicks. Both plays were completed passes by Ross.

The second half of the game had successful plays made by Chris Jones and Henderson. Granger kicked both touch downs gaining the field goal points. The game ended with an effective win, advancing Coastal's placement in the conference standings.

FROM WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

the Chanticleers finished in double digit scoring, led by Rachael Gregory who scored 10 of the 105 points. The Chanticleers forced 43 turnovers on the night and stole the ball 25 times.

Senior Guard Alexis Robinson was a machine on the hardwood Friday night. Robinson scored 16 points on 7 of 8 shooting to go with six rebounds, four steals, and two assists.

After road trips to Clemson (Nov. 19) and St. Francis (Nov. 28), the Coastal Carolina Women's team will return to Conway against Allen University on Sunday, November 29 at 2 p.m. in the HTC Center.
James Bond is back and better than ever. In the twenty-fourth installment of the British Spy Series, Bond, played by Daniel Craig, must dig deep into his past to overcome his newest villain, played by Christoph Waltz.

After his death in Spectre, Bond must go on an unofficial mission to Mexico to look into a missing woman. He then turns his attention to the new M's, played by Ralph Fiennes, and Walz. While Bond, along with his forces, tries to defeat the villain, he also works closely with M's forces to take down the villain.

The album will be how well the British Spy Series, Bond, played by Daniel Craig, will do next. The critics rate the album as a 6.116, with the highest score being 8 and the lowest score being 1.

The album, Made In the A.M., was released on September 22 as a promotional single for the new album. Made In the A.M. will feature 'Drag Me Down' and 'Perfect,' both of which have stayed in the iTunes top 10 list since their release dates.

One Direction has always delivered when it comes to hit singles. Whether it be an upbeat love song like 'Whatever Makes You Beautiful,' a slow dance melody like 'Little Things,' or a fast-paced pop song like 'What Makes You Beautiful,' the group has a hit for every occasion. Spectre

On March 25, One Direction announced that band member Zayn Malik had left the band around two months before the band made any public appearance. Before the announcement, the band stated they had made the decision to end their career without a final member.

At the end of July, One Direction released 'Drag Me Down,' the group's first single since Malik left, as a promotional single for their new album. Made In the A.M. The whole focus of the album will be low and One Direction will be without Malik.

Rivertown Bistro

Rivertown Bistro is located on 3rd avenue overlooking the downtown area and all its sights. The restaurant is open for lunch Tuesday through Saturday from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. The lunch menu is filled with specials for each day as well as sandwiches. The specials are price between $4 and $12. From chicken and pasta, to crab cakes, shrimp, and sushi, the lunch menu offers a certain day and the lunch specials.
