#TOOBUKU

BUKU Music and Arts Festival, located in New Orleans Louisiana, succeeded in surrounding the attendees with good vibes, great music and a loving, open environment.

On March 11 and 12, festival goers flocked to Mardi Gras World to listen and dance to music that ranged from hip-hop to EDM.

The festival hosted 60 artists, including Kid Cudi, Future, Pretty Lights, Sam Feld, CHVRCHES, Datsik and many others.

The wide array of music was not the only thing that set BUKU apart from other festivals.

New Orleans art and culture was intertwined throughout the entire experience.

"Pop-up" performances by breakdancers, drummers and violinists as well as live graffiti art by local artists are a few of the unique characteristics of the festival.

Festival attendee, Alyssa Frye, said that the "pop-up" performances created variety and were her favorite part of BUKU.

"My favorite memory about BUKU would have to be when my friend and I were walking in between stages trying to get to the next music set and we randomly stumbled upon two street artist playing string instruments," said Frye. "Our faces instantly lit up and we started dancing in the middle of the festival with strangers. It was so awesome to hear raw and live string instruments being played in an unexpected spot at the festival. We had been listening to a lot of mixed and electronic made music, so it was a nice surprise to hear and appreciate live pop up street performances."

The festival utilizes every part of Mardi Gras World, including the floats, giving the attendee an exclusive behind the scenes look.

"Blue Mind" theory shows many health benefits of the ocean

Author and marine biologist Wallace J. Nichols has conducted years of research to show how being on, under or near the ocean is beneficial to one’s health.

In his book, "Blue Mind" he describes why humans are drawn to the ocean, how the brain is affected and how it affects an overall general feeling of well being.

Many studies in the past focused on how the brain is affected by different mediums. From music to television, these are all things that have been researched.

However, a study on the effect of the rhythms of the ocean

The Chanticleer. Mosteller covered how to be engaged with someone feels about that topic they are discussing and keep eye contact when you are talking to someone.
Mosteller covered how to be engaged with people by constantly communicating with them.
You can do this by asking them questions. For example, as Miss South Carolina 2013, she has had to go into a room full of people where she does not know anyone. By asking them questions, she was able to learn information and keep the conversation going.

Lastly, Mosteller went over having good posture. At the Miss. American pageant, one contestant said how having good posture is your best accessory because it is free and you will automatically look better.

After you have these five skills of leadership covered, you need to beware of the “four D’s” that can hold you back from being an adequate leader. They are drinking, drugs, dating, and dumb friends. If you look out for these four D’s and not let them distract you, you can then focus on what really matters and not waste your time or your life.
For example, if you are having trouble with dumb friends, you should think of the phrase her coach used to say, “show me your friends and I’ll show you your future.”

Throughout the whole seminar, Mosteller radiated positivity and happiness. Mosteller said she stays positive from thinking about what she can control. For example, if she is in an uncomfortable situation, she will critic the problem.

Most importantly, Mosteller discussed her mantra, “Go Higher.” You can “Go Higher” by not comparing yourself to others. Mosteller said there is no like you out there and God made you unique.
If you feel yourself feeling defeated or confused,
you should think of these two words.

Mosteller’s final tip of advice was that you should “do what scares you and give yourself grace.”

MISS SOUTH CAROLINA 2013, BROOKE MOSTELLER, DID A SEMINAR TITLED “LEADER SHEEP: HOW I SPELL LEADERSHIP” ON MARCH 3.

SHEEPS acronym stands for smile, handshake, eye contact, engage, and posture.
She talked about how a smile will make you appear more welcoming and friendly. A firm handshake will help you gain professionalism and respect from others.
Mosteller went over how important it is to keep eye contact when you are talking to someone.
It is much more meaningful to keep eye contact when you are talking to someone rather than looking at your phone because the eyes are the window to someone’s soul. You can tell the emotion of how someone feels about that topic they are discussing and keep eye contact. You can tell the emotion of how someone feels about that topic they are discussing my keeping eye contact.

The correlation between a college education and marriage

Jeremy Razook  Reporter/Columnist

A college education could be beneficial to a new union according to a study performed by the National Center for Health Statistics. The research finds that women and men that receive a higher education have a greater probability of experiencing a lasting marriage, compared with those that own a high school diploma or less. The study estimates that 78% of women who have obtained their bachelor's degree have a likely marriage life of at least 20 years for their first marriage, while just 40% of women with a high school degree or less could see their first marriage last just as long. About 65% of men with a bachelor's degree could see their first marriage last 20 years or more versus just 50% of men with a high school diploma or less. A college degree is a desirable trait in a mate, said Sean Pierce, a student counselor at Coastal Carolina University's Counseling Services. "People want and need someone who can help manage life in a responsible and successful way." The report, reported by the Pew Research Center, uses a derivation of marital history data constructed by the National Survey of Family Growth that included a sampling of women and men aged 15-44 (22-44 for educational comparisons).

In addition, a 2011 study by the Pew Research Center recognized that 78% of adults who hold college degrees had ever been married compared to 69% of those without a high school diploma, thus furthering the disparity associating education and marriage in the U.S. Pierce said that possessing mutual goals and interests as well as differing interests are certainly beneficial to any successful marriage. Financial stability also plays an important role when seeking a first time spouse, while possessing a college degree works as an investment tool for future earnings explained Pierce. The Pew report also states that college educated adults marry later in life, an equally important element to an enduring wedlock. Generally, those who married older have a better chance at successful marriage," said Pierce.

According to research performed by the National Marriage Project at the University of Virginia, in 2011 a college graduate's average salary was 84% higher than that of a high school graduate. Yet, this does not just exhibit a financial disparity. It's also affiliated with age. "For those who aspire to high-income and high-status occupations, training, and apprenticeship can stretch well into the mid-twenties and even thirties," said Pierce.

And for a woman with a college education, marrying later may indicate a bigger income.

For the first time in the 2016 context, South Carolina saw more millennials participating in the state's Republican primary than they did in the Democratic one. According to a press release sent out by The Center for Information and Research on Civic Learning and Engagement, or CIRCLE, it shows that overall 18% of South Carolinians youth took to the polls in the "First in the South" primary. Secretary Hillary Clinton was the winner of the South Carolina primary for the Democratic side, although people ages 17-29 preferred former Senator Sanders 54% to 46% over Clinton. Those numbers are a far smaller margin of support among youth than "Sanders enjoyed in previous 2016 primaries," stated CIRCLE. Studies show that the young Republicans' vote choice also differed from those of older generations. According to CIRCLE, "Youth were less likely to support Donald Trump than older voters, ' 26% compared to 33% of all primary voters." Secretary Ted Cruz was the top pick for the young Republican with 28%. Overall, nearly 130,000 young people took their voice to the polls in the South Carolina primary. The Republican Primary was held on Saturday February 20, saw an estimated 74,000 voters. Whereas, the Democratic primary, which happened on Saturday February 27, drew in roughly 55,000 young people. "Once again, young voters turned out in large numbers in South Carolina, particularly on the Republican side, and expressed a different candidate preference than older voters," said Kei Kawashima-Ginsberg, Director of CIRCLE. "Young people are participating and, potentially, gearing up to shape this election." With the first Super Tuesday data also in the books, youth participation showed the eagerness millennials have to influence both parties, but especially on the Republican side. "In the Republican primaries and caucuses, young people continued to participate in record numbers," according to a release from CIRCLE. "In particular, youth participation in the Republican contests increased dramatically in Texas and Virginia." Statistics from CIRCLE showed that the younger Republican supported voter supported Senator Ted Cruz and Marco Rubio, while many were still not as fond of Donald Trump as the older voters. On the Democratic side, young people supported Senator Bernie Sanders over Secretary Hillary Clinton during Super Tuesday. The statistics gathered from Sanders' support rang es from more than 89% in Vermont and Oklahoma, to only 38% in Alabama, which was the one state in which young people actually favored Clinton over Sanders. "On Super Tuesday, young voters demonstrated that they are paying close attention and want to be heard," said Kawashima-Ginsberg. "While young Republican are voting in truly record shattering numbers, Democratic youth are continuing to show their enthusiasm by increasing their vote share in these primaries." The next chance young Democratic voters have to cast their ballot are in the Democratic Caucuses for Alaska, Hawaii, and Washington on March 26. The next chance for the young Republicans will be on April 5 for the Wisconsin Presidential Primary and Spring Election. This will allow both parties to participate on the same day. On the brain had yet to be conducted.

In 2011, Nichols decided to change that by bringing together a group of people from varying professions including neuroscientists, artists, urban planners, and even real estate agents. The study researched the ways in which the mind, body, and souls are affected by water. The study found that the water images evoked both positive emotions and a longer attention span. Adena Leibman, Ocean and Coastal Policy Advisor for U.S. Senator Sheldon Whitehouse, has spent much of her life in the ocean in relationship with the ocean. She agrees that the ocean indeed has a tranquil effect. "It is all but inestimable, and there's something simultaneously awe-inspiring and soothing about that," said Leibman. "It's hard to get worked up about the little things when you realize you're kind of a little thing yourself. But if so, since I've dedicated my career to the oceans, it's also inspiring from the sense that time near sea is so potentially, gearing up to protect it." Another relevant study concluded that Australians in New South Wales who lived closer to the ocean were 27 percent more likely to have higher activity levels and 38 percent more likely to participate in regular vigorous activity. Water related activities were also found to reduce the symptoms of PTSD. A study conducted by researchers at the University of South Maine, the University of Utah, and the Salt Lake City Veterans administration found improvements in all the areas monitored after veterans were taken on a four day trip exploring rivers in wilderness locations. PTSD symptoms and perceptual stress decreased overall by 19 percent and physical stress symptoms went down by 28 percent. Sleep quality improved. Depression and anxiety lessened significantly. Nichols explained that surfing is especially soothing. "Surfers probably exhibit more Blue Mind than anyone," said Nichols. "They are attuned to the water, used to watching it carefully for hours on end, reading its changes, looking for the smallest indication that the next wave will be, if not the perfect wave, at least rideable." Anna Troy, a local surfer, is a real life example of how the ocean can heal. Since receiving her first surfboard at 9 years old, she has been inseparable with it and the waves. "Sitting on a surfboard with your thoughts is one of the best meditations I think there is," said Troy. "When I am paddling on my surfboard during heavy surf it can be one of the most mentally challenging things that I do. My mind is the only thing I can hear cheering me on. Once you are there it is one of the best feelings of relief!" Nichols' extensive research, discussed in detail in his book, shows the true healing power of water including additional studies of its effect on specific disorders like addiction and Autism. Nichols also said that one's connection to the water can improve creativity. "Water's infinite variety and sometimes terrifying depth has an unparalleled inspirational force when it comes to the physical world," said Nichols. For more in depth information on Nichols' studies read his book, "Blue Mind: The Surprising Science That Shows How Being Near, In, On, or Under Water Can Make You Happier, Healthier, More Connected, and Better at What You Do."

This year marks the final season of Coastal Carolina football for 22 seniors.

Jabari Bothwell, Devin Brown, Kenny Daniels, De'Angelo Henderson, and Bruce Mapp are just a few of the star-studded seniors that will walk on the field for the final time come Senior Day in November.

"It's definitely going to be emotional," said Bruce Mapp. "When that final game is over, I really don't know how I'll react."

Mapp finished last season with 521 rushing yards, passing 2,000 receiving yards in his career. He only needs nine receptions to reach 100 receptions.

Since Coastal is in a transition period from FCS to FBS, there is no postseason play for Coastal Carolina in the 2016 season. While many fans and players are upset that Coastal will not be able to participate in the FCS Playoffs, there is now a new goal for the 2016 season.

"A goal we have set is to finish the season undefeated," said Devin Brown. "We would be the first team in Coastal Carolina history to do it."

Devin Brown returned two kickoffs last season and is two away from breaking the FCS return record.

"It would be nice to get that," said Brown. "I could honestly be an added bonus to my career. At the end of the day, I'm out here to better myself as a person and help my team out in whatever way I can."

Coastal fans were glad to hear when De'Angelo Henderson decided to return for his senior year.

Henderson rushed for over 1,300 yards and had a touchdown in each game of 2015. Henderson needs only 521 rushing yards to reach the 4,000-yard mark in his career at Coastal Carolina.

"One thing I find pretty amazing is that I'm about only less than 300 yards to get 1,000 career receiving yards," said Henderson. "As a running back, that's special. However, at the end of the day, I'm more focused on what I can do to help my team be successful and win games."

Henderson graduated in the spring of 2015 with a degree in recreation and sports management. He is currently working on his second degree in communications. However, Henderson feels that he has unfinished business he needs to take care of.

"My legacy at Coastal Carolina isn't complete yet," said Henderson. "I still have things I need to accomplish, some goals I need to achieve."

Mapp graduated in December and is attending graduate school for business.

Coach Joe Moglia has been a huge impact in the players' lives, both on and off the field.

The A Man (BAM) program has been very beneficial to players who are undecided or are not sure on what they want to do after a life of football.

The success of players like Josh Norman and Mike Tolbert is definitely hope for not only the seniors who hope to hear their name be called at the draft in April, but future recruits and incoming freshmen.

"It shows that we are as hungry as the players in the FBS level," said Mapp. "When critics say that we won't make it because we are from an FCS school, that is just more fuel to our fire."

The new season will also bring in a new defensive coordinator.

Mickey Matthews's last job was at James Madison University, where he worked for 15 years, winning a national title in 2004.

"Coastal Carolina has great promise in their future and I'm glad I get to be a part of it," said Mathews. "We have a great group of guys that I am excited to work with." Jabari Bothwell, a communication major, was made a walk on in the spring of 2013.

"That has been my favorite memory so far at Coastal Carolina," said Daniels. "It was a huge ac-complishment, especially for someone who wasn't heavily recruited out of high school."

With the amount of records and the milestones this group of seniors has accomplished, there is no doubt that Coastal Carolina fans will be in for a treat in the 2016 season. There is already a growing legacy that these men have built and it will continue to grow in the upcoming seasons.

Each player feels that while they have some work left to do, the memories they have made and the people they have met has molded them into the men and players they are now.

bass, lined the Mississippi River, each with it's own unique vibe.

One stage in particular stood out to Frye.

"The Back Alley stage stole my heart," said Frye. "Every artist threw and I believe it had a lot to do with the genre of music which was Progressive House. The energy and vibes at this stage were amazing and always positive. It was definitely more secluded and intimate and the artists were able to connect with the crowd.

There also was a beautiful view of the Greater New Orleans bridge." Festival staff were obviously dedicated to providing the best BUKU experience for the attendees.

"BUK creatures" roamed the festival in full costume and photography staff regularly took photos that were then automatically uploaded to the attendees linked social media accounts.

The loving and friendly environment created by attendees and artists created an intimate feeling that is unmatched by any other festival.

Artists regularly came out into the crowd after the set was finished to speak and interact with fans.

Frye stressed that everyone should attend BUKU.

"I would attend this festival again and definitely recommend to any festival goer to try at least once," said Frye. "My overall experience was amazing. By far the best festival I've attended be-cause of the positive energy, creativity, variety, and vibes. It was TOO BUKU!"
Coastal Carolina defeated Mercer on Tuesday to get its first win since it was a play-in game. According to GoCCUSports.com, Head Coach Cliff Ellis said it was a hard fought win against a very good New Hampshire team. "When you get to this point in the season, every game is a tough game," said Ellis. "You have to dig deep and figure the other team out." It was a close contest in the first half, with New Hampshire leading at the break, 28-25. Coastal made a run at the start of the second half to help get a seven point lead thanks to Elijah Wilson, who finished with 19 points on the night. "Jaylen and Elijah came up big for us again tonight," said Ellis. "Our defense got us stops and we capitalized on the offensive end. It was a great team effort!" Jaylen Shaw finished with 16 points on the night, shooting 50 percent from a 3-point range.

Jaylen Shaw finished with 16 points on the night, shooting 50 percent from a 3-point range.

Coastal Carolina defeated Mercer on Tuesday to get its first win since it was a play-in game. According to GoCCUSports.com, Head Coach Cliff Ellis said it was a hard fought win against a very good New Hampshire team. "When you get to this point in the season, every game is a tough game," said Ellis. "You have to dig deep and figure the other team out." It was a close contest in the first half, with New Hampshire leading at the break, 28-25. Coastal Carolina started the season with a 20 plus win season. I’m glad that we’re able to play and keep it at home.”

The Chanticleers will be back in action on Wednesday night at 7 p.m. at the HTC Center to host a CIT Quarterfinal matchup.

FROM CIT HISTORY

“We are very grateful to be playing in the postseason,” said junior guard Elijah Wilson. “Many teams aren’t playing at this time of the year so it’s a real blessing to us and for us to play in front of our home crowd.”

Coastal Carolina defeated Mercer on Tuesday to get its first postseason win in program history. Elijah Wilson led the way with 18 points to guide the Chanticleers to a 65-57 victory at the HTC Center. Coastal has made four NCAA tournament appearances and two appearances in the National Invitation Tournament (NIT), yet lost in all six games. Coastal’s 1991 win over Jackson State did not count as an NCAA Tournament win since it was a play-in game.

It was a tough game to start for Coastal and sealed the victory. Shaw finished with 16 points on the night.

Coastal Carolina Baseball wins weekend series against Longwood

Jessica Wetzler
REPORTER | @jwetzler

Coastal Carolina traveled to Farmville, Virginia to play against the Longwood Lancers. The team would go on to win the weekend series with a 11-2 victory and improve their 13-9 overall and 2-1 in the Big South.

Coastal Carolina started the series on March 18 with a double hitter planned out for the day. The first game started at 2 p.m. and the second game started at 6 p.m.

During the first inning both teams started off swinging by making plays to keep the score 0-0. This cycle continued into the fourth inning, until Coastal Carolina made its first run.

G.K. Young scored off of Chadwick’s double, leaving Coastal Carolina in the lead. Longwood would follow with three runs to home, leaving the score 3-1 by the end of the fourth.

The game started to heat up with Coastal Carolina making another run at the top of the sixth, but would fall short when Longwood added two more runs by the bottom of the eighth.

Coastal Carolina started the weekend series with a 2-1 win.

Shortly after the first game, Coastal Carolina played for a second game of the day.

Longwood made their first run during the bottom of the third, trailing behind Coastal Carolina.

Young scored again off of Woodall Jr. single at the top of the fourth. Parrrett scored off of Young’s double to left center. Longwood would follow with a second run at the bottom of the fifth.

At the top of the ninth, Coastal made three successful runs to win the game. Paz made a home run down left field. Remillard and Cooke scored off of a wild pitch.

Coastal Carolina defeated Longwood 7-2, ending the double hitter.
Taylor Swift introduces herself to the world of pop with her fifth studio album, 1989. The girl who used to sing about "Tim McGraw" and leaving townrops on her guitar is now "shaking off" her country roots and entering the pop genre.

"Shake It Off" was the first single off this album, released in August, two months before the album release.

"Shake It Off" was nominated for three Grammys in 2015, but lost to Sam Smith's "Stay with Me" in two of those categories. The second single, "Blank Space," which was released in November 2014, was nominated for Record of the Year and Song of the Year at the 2015 Grammy Awards. While those two lost, Swift’s fifth album did pick up the Grammy for Album of the Year.

Swift is the first woman to win Album of the Year twice as a leading artist. Taylor Swift took a risk with releasing 1989 as a leading artist. Critics believed that she should have stayed in country music and that pop was going to ruin her career. "1989" is a great blend of rock and pop. "Blank Space" is a blend of pop and perfection. "Welcome to New York" is a blend of pop and perfection. "Blank Space," which was released in November 2014, is the most successful song for Swift. The tour grossed over $93 million dollars of just ticket sales.

There are several sites in this record that everyone should listen to. The rhythmic and pulsating opening song "Welcome to New York" is a blend of pop and perfection. "Blank Space" and "Welcome to New York" are a great blend of rock and pop.

While 1989 was a huge success for Swift, it was a risk for her career. Not only was 1989 Swift's most successful album with three Grammy nominations to go along with its nominations, the album did pick up the Grammy for Album of the Year.

A musician with a creative soul. Overall, this album is well worthy of the accolades it has been awarded. This is Swift's fifth studio album since she came on the music scene almost ten years ago. Taylor Swift is at the peak of her career and is not finished yet.

Creed tells the story of the former heavyweight champion Rocky Balboa as he trains the son of Apollo Creed, Adonis Johnson, is played by Michael B. Jordan, who has a love for boxing, but has been trying to keep his name under wraps. Johnson has a fear that if anyone finds out who his father is, he will not have earned his name himself.

Balboa is hesitating at first to train Johnson because he does not know if he wants to get involved with someone again to that extent. However, after finding out that Johnson is Creed's son, something magical happens. A relationship between Balboa and Johnson is meant to flourish.

The viewer can tell that Adonis Johnson really put in a lot of work outside of the film. He had to keep in shape for the role he has to play. The viewer can feel a bit of character and passion through the Johnson character.
