Driving in the fast lane with Brandon Brown

Jessica Wetzel

Brandon Brown, a sophomore at Coastal Carolina University, has been driving in the fast lane, literally.

Since Brown was about 10 years old, the thought of racing around a track and breaking the standard speed limits was an absolute thrill.

His passion for racing would ultimately lead him to an incredible future of full size stock car racing.

Brown is a part of the NASCAR Camping World Truck Series.

The NASCAR Camping World Truck Series is a pickup truck racing series owned and operated by the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing. It is also the only series in all of NASCAR to race modified production pickup trucks.

This year will be Brown’s third partial season in the series. Brown is also a part of the Brandonbilt Motorsports.

In the 2015 NASCAR Camping World Truck Series, Brown was ranked 40 out of 41 other racers.

One of Brown’s biggest accomplishments so far happened in 2010 when he won the Virginia State Rookie of the Year.

He also claimed the state championship that same year.

From 2007 to 2009, Brown won the National Championship and in 2010, Brown won for the state full size stock car championships.

Brown will be racing at the Daytona International Speedway in Florida on February 19.

For all the non-race driving fans, Daytona is known to hold the most popular races for the NASCAR series.

Brown is the only person at Coastal Carolina University known to be a race car driver and has proudly represented the University.

Brown said representing Coastal is important to him.

“It means a lot,” said Brown.

“I would have never expected another university to jump behind me like they did.”

Race car driving is not an NCAA sport or something widely practiced.

Towards the end of their college journey, students are writing initiatives to family and friends to join them in celebrating one of the best days of their lives.

They are ordering their cap and gown, getting appointments set up, and trying to get all the paperwork necessary done so they can get their diploma.

Some students go through all the steps to find out that they really did not graduate, even though they walked alongside their classmates. This is because they did not meet all the requirements needed from Coastal Carolina University to receive their diploma and actually graduate.

The Monday after the commencement ceremony is when grades are due from the professors, and it takes about a week to get them finalized.

University Registrar Chair, Dan Lawless, said the university works very hard to get all the paperwork completed.

“We pretty much work like drones the following week to make sure we get all the grades certified to make sure everything is in order,” he said.

If the student does not graduate, the academic department will review all the paperwork and grades to see if there is any way possible that the student could get a diploma.

This past week, I had the opportunity to attend the Women in Philanthropy and Leadership conference. I was really excited to attend because I have been yearning to feel inspired. I learned a ton of valuable information, but there is a few pieces of advice that really stuck out to me.

Advice Tip 1: Do not push away friends

My Assistant Editor, Katie Estabrook, attended an event on inner beauty. The main piece of advice she gave me from the session was that when women are busy, they push away their friends. This is extremely unhealthy for women to do this. In women, friends decrease stress levels almost as much as being active. Instead of pushing our friends away, we should be with them even more when we are stressed.

Advice Tip 2: Do not allow people to define you

Charlotte Beers did a discussion entitled “The X Factor: How Women Lead Differently.” During her talk, she discussed how you should not allow other people to define you. How we each need to make a path towards self-discovery. During this path, one should monitor their responses and reactions to others. From doing this, you can discover who you really are and who you want to become. You can see what you like and what you want to change. Most importantly, you can then create your own self-portrait of who you are.

Advice Tip 3: Being Committed

My favorite piece of advice came from Polly Letofsky. Her talk was about her walk across the world. Letofsky’s opinion on commitment was really inspiring to me. She said commitment is when you find a way and that not one was quitting an option for her. If you are really passionate about something, you will find a way no matter what obstacles may seem to be in front of you.

Advice Tip 4: Launching into Success

My biggest takeaway was a quote from Charlotte Beers. She stated that what people you forward, can lead you back. Sometimes what pushes you to be successful and chase your dreams, can sometimes lead you back. We all need to be aware of these things that can push us back when chasing our dreams.

Online Dating
Why You Should Give it a Chance

Briana Rivas
REPORTER | @brilaurenbela

Everyone has something similar to mind when they hear about online dating. Swiping left an excessive amount of times or making a lengthy profile that may or may not produce a load of creeps and crawlies are just a few lovable attributes of the social practice.

Although those mishaps happen, dating sites are still a lot of fun and a valid form of dating. Online dating has gotten a bad rap in recent years with the introduction of Tinder and other popular hook up sites. They do seem to cater to the romantically challenged hookup culture that is prevalent today.

However, it is actually a very successful business and a great way to meet people. Traditional ways of dating are at an all time low.

Results from a study by Match.com state that only 9% of women and 2% of men say they found a relationship at a bar or a club.

Dating sites can make it easier to center in on a certain demographic.

They also provide a chance for opportunities that may have never been possible without communication online first.

Creating a profile gives creates a way to match with someone who already shares similar interests and morals before having to take the time to investigate on the first date.

Junior graphic design major Jaid Martin and her boyfriend met online.

“My boyfriend and I met on OkCupid.com and have been happy for 8 months now,” said Martin. “You’ll receive more than several creepy messages, but you might get lucky.”

According to Match.com, one in five relationships begin online and one in six new marriages stem from online dating.

Safety is always a concern when dealing with meeting people face to face for the first time. Make sure to plan to meet in a public place.

Utilize using SnapChat to see live pictures of them making sure they are the person they say they are before meeting them.

According to TheChive.com, the number one complaint filed by users of Tinder was that their date in no way resembled their profile picture.

Be aware of catfishing and always let someone know where the date is being held.

Coastal’s comeback not enough against High Point

Ian Brooking
SPORTS

I t came down to the final possession between Coastal Carolina and High Point on Thursday, February 11 in the HTC Center as the Chanticleers came up short against rival High Point, 67-68.

It was a back-and-forth contest on Thursday between the Chanticleers and the Panthers. Coastal’s largest lead was in the first two minutes when the Chanticleers led 4-0. After High Point went on an 8-0 run to take the lead, the opposing side never gave that lead up.

Coastal’s 4-0 lead was its only, as well as its largest lead of the game. High Point had thought that they had put the Chanticleers away with a 12 point lead with less than five minutes to go. Coastal Carolina fought back in the second half, only to face a nine point deficit with six minutes to go in the second half.

In a game where High Point out-rebounded the Chanticleers, 43-36, Tristan Curtis came up big for Coastal, grabbing 13 of the team’s rebounds to go along with 8 points. Marcus Freeman returned to the court Thursday, after missing the last five games due to injury.

“I feel as if that if Marcus would return to the court Thursday, we would have been out there with us these last two home games, and wouldn’t have been as close as they were,” said Elijah Wilson.

Wilson took the responsibility of taking the potential game winning shot, but failed after heavy guarding from High Point players.

Shivaughn Wiggins led all Coastal scorers with 18 points. Marcus Freeman was right behind him with 12 points.

“It felt really good being back out there,” said Freeman. “I feel a little bitter though after that one. I really wanted to get that win.”

After High Point, only two home games remain this season. Coastal has a tough road schedule with games at Winthrop and the season finale at rival UNC-Asheville.

“It’s very important to get wins in these last two home games,” said Wiggins. “It’s a conference as tight as the Big South, every win matters whether you are home or away.”

Coach Ellis praised both teams’ tenacity and never say die spirit.

“It felt as if it was a championship game,” said Coach Ellis. “Both teams never gave up. We had the ball in our hands to make the final play count. We had two chances. First chance is a jump ball to us and second chance the ball is blocked. We have to give them credit.”

The loss ends Coastal Carolina’s seven game winning streak and pushed them to fourth in the Big South.
Chris Brown delivered another sensational album called Royalty, named after his daughter who he found out he had earlier last year. The cover of the album is a beautiful picture of him and his baby girl in black and white.

The third song on the album, “Wrist,” is layered over an interesting backbeat as he talks about being “strapped” in expensive watches. The fifth song on the album, “Lonely,” has a very sultry feel as he sings about how liquor makes one feel sexy.

Another interesting song on this album is Chris Brown’s rendition of “Sexy and I Know It” by LMFAO, which he calls “This is What Love Does.” This is a great modern version of this song that is both very sexy and sultry.

It was learnt that Chris Brown named this album after his daughter. Most of the songs on the album refer to sex and women, which is not what one thinks when looking at a picture of a father and daughter. Overall, Chris Brown created a great piece of art through his new album, Royalty.

April O’Neill, played by Megan Fox, is a reporter who wants more out of her journalistic career. O’Neill tries to push a story about a clan who goes around the city to do evil actions.

After her story idea is laughed at and shut down by her editor, she is asked to host the news station. O’Neill refuses to give up on the story and continues doing research. She finds out that the turtle they kidnap her for questioning. Master Splinter immediately knows that she is their hero.

Master Splinter serves as a father figure throughout the movie, raising the Teenage Mutant Ninja turtles and teaching them the ninja moves they are known for.

The director includes flashbacks to show how the ninja turtles and master splinter were first created and found. The plot overall was pretty basic, and could have had a little bit more thought put into it.

This movie is rated PG-13.

Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles 2: Out of the Shadows is set to be released in June 2016.
